$8,135 collected so far

United Fund hits two-thirds mark in fund-raising effort

by LYNN ASINOF

The Wheeling-Buffalo Grove United Fund has passed the two-thirds mark for its efforts to raise $12,000 for this year's fund-raising campaign.

United Fund Pres. James Bauer said $8,135 has been raised so far, and said he expects the $12,000 goal to be reached before the end of the campaign. "I'm real pleased that this early in the campaign we're two-thirds of the way to our goal," he said.

Originally, the United Fund campaign was going to concentrate on local business and industry this year. Bauer said, however, response from this segment of the community has been weak.

"The areas that we're having trouble with are the areas we were hoping to have success with, and that's the industrial and business areas of the campaign," he said.

UNITED Fund workers sent more than 600 letters to local business and industry. Bauer said in response to these letters the United Fund raised only $220, "and that barely covered the postage."

In comparison, Bauer said the teachers in the local school districts have already contributed about $3,200. "The teachers have been just great in responding. In fact they're carrying the load," Bauer said. "They realize that all of the money they give there stays in the communities."

The United Fund president said he did not know why business and industry have been so slow to respond to this year's campaign. "They just haven't come across," he said.

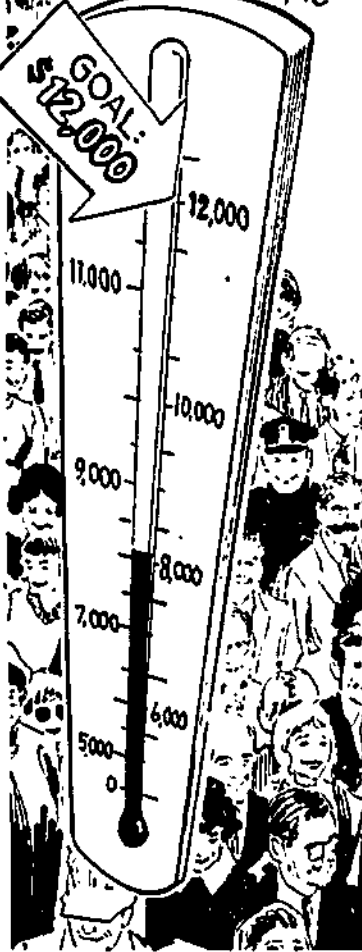

Bauer added, however, that efforts are continuing to stimulate some interest in the campaign in these sectors of the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove community. For example, a presentation was recently made to the Wheeling Chamber of Commerce.

THE RESIDENTIAL United Fund campaign is going well, according to Bauer. He said 1,300 letters were sent to local residents, resulting in donations of $1,973. "We're over 35 per cent ahead of where we were last year in the residential campaign," he said.

Bauer attributed the success of the residential campaign to the growth of the village. He said the United Fund has been able to collect money from residents in developments that weren't in existence during last year's campaign. "Last year we didn't get anything from Tahoe Village because it wasn't there," he said.

Wheeling-Buffalo Grove UNITED FUND

"People Helping People"

Several special projects have also brought substantial funds to this year's drive. A McDonald's Day, sponsored by the Wheeling drive-in on Dundee Road, raised $1,500. The United Fund also raised an additional $750 through a rock concert at Wheeling High School.

ACCORDING TO BAUER, the United Fund is also looking towards contributions from both villages.

The United Fund president said he thinks the $12,000 goal will be met if interest in the business and industrial areas. "We think if we get any kind of stimulation in those areas we should be able to make the goal," he said.

In addition to the $12,000 local goal, the United Fund is expecting to get over $14,000 from the metropolitan area, bringing the total amount to over $26,000.

Money raised by the United Fund will be used to support nine local agencies. They are: Omni-House; Youth Services Bureau; Boy Scouts; Girl Scouts; Campfire Girls; Northwest Suburban Homemakers Service; Clearbrook Center for the Retarded; Countryside Center for the Handicapped; Northwest Mental Health Center; and the Salvation Army Family Counseling Center.

Last year, the fund fell only $30 short of its $10,000 goal. Bauer said this year's goal was increased $2,000 because of "the increasing need in the community."

Correction

Yesterday's Herald incorrectly stated that James Hinkle, 46, 227 Wolf Rd., Prospect Heights, was charged by Wheeling police with two traffic violations after a three-car accident at the intersection of Camp McDonald and Wolf roads.

Wheeling police yesterday said a second driver, Jean M. Smith, 43, of 1905 Seneca Ln., Mount Prospect, was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident and failure to obey a traffic device. The incorrect information came from the police department's records section.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is a story of the mood of the Midwest and the way a presidential candidate is received in these times of scandal and disruption in national politics. It is a story of everyday people and how they feel about the times and how they feel about Charles Percy from Illinois, who is running for President three years before the election in the heartland of America, where presidential elections are won and lost.

by DOUG RAY

IOWA'S INTERSTATE 80 — If there is a middle American, he is a man like Big Larry Noble from Muscatine, Iowa, driver of this black Cadillac limousine cruising past the corn and soybean fields of the Midwest.

"Cool enough for you, Senator?" Big Larry glanced slightly to his right and behind him where the Senator was sitting with two reporters.

"Just perfect," Percy answered. Big Larry smiled. He looked straight ahead across the steering wheel of the car while the air conditioner pumped recycled air over us. It was Thursday afternoon and it must have been near 80. Outside there was a trace of smog, but there never is in these parts. No Sears Tower or Hancock or tollways or brightened street corners lit up like Christmas trees.

This is the Midwest, home of the middle American, the silent majority — the people of the people who elect Presidents.

BIG LARRY grabs another Camel from the dashboard, lights it and takes a long, heavy draw. He doesn't say much, especially to strangers and even to get the basic information about the car and why he is driving, you have to wring it out of him.

It seems the car belongs to Larry's father-in-law who is in the sand and gravel business. And the last time one of the family's gas guzzlers hit the political trail — at least for presidential politics — was in 1964. Barry Goldwater was back there small time with his ankles crossed.

"It wasn't very good luck was it," Larry grinned. He has a hard mean look though he is friendly enough. Size him up and you can tell right off he is the kind of guy you don't talk back to unless you tip the scales at about 200 with most of your weight in the shoulders.

"What are the people like around here?" I asked him. "You know, the politics?"

"I'd say conservative Republican, most of them," he said shrugging.

In a few minutes the black limo would arrive at the Iowa campus. Big Larry pushed on, his brown cowboy boots with the pointed toes pressed firmly on the footboard.

The state trooper in the lead car took a quick right onto another, route and the caravan of Oldsmobiles and the limo responded in order. We moved up the highway through red traffic lights to keep the head and the tail together.

THIS WILL BE the second stop for the Percy party. We began the day before noon, in Moline, Ill., at the headquarters of John Deere and Co., the firm known for its green farm tractors. The Senator spoke to businessmen, mayors and presented Deere Chairman William Hewitt with an award for a movie the company made. We spent more than an hour there, ending when Percy jumped aboard a John Deere snowmobile for a ride across the massive company properties.

Now we are rolling again, toward Iowa City, in the spirit of a Cadillac whistlestop campaign. In the back seat, Percy is getting the third degree on everything from his friends in Washington to his physical fitness program and a stationary bicycle he uses to keep the pounds off.

Percy asked how much time before arrival. Just a few minutes. He cut off the interview as we approached the city limits. Last minute cramming before the speech. He would be lecturing children of the plains country, boys who had actually milked cows, rosy cheeked farmer's daughters, students from Des Moines, even Chicago and New York; all who somehow found themselves together on the campus of rolling hills and narrow streets with the sweet smell of Indian summer and a river that cuts the campus in two.

We got out of the car. Percy stayed inside, then emerged and walked briskly up the steps of the Iowa Memorial Union. "Hi, I'm Chuck Percy." He shook hands with the desk clerk and went upstairs for a press conference.

DOWN IN THE auditorium the students waited, about 800 of them. All the seats were taken and many kids stood in the back.

"Why are there so many people here today?" I asked a

Rovin' the presidential trails with Chuck Percy

petite red-haired girl who was passing out leaflets at the door. "Is this a convocation?" She looked at me quizzically; her eyebrows sagged. "Do they make these people come for college credit?"

She said no, that this is just the first in a series of guest speakers on campus, that yes there are more kids here than expected.

A senior, one of the campus Young Republicans who says after graduation he plans to work for the party, had a wide smile spread across his face. "I was afraid things wouldn't work out . . . I was a nervous wreck. In '71, McGovern got about 1,500 when he came here. Last year, Tower (Senator John Tower of Texas) got 200 people . . . this is what I call a great turnout," he said.

The kids were anxious. As Percy walked on stage, their attention went with him. He began his talk. It was on the Soviet-U.S. relations and he urged the Soviets to open up to the concept of free speech.

There is only one group upset with the Senator's appearance. And that is a limp effort by the Young Americans for Freedom who like Ronald Reagan better as a presidential candidate. They pasted bumper stickers on the walls, but most were torn down later by students leaving the union. There are only 50 YAF members on campus.

PERCY WENT ON. "We merely ask that the USSR live up to its own constitution which guarantees freedom of speech." I walked outside. Not because the speech was uninteresting but because it is a beautiful day, too nice to stay indoors even to listen to the man who three years from now might have the presidential seal in front of him when he talks.

Sun splashes a shine over the school and students are carrying their jackets under their arms. Parked outside the union are pickup trucks. Across the street dozens of girls are battling a ball around with paddles. The black limousine in front is as out of place as the tall lean Iowa state trooper standing next to it.

Walking alone, between the athletic field and the union, is a girl dressed in blue jeans and sweater. She carries a tennis racket in one hand and a book entitled "Power Politics" in the other. She is small, bespectacled of the wire-rim variety.

She says her name is Patricia Zimmerman, 18, a freshman from Westchester, Ill., and that she is heading for the auditorium for the Percy speech, but a little behind schedule.

Right away she volunteers that she hates Richard Nixon. Who does she like? Really nobody, she said. Then why is she going to hear Percy? "Because he may capture the '76 nomination" was her answer.

PATRICIA ZIMMERMAN says she is rather typical of college kids today. She is concerned but not activist, functioning in sort of a transition period between what was and something else. An Allende rally a few days ago brought out the usual people you find at that kind of thing. Even Patricia Zimmerman was there, but she wasn't impressed.

"It seemed like they were using an excuse to protest and it didn't work out," she said.

"So what are students in the heartland of America concerned about right now?"

"I'd say politics and the university," she said quickly. "There is this intramural athletic field and a day-care center that face destruction by a new road, and believe it or not the

A limited number of tickets are still available for the Wheeling American Legion's Eggs and Issues Breakfast Nov. 10 which will feature U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson, the man responsible for the recent investigations into corruption in the Chicago area.

Tony Parella, chairman of the breakfast, said tickets are now at a premium. He said most of the 150 available tickets have now been sold. The breakfast will begin at 8:30 a.m. at the Union Hotel, 124 S. Milwaukee Ave.

Interest in the breakfast has been stimulated by the current investigation that has called a number of Wheeling officials before a federal grand jury. The investigation is focusing on alleged building and zoning shakedowns in Wheeling.

Thompson, however, has said he expects to limit his remarks to his office and its operations. "What I'll be talking about is the operation of our office, what we're engaged in and general remarks about public service in general," he said when contacted. The topic of his speech will be "Integrity and Public Service."

THE U.S. ATTORNEY last week announced the first indictments resulting from the series of investigations into suburban corruption. Those indictments affected former officials in Hoffman Estates, and may be discussed by Thompson at the breakfast.

James Thompson

Gene Sackett, past commander of the Michael R. Blanchfield American Legion Post 1968, said Thompson was the post's first choice for a speaker at the breakfast.

"We think he is a rising star on the law enforcement horizon," Sackett said. "What we try to do each year is pick a speaker who would appeal to the local businessman."

Donations for the breakfast are $3. Persons interested in ticket information can call 541-4280 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays.

Woman, 32, to police: I was assaulted 26 hours ago

A 32-year-old Wheeling woman motorist was assaulted this week on Kensington Road near the Soo Line R.R. tracks in Mount Prospect.

Police said the woman, whose identity is being withheld because of threats made by the assailant, had become lost about 8 p.m. Sunday when looking for Camp McDonald Road.

The woman was westbound on Kensington Road at the railroad tracks when she saw a vehicle behind her with "flashing amber lights on the dash." She told police that as a relatively new Illinois resident she thought the light meant it was an undercover police vehicle.

POLICE SAID the woman stopped and then got out of her car when requested by the man who left the vehicle with the flashing lights. The man wore no uniform the woman told police.

Once out of her car, the man allegedly grabbed it and began barking and running around. The man, allegedly pushed the woman away, cutting her on the neck and arm. He then fled.

The man, according to police, is white, about 40 years old, 6 foot tall, 175 pounds and of medium build.

Police said the woman waited 26 hours before reporting the incident because she said she was initially unsure where it had happened.

Rep. Samuel
H. Young

Abner
Mikva

You can do it two ways...
...you can decide to run for office after much hoopla and agony, as Ab 'n' Sam do...

A campaign replay of 1972 is beginning in the 10th Congressional District.

U. S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-10th, will announce his candidacy for election to a second term Friday. Young has called a 4 p.m. press conference in Skokie.

And, Young's 1972 opponent, former U. S. Rep. Abner Mikva, is waiting in the wings to announce his candidacy. Mikva, who said Wednesday that "I'm still thinking it over," is expected to begin his campaign in mid-November.

Filing begins Dec. 10.

Young's formal reelection drive will start Nov. 8 at a 6:30 p.m. fundraising dinner in Skokie. Gen. Alexander M. Haig, chief adviser to President Richard Nixon, will be speaker.

Haig's appearance could indicate White House importance of the seat that Young won by about 7,000 votes from Mikva two years ago.

Mikva denied Wednesday a Chicago newspaper report that he will resign the state Ethics Board next week to start his campaign. "I have no intention of doing anything like that next week," he told The Herald.

Mikva, a Chicago attorney, said he has hired an aide to "do my scheduling and speechifying." Mikva has appeared recently throughout the Northwest suburbs and said he "is encouraged in many ways to run again."

"I have set no timetable yet. But, I have not taken the complete cure to get out of politics either. I enjoyed being a Congressman. I would like to be a Congressman again," he said.

Rep. Aaron
Jaffe

...or you can do it the way Jaffe does it

On the other hand, State Rep. Aaron Jaffe, D-4th, made his announcement this way...

"Political campaign time is coming, and it is traditional for all office seekers to come forth and declare their candidacies. Inasmuch as I am elected for a two-year term with a primary preceding the election by eight months, it often appears to me that my campaign never ends and that I am always running for office. Never being hesitant about my intention to run, it almost seems ludicrous for me to ask the press to meet with me so that I may declare my candidacy.

"Therefore, wishing to somewhat conform with tradition and at the same time feeling reticent to burden the media, I am calling a non-press conference at 10 a.m. tomorrow morning at my Springfield office. I shall not attend and it is my desire that the media do likewise.

"I shall, however, be a candidate for reelection for state representative in the 4th Legislative District."

Carey to appeal denial for special grand jury

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey will appeal to the Illinois Supreme Court this week a decision that denied formation of a special grand jury to probe political corruption.

In a ruling based on a 1931 grand jury report, Circuit Court Chief Criminal Judge Joseph A. Power denied Carey's month-old request for the grand jury.

"It is unfair to inconvenience and impose on our fellow citizens... 18 months on a special grand jury when the task can be performed by a regular grand jury on extended 30-day intervals," Power said in a written opinion.

The judge then denied requests by Kenneth Gillis, chief of Carey's criminal appellate division, for a second county grand jury with an 18-month life or a second grand jury with a 30-day life.

THE COUNTY currently has one grand jury that hears 25 felony cases a day and lacks time for an extended probe of political corruption, Carey has said.

Carey requested the grand jury Oct. 4 in a petition that proposed investigation of Chicago Mayor Richard Daley's order that shifted city insurance to a firm that employed the mayor's son, campaign contributions to Gov. Daniel Walker and Chicago police involvement in narcotics and gambling.

Power, a Democrat, is a former law associate of Daley.

THE 1931 GRAND jury — empaneled to investigate what Power said was the "so-called alliance with organized crime and politics" — recommended that "in the future, no special grand juries be empaneled except in cases of dire emergency."

"We are convinced from our own experience that a special grand jury for the purpose of making an investigation is uneconomic, unscientific, archaic and utterly futile in practice," the grand jury report states.

State statute would allow six grand juries, based on current county population.

At a press conference following the decision, the Republican state's attorney said that "we have amply demonstrated the need for it. The public is aware that if the truth of the many political scandals that have threatened the vitality of the community is to be uncovered, we must be allowed this tool.

Petroleum prices can be hiked monthly

The Cost of Living Council has handed down new price control regulations that will allow all segments of the petroleum industry — from refiner to gas station — to boost prices once a month to keep up with higher costs of doing business. The rules, which take effect today, placed no limit on how far prices may rise.

Social security bill before House panel

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday worked on legislation to increase social security benefits despite testimony it would take six months to program the increase into benefit checks. Quick work on the bill is expected in an effort to overcome liberal efforts to attach a tax reform plan to the bill which would hike the ceiling on the public debt.

The Sloan-Kettering Institute for Cancer Research in New York yesterday said one researcher reported positive results in treating mice with the controversial drug Laetrile, but urged caution in interpreting the findings. A spokesman said effects on mice have no bearing on possible use on humans and much experimentation is needed.

White House memo on combatting news

Prompted by President Nixon's irritation with the news media, top White House aides early in his administration discussed ways to use government regulatory powers to make his displeasure known to news organizations, according to a memo made public yesterday. The memorandum, from Jeb Stuart Magruder to then White House Chief of Staff H. R. Haldeman, urged 5 steps be taken to combat coverage, including a monitoring system of TV networks set up by the FCC.

2 lottery bills to full Senate

Two lottery bills, one favored by Gov. Daniel Walker and the other by Republicans, were both sent to the full Senate yesterday by its revenue committee for further consideration. A major difference between the two is who runs the lottery. Walker's version would create a state lottery commission. The Republican plan gives the Department of Revenue responsibility for mechanics while a control board would make sure it is run cleanly.

Chicago 7 action: 'hearsay,' 'smokescreen'

Atty. William Kunstler argued yesterday that many charges against the Chicago Seven and their lawyers are based on "hearsay" entered in the court record by Judge Julius Hoffman who heard the 1969-70 conspiracy trial. Prosecutor Royal Martin said Kunstler's attack on the 23,000-page transcript was "a smokescreen to mollify the conduct of the defendants."

Two tapes 'never existed'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House announced Wednesday it discovered last weekend that two key Watergate tapes which President Nixon had promised to surrender to U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica never actually existed.

Sirica, informed of the startling development Tuesday by White House lawyer J. Fred Buzhardt, called a special court hearing to announce the non-existence of the tapes as a "matter of public record." They were among nine tapes sought by former special prosecutor Archibald Cox.

The missing tapes involved a four-minute telephone conversation between Nixon and former campaign director John N. Mitchell on June 20, 1972 — three days after the Watergate break-in — and an hour-long meeting between the President and former White House counsel John W. Dean III on April 15, 1973 — two weeks before Nixon fired Dean.

White House spokesman Gerald L. Warren said Buzhardt had aides carry out a lengthy search for the tapes to be turned over to Sirica, but finally determined on Saturday "that these two conversations could not be found." Buzhardt told Sirica Tuesday the tapes did not exist.

After a Secret Service investigation, Warren said, it was determined that the June 20 conversation between Nixon and Mitchell took place from an extension telephone at the White House that was not hooked into the tape-recording system.

As for the April 15 Nixon-Dean meeting in the President's office, Warren said, the recorder had run out of tape and an alternative recorder was not activated until the next day.

Although Nixon has listened to "a number of the tapes" on several occasions, Warren said, "the President obviously never heard the two non-existent tapes and obviously never asked for them," or their absence would have been discovered much earlier.

Warren also disclosed that the Watergate tapes are now stored somewhere in the residential quarters of the White House. A Secret Service agent testified at Sirica's hearing earlier Wednesday that the tapes were periodically collected from locked cabinets in the White House and transferred to a locked storage space in the Executive Office Building across the street.

J. Fred Buzhardt

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., said the revelation "dramatically escalates the problem of this administration's credibility."

Even Buzhardt told reporters after the hearing that "I don't know" whether the public would believe the White House.

Dean has told Senate investigators he informed Nixon at their April 15 meeting that he had begun to cooperate with federal prosecutors, and that the Watergate coverup could not be contained indefinitely.

'Dirty tricks' costs set at $110,000

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate investigators charged Wednesday that at least $110,000 of President Nixon's campaign funds were spent on political dirty tricks — not counting the costs of the Watergate bugging.

Watergate committee investigators presented a chart alleging that Nixon campaign operatives had 25 paid agents fanned out across the country to work against Democratic presidential hopefuls.

Committee lawyer Mark Lakritz said the $110,000 spent on spying and disruption of Democratic campaigns may have been carried out by as many as 60 persons.

In addition to the dirty tricks, previous testimony before the committee indicated that about $250,000 was spent on the Watergate break-in and related activities, and another $400,000 in the effort to cover up the scandal.

Bert Bernhard, Sen. Edmund S. Mus-kie's 1972 campaign manager, also testified that the White House made political use of FBI telephone taps of two Muskie workers.

SENATE INVESTIGATORS said the clandestine efforts to undermine Nixon's 1972 reelection foes included financial aid to American Nazi Party workers to woo voters away from the American Independent Party.

The committee disclosed it had found that $1,200 in Nixon campaign funds went to Nazi workers in Southern California as part of a $10,000 effort to keep the conservative AIP off the ballot.

As the public hearings continued, committee investigators conducted behind-the-scenes inquiries into Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo and his financial dealings with Nixon.

The committee is investigating, among other things, Rebozo's handling of a $100,000 contribution to Nixon by billionaire Howard Hughes. A decision on calling Rebozo as a witness has been postponed until next week while investigators track down more leads.

IN OTHER Watergate-related developments:

• Sen. Edward J. Gurney, R-Fla., a member of the Senate Watergate committee, said Wednesday the government is investigating allegations that builders secretly contributed more than $300,000 to him and expected favors from the Federal Housing Administration in return. Neither Gurney nor the Justice Department would make any comment "until the investigation is concluded."

• Congressmen from both parties expressed doubts Wednesday that several proposals to recreate the office of special prosecutor would survive a constitutional test. Although there appeared to be a consensus in the House and Senate in favor of an independent prosecutor, there was wide disagreement on how the independence would be assured.

Ford confirmation hearing begins

From Herald news services

Rep. Gerald R. Ford's road to the vice presidency begins today when the Senate Rules Committee opens its public hearing into Ford's nomination to succeed the resigned Spiro T. Agnew.

Ford, a 60-year-old Michigan Republican with 25 years in Congress, will be the first witness in the nationally-televised hearing. (Local coverage will be provided today beginning at 9 a.m. on Channel 7, under a rotating agreement whereby CBS-TV and NBC-TV also will take turns as testimony proceeds.)

On the eve of the hearing, committee chairman Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., said the extensive FBI investigation of Ford has raised questions about his past which must be answered.

Cannon, speaking to reporters after a two-hour briefing for members of his committee on the FBI report, said among the allegations are that Ford traded political favors for political contributions. Ford certainly will be questioned about allegations by a Washington lobbyist — Robert Winter — Berger — that Ford never repaid loans of $15,000 made over a three-year period, a claim Ford already has adamantly denied.

The ranking Republican on the committee, Kentucky's Marlow W. Cook, differed with Cannon, saying he had found nothing in the FBI reports that he would not want to read about himself.

The FBI report, in rough form, ran some 1,700 typewritten pages, and was compiled by 350 FBI agents in 33 offices conducting 1,000 interviews in what has been called the most exhaustive investigation of an individual in history.

Cannon stressed the committee had to keep in mind it wasn't just considering a nominee for vice president, but "may be confirming a president."

Despite Cannon's comments, indications remained that Congress might complete the confirmation process by Thanksgiving. Cannon said his committee would make its recommendation well before then, and House Speaker Carl Albert said he heard final House action would be taken by then.

Saxbe, Nixon confer on AG position

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. William B. Saxbe of Ohio, one of the administration's sharpest critics among Republicans, met with President Nixon for an hour Wednesday and emerged to say he was "relatively sure" he would be named attorney general.

Saxbe, 57, who is retiring from the Senate at the end of his first term next January, told reporters in the White House driveway he had received assurances during the meeting that Nixon's actions relating to the Watergate scandal "were proper."

He indicated that only routine background checks remained before official announcement of his nomination to succeed Elliot L. Richardson, who resigned along with Deputy Attorney General William D. Ruckelshaus on Oct. 20 when both refused to obey Nixon's order to fire special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox.

"I'm relatively sure," Saxbe said, when asked if he was getting the job. But he added: "I don't want to be presumptuous and say I've got it in the bag."

Saxbe said he had no candidate in mind for Cox' successor as special prosecutor, an appointment that Acting Attorney General Robert H. Bork is supposed to announce this week.

Saxbe disclosed later that he had returned to the White House about an hour after the conference with Nixon, this time to meet with Bork. Asked why he

Kleindienst: threatened to resign over ITT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst said Wednesday he threatened to resign in 1971, forcing President Nixon to permit him to appeal an antitrust case involving the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. (ITT).

But Kleindienst denied he had committed perjury when he told the Senate Judiciary Committee during his confirmation hearings in the spring of 1972 that no one in the White House had pressured him over the ITT matter.

Kleindienst said committee members had questioned him not about Nixon but about alleged attempts by Peter Flanagan of the White House staff to pressure him to hold off an appeal.

Kleindienst issued a statement on the ITT case after Archibald Cox, the ousted Watergate special prosecutor, acknowledged before the Senate Judiciary Committee Tuesday that Kleindienst had told him about receiving a telephone call from Nixon in 1971 about the ITT case.

Kleindienst, in a statement issued through his attorney, Herbert J. Miller, said former White House domestic adviser John D. Ehrlichman had called him on April 19, 1971, "and stated that the President directed me not to file the appeal in the Grinnell case." At the time, the Justice Department was challenging ITT's proposed acquisition of the Grinnell Corp., a plumbing equipment company.

That was the last day in which that appeal could be taken," Kleindienst said.

"I informed him that we had determined to take that appeal, and that he should so inform the President. Minutes later, the President called me and, without any discussion, ordered me to drop the appeal."

"Immediately thereafter, I sent word to the President that if he persisted in that direction I would be compelled to submit my resignation."

was willing to work with the President after such strong criticism of him, he said:

"I have been around here five years, bitching about what I would do if I had the opportunity. All at once, they give me the ball. Should I throw it away? It is not something you just walk away from. I may strike out."

He said Nixon assured him of independence should he take the job, and that he looked forward to the challenge of restoring morale at the Justice Department.

Nixon meets Mrs. Meir today on Mideast policy

by United Press International
Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir will meet with President Nixon at the White House today to seek "answers and clarifications" of U.S. policy in the Middle East.

Before her departure from Tel Aviv Wednesday, Mrs. Meir said she would give the deadlocked prisoner of war issue top priority in her discussions with Nixon and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger during her four-day visit.

Even as Mrs. Meir flew to the United States, Egypt was demanding that Israeli forces on the West Bank of the Suez Canal pull back to positions they held before the U.S. cease-fire of Oct. 22 before there is any exchange of prisoners. Egypt was backed by its ally, Soviet Russia.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said the Egyptian army was ready to wipe out Israeli forces on the West Bank if they did not pull back to their Oct. 22 positions.

But an Israeli military spokesman Wednesday reaffirmed the nation's stand that the agreement with Egypt to exchange wounded prisoners of war did not call for such a pullback of Israeli troops.

Israeli government sources said Mrs. Meir would try to convince President Nixon not to give in to Soviet and Egyptian demands for such an Israeli withdrawal, which would free 20,000 Egyptian 3rd Army troops trapped on the East Bank of the canal.

Speaking at a Cairo news conference, Sadat made an Israeli pull-back the condition for any further progress toward a Middle East settlement. He said he was "restraining" his military men in awaiting the outcome of the Washington talks.

Sadat himself announced Kissinger would be arriving in Cairo for talks next week. An official Cairo announcement said the secretary of state's visit would take place Nov. 7.

Kissinger is scheduled to visit other Middle East capitals in a week of talks before he goes on to Peking for a visit delayed by the Middle East war.

Meanwhile, The Netherlands — coping with a cutoff of oil from Arab nations — announced a partial ban on Sunday driving.

Politicians debate 3-member districts

One of the opening skirmishes in what could develop into a major issue in the 1974 election year was staged in Arlington Heights Tuesday night between State Rep. Richard A. Mugallan, D-Palatine, and Douglas F. Stevenson, treasurer of the Committee for Legislative Reform.

At issue is a proposal to revamp the method by which Illinoisans have elected their state representatives since Civil War days, substituting the election of one representative from each legislative district for the present method of sending three representatives from each district to Springfield, and eliminating cumulative voting.

Stevenson, a Chicago attorney who lives in Medinah in DuPage County, argued for the creation of single-member districts, which he said would require each member of the House of Representatives to be responsive to the will of the majority of his constituents. Stevenson appeared as a substitute for State Rep. Eugene F. Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights.

Mugallan advocated retention of the three-member districts. He declared that single-member districts would produce legislators responsible only to the dominant political party in their districts.

Their audience was made up mostly of members of the League of Women Voters from chapters in Arlington Heights, Palatine, Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates and Barrington.

THE COMMITTEE on Legislative Reform is hoping to recruit League members to circulate petitions throughout the state in an effort to place the question of single-member districts on a referendum ballot in November, 1974.

The state League supported single-member districts in 1969, when the question was made part of the referendum on the 1970 state constitution. The League, however, is reevaluating its 1969 position, in light of heavy minority support for three-member districts in the 1969 organization vote, and because of considerable changes in membership during the last four years.

Stevenson said a major benefit of single-member district would be the reduction of the size of the House of Representatives from 177 to 118 members, which he said would allow the legislature to conduct more meaningful debate and more orderly business.

More importantly, he said single-member districts would make each representative directly accountable to the majority of the voters and would eliminate the election of representatives responsible only to a small minority of voters.

SPEAKING OF minority-party representatives, Stevenson said: "When they get to Springfield, they are not committed to the majority because they don't need a majority to get elected."

Stevenson declared that the minority-party representatives in the current legislature were elected with an average of only 22.76 per cent of the vote in their districts.

Mugallan called that figure misleading, however, pointing out that minority party members elected in districts considered "safe" for one party or the other had a total vote of 34 per cent of the votes cast in those districts, a ratio which he called "virtually perfect."

WHEN STEVENSON pointed out that Mugallan, a freshman legislator from the dominantly Republican 2nd District, was elected with only 20 per cent of the total vote, Mugallan retorted that the losing Democratic candidate drew 15 per cent of the vote. The total Democratic vote of 35 per cent, he said, was an accurate reflection of Democratic strength in the district.

Mugallan presented figures showing that 44 of the 59 legislative districts are effectively dominated by one or the other of the two major parties. He said that splitting these districts into two single-member districts without minority representation would give the dominant party organizations absolute control over the choice of representatives.

"When you talk about single-member districts, you're talking party districts," he declared.

Mugallan said the cumulative voting system, in which a voter may cast three votes for one candidate, presented the only avenue for a candidate to be nominated or elected without the sanction of the "party bosses."

MUGALLAN also argued that in "safe" districts, where the dominant party easily elects two state representative and the state senator, as well as congressmen, cumulative voting provides the only avenue for minority members to find "one place where the minority can get a voice in state government."

Stevenson called Mugallan's arguments for minority representatives "an elitist approach."

"It doesn't mean much for the minority member who has already been elected to say, 'I should be there because I am a nice guy,'" Stevenson declared. He said that minority members need only to secure their party's nomination to be assured of reelection.

'Cumulative voting' in Illinois

Illinois is the only state in the United States that elects its House of Representatives from multi-member districts, using "cumulative voting."

Under this system, three representatives are elected in each of the state's 59 legislative districts. In voting for these representatives, voters are allowed three votes, which they may cast in the following manner: one vote each for three candidates; one and one-half votes each for two candidates, or three votes ("a bullet") for one candidate.

With each party nominating two candidates for the three representative posts in the district, the result is the election of two legislators from one party and a third from the opposition party.

Opponents of this system are seeking to change this system, splitting each of the 59 legislative districts in half for the purpose of electing representatives, eliminating cumulative voting, and electing one representative from each district.

Fire dept. unity plan expected soon

A special committee studying fire protection in Buffalo Grove is expected tonight to begin drafting its recommendations for the formation of a municipal department.

The committee was appointed several months ago after an independent consulting firm suggested a municipal fire department for the village.

At present, homes north of Checker Road are served by the Long Grove Rural Fire Protection District, while the remaining homes are served by the Buffalo Grove Fire Department Inc., which is employed by the Wheeling Township Rural Fire Protection District. A portion of the village which has not been developed is in the Vernon Township Rural Fire Protection District.

COMMITTEE members said last week they had finished their research and were ready to begin drafting specific recommendations. The committee plans to submit its report to the village board prior to Nov. 12. At that time trustees will consider the recommendations in a workshop session.

Each member of the committee has been asked to submit a report with his specific recommendations. The committee will then consider all points and draft the final report.

The committee is expected to recommend the village disannex from the Long Grove and Vernon districts into the Wheeling district, thus putting the village under one fire department. Committee members have called the move a "step-by-step" to a municipal department.

OFFICIALS FROM the Vernon district have told the committee they do not oppose the move "in concept." Before making a commitment, however, officials said they want to consider how much tax revenue will be lost to the district if the area is disannexed.

Long Grove district officials have said they will not oppose disannexation to form a municipal department, but will resist attempts to give their area to the Wheeling district. Village officials have said although they would prefer going to a municipal department right away, it is not financially feasible. Village Mgr. Daniel Larson said it will be at least two years before the village will have tax revenues adequate to support a village department.

Committee members said they favor putting the entire village under the Wheeling district because it has offered the village "an attractive package."

THE WHEELING district has said it will protect the area until the village can afford a municipal department. When the village decides to make the switch, district officials said all equipment and facilities being used to protect the area will be turned over to the village.

The only cost to the village would be outstanding debts for vehicles, fire stations and equipment.

In addition to bringing the village under one fire department, a transfer to the Wheeling district would guarantee paramedic service to all residents. At present Long Grove has one trained paramedic, but no paramedic equipment. In order to have a recognized paramedic program, the department must be able to guarantee paramedic service 24 hours a day.

Tonight's meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd.

Stay thin—police should not be hired by the pound

I am going to take the police test that will be held in a few months here. I'm 21 and am 5 feet 2 inches. My weight is about 135, which is about 20 pounds underweight according to the police standards to pass the physical.

Can you give me a diet to help me put these pounds on in time for the examination?

If your statement is correct I am inclined to think that the police standards should be changed rather than fattening you up for heart and vascular disease. You are probably more fit physically right now than you would ever be by overeating and getting fat. Twenty more pounds for you, by eating, would mean you would be FAT.

The best solution is to try to build up your muscles. This means that you should begin an exercise program for this. Running, jogging, and various endurance exercises are great for the heart and circulation — and I think they are quite good for men who have the responsibility policemen do, but they won't put much meat on your bones.

Weight training on any exercise that requires strength builds muscles. The strong muscle contraction stimulates the production of creatine, a chemical substance involved in stimulating the growth of muscles. For years trainers have known that weights and strong isometric type exercises stimulated muscular growth. Now we know the chemistry that is involved.

AS LONG AS YOU are on a good diet, which includes adequate amounts of protein found in meats, milk, poultry and fish, and your diet contains enough calories, the exercise effort will help you grow muscles.

I am assuming that you have no underlying medical problems that contribute to being underweight. There are a few of these, such as diabetes and tuberculosis. Tuberculosis is the real reason for outdated standards like those of the police examination. It was the most common cause of death in the early 1900s and was often associated with weight loss.

Now that heart and vascular disease are by far our biggest problem and dwarfs the problems once created by tuberculosis, these outmoded standards should be changed. Fat policemen are "sitting ducks" for heart attacks, and encouraging men to gain fat is not in their best interest.

OF COURSE, the police department is interested in your being heavy enough to handle yourself in your job. What is needed here again is strength and ability, not pounds of blubber on the scales. Policemen should not be hired by the pound.

You probably should go to your local YMCA or any other facility where there may be weight training equipment and take a regular course designed to build up your muscle mass. I don't know if you can make it before the exam or not, but surely there are such things as waivers for outstanding, well-motivated young men.

Veterans' News

The Veterans Administration has reminded veterans that traveling or taking up residence abroad imposes certain limitations on benefits the agency can provide.

One example is medical care. Only veterans with service-connected disabilities can get VA medical care overseas. Before going abroad a veteran should obtain from the VA office which has his medical record a statement of his condition, the agency emphasized.

This statement should be presented to the American embassy or consular office in the host country when application is made for VA medical benefits.

In an emergency, however, an eligible veteran is entitled to VA-paid hospitalization if he notifies the embassy or consular office within 72 hours of hospitalization. Notification of out-patient treatment must be made within 15 days.

In the Republic of the Philippines, hospital care is available to both veterans with service-connected disabilities and wartime veterans with nonservice-connected disabilities at Veterans Memorial Hospital.

BUT VETERANS with nonservice-connected disabilities are eligible for treatment on the same basis as in the continental United States — only if space is available, and they are unable to defray expenses. Retired servicemen are eligible for medical benefits at military hospitals and clinics in foreign countries.

VA officials also said GI home loans are not available to veterans living in foreign countries, but this restriction does not apply to veterans living in Puerto Rico. Veterans living outside the United States (except in "blocked" countries) may receive compensation and pension checks, however.

But to insure prompt receipt of checks, veterans traveling or living in foreign countries should, if possible, maintain stateside mailing addresses.

Eligible veterans may attend foreign schools, but only if the VA approves them and the courses lead to degrees.

It's not magic—just computers—at air control center

AIR TRAFFIC controllers monitor movement of aircraft in a 109,000 square-mile area of the Midwest, including O'Hare Airport, through banks of radar screens such as these. New equipment scheduled for use by February will relieve controllers of some of the stress they now encounter during peak traffic hours by taking over some functions automatically.

Controllers breathe easier; new radar does more than just 'blip'

It helps to believe in magic when you see the new computerized radar control panels at the Chicago Air Route Traffic Control center in Aurora.

The panels, scheduled to go into regular use late this year or early next, are a generation ahead of the familiar, sweeping radar scope with only little blips of light to identify the aircraft it is tracking.

The advanced system allows a controller to automatically identify a blip with essential information merely by moving a spot of light and punching a few keys.

When the blip is identified, the controller knows from the numbers that appear on the screen the identity of the aircraft, how fast it is traveling, the plane's altitude and other related information.

The system is the product of a two-year federal program to install the computerized control panels nationwide. The Aurora facility is expected to be the first to go into actual operation, according to Chicago Center Chief Sid Wugaller.

The most important byproduct of the system is that it reduces stress on the controllers, who are responsible for air traffic control around the clock, good weather or bad. Each blip on the crowded screens represents a planeload of passengers, and their lives depend on the skill of the controllers.

The Aurora center is one of the world's busiest flight-control facilities, but its controllers are prepared. They receive four years of training and, with the new system, also have to take classes in computer operations.

CAREFUL ATTENTION to detail is necessary to coordinate the efforts of the men who monitor and control aircraft from the Chicago Air Route Traffic Control Center in Aurora. This is half of the equipment the center at Aurora uses, and each man is responsible for a particular section of airspace in the center's domain. The facility is part of a national network of the Federal Aviation Administration.

The Almanac

Today is Thursday, Nov. 1, the 305th day of 1973 with 60 to follow. The moon is approaching its first quarter. The morning star is Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Scorpio. J. W. Packard, American inventor, manufacturer and philanthropist, was born Nov. 1, 1863.

On this day in history:

In 1918, the Hapsburg monarchy of Austria-Hungary was dissolved. Vienna became the capital of Austria and Budapest the capital of Hungary. In 1950, two Puerto Rican nationalists tried to force their way into Blair House in Washington in an attempt to assassinate President Harry Truman.

Percy hits the Big Trail...

kids are up in arms about the whole thing. This is the University of Iowa 1973, where hundreds of kids are listening to the words of Charles Percy, the senior senator from Illinois.

Percy now is answering questions from the audience. Some of his answers get polite applause.

There is one incident, a shouting match between Percy and a young man in the audience who asked about homosexual rights. Percy's answer wasn't as positive as the curly-haired man wanted. They yelled at each other. Percy finally told him that he didn't know much about homosexuals and that there are more pressing issues of the day. He asked the man to come up to the microphone and tell everyone about homosexuals. That ended the outburst. They later shook hands.

QUERIES RANGED from amnesty (Percy doesn't favor it until all those missing in action are accounted for) to whether he can beat Ted Kennedy (he thinks he can).

Many of the kids left smiling. "He's pretty good, I'm surprised," said a girl who was walking out behind him.

And then he was on his way to the big limousine to make ready for the next speech, the next stop, the next group from the Midwest. He admits that if he can't get their vote, if a Republican senator from Illinois can't make these Iowans respond he has no more a chance of being president than did Barry Goldwater.

Outside, Big Larry is standing by the car. He looks over the students filling out of the building and shakes his head. "I guess I'm getting old, but I can't stand these long hairs." He looked at me and turned away.

"Their hair is no longer than mine. You should have seen the hair when it was really long," I told him.

He looked at me again and laughed. He slid into the driver's seat. The Senator got in. And the convoy was on its way to Muscatine, Iowa, where this day of campaigning will end.

AS IT TURNS out, this trip is a feeler of the cross section of the Midwest: Moline, with its heavy Democratic labor vote; the University of Iowa, with its newly enfranchised college vote; and Muscatine, where the people are mostly conservative Republicans.

The road to Muscatine is the narrowest of any traveled today. It winds into town by a low-income housing project. The streets are tree lined, and you pass row upon row of white houses that all seem to have porches. About 23,000 people live here.

Muscatine used to be the Pearl Button Capital of the world, according to a member of the city council, but then they started making the pearl buttons overseas.

Now the town is known for its motorcycles, the councilman said. He has two of them himself. Why a town full of two cycle families? "Maybe there's nothing else to do," he said.

When we stopped in Muscatine, Percy rested for awhile. He then walked from Hotel Muscatine on Mississippi Drive to the Elks Lodge down the street. Percy does a lot of walking. He's a physical fitness buff, and they say he doesn't even like to take elevators.

THERE IS SOMETHING about this Elks Club that makes it like so many others in small towns of the corn belt. Maybe because it sits next to the Muscatine Feed and Supply store. Or the shiny linoleum floors or an old wooden bar in a separate room where the drinks are being served. Or maybe it is the people gathered here. People like Jim Nepple, a young lawyer who used to live in Chicago's suburbs but couldn't take the hour drive to work.

The get-together was billed as a fund-raiser for Iowa Republicans but it was really a big party. A U.S. senator was in town and everybody who was anybody was there and besides, quipped someone in the crowd, "The movie hasn't changed in a while."

Percy called himself the Republican senator representing Iowa because the two senators from that state are Democrats. So the gathering looked to him for answers. They wanted to know when Sam Irwin was going to be muzzled, and whether Percy was running for President and the energy crisis, etc.

It was dark now and there was one last stop — Muscatine Community College — a tiny school that looks like a savings and loan building, plain and box-like.

More than 100 Iowans attended this one. Preceding Percy on stage was the college's chorus of boys and girls dressed in blue and white blazers and singing the Battle Hymn of the Republic.

FOR THIS, the final speech, Chuck Percy appeared almost as fresh as he had earlier in Moline. He boomed out the words with the same authority.

Chuck Percy turned 54 that week and the students at Muscatine Community College had a cake prepared for him and a white sweatshirt with the college name in red letters.

He threw aside his suit coat and pulled the sweatshirt over his head. He looked 20 years younger. Percy sliced his cake, while the audience stood in line for a piece.

He was more jubilant than we had seen him all day. He kissed three teen-agers and the wife of the local state representative.

In a moment, he would be gone into the night, again in the Cadillac and again Larry would be driving; this time to Muscatine Airport where a plane awaits for a trip back to Washington. Percy will be at work on a special Congressional project by 10 a.m.

THIS MONTH or next, there will be plans for another trip like this one, but to another part of the country where Percy is less well known. His aides say he probably will be going to the coasts to test the political waters there.

But how did he do in his own stomping grounds of the Midwest? How was he accepted on the Iowa feeler? What did they think of him?

The other day, I telephoned Larry at the Northern Gravel Co. where he works and asked him.

"Oh, he's a politician," Larry answered, "but I think he's sincere. Too bad he wasn't nominated for vice president after Agnew quit."

A telephone conversation with Jim Nepple drew this response: "I was more than impressed. The older people welcomed him and the young people liked him. He's a fine politician... who came across very well."

Then I called Patricia Zimmerman. She thought about the questions for a second or two and said: "I thought he did a really good job. He said some real good things, but I don't necessarily agree with him... but as far as Republicans go, he would be a good choice for them."

Conserve on heat —wear a sweater—

by LEA TONKIN

Why wait for the biggies in Washington and Springfield to launch their new energy conservation program. You can combine a flair for fashion and fuel economy by taking up the sweater look this fall.

Sweaters are already coming on strong as essentials of the mix-and-match effect in a variety of styles, patterns and colors. And we've all heard those suggestions for cutting down on energy consumption by turning down the thermostat a few degrees.

We'd greatly prefer a casual sweater rather than the long underwear which Interior Sec. Rogers Morton suggested as a fuel conservation measure.

On a larger scale, according to U.S. Treasury calculations the country could save approximately 3 million barrels of oil a day by implementing conservation programs. The U.S. currently uses 17 million barrels a day. Six million barrels of this amount are imported, of which 1.1 million barrels come directly from North Africa and the Middle East, 2.7 million from Caribbean and Latin America and 1.4 million from Canada.

William E. Simon, deputy Secretary of the Treasury, and chairman of the President's Oil Policy Committee, says the change in lifestyles would be required in an all-out conservation drive. A gradual 10 per cent cutback in commercial and industrial energy use could be accomplished over 18 months, he says.

For individual consumers, lowering thermostat settings is one good measure. Adding insulation to homes, maintaining heating systems and using humidifiers are other conservation musts.

New book on environment

EVERYTHING YOU ALWAYS wanted to know about environmental quality: It's featured in a new paperback book recently issued by the U.S. Council on Environmental Quality. The council's fourth annual report may be obtained for $4.50 by writing the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Ask for Stock No. 4111-00020.

Lakes meeting Nov. 27-29

COMING UP: The Great Lakes Basin Commission quarterly meeting and Shoreland Management Conference will be held Nov. 27-29 at the Hilton Inn, Detroit. The commission reports it is providing assistance to the Federal Regional Council for its work on the natural resources and shoreland damage reduction task forces.

Finance cleanup programs

FINANCING CLEANUP programs may be easier through the assistance of the Illinois Pollution Control Financing Authority. Applications are being accepted for the financing of acquisitions or construction of pollution control facilities.

The authority can issue industrial revenue bonds to be repaid by lease or other means. For additional information, contact Joshua Margolis, State of Illinois Building, Room 2100, 160 N. LaSalle St., Chicago 60601.

13-cent airmail issue expected Nov. 16

The U.S. Postal Service, preparing for requested increases in postage rates, will issue a new 13-cent domestic-rate airmail stamp in ceremonies Nov. 16 at New York City.

The proposed across-the-board increases will take temporary effect Jan. 5 if the Postal Rate Commission has not issued its decision before that time.

The new airmail stamp, designed by Nelson Grupp of New York City, will be released this month in sheet form only. Coil and booklet forms will be issued Dec. 27 at Chicago.

The new stamps will not be available in local post offices or through the Philatelic Sales Unit until after the first of the year.

Sheet stamps will be printed in panes of 100. The booklets will consist of two panes of five 13-cent stamps, each to sell for $1.50. Coils will be issued in rolls of 100, 500 and 3,000.

Collectors desiring first-day cancellations of the sheet stamp should send their requests to Airmail Stamp, Postmaster, New York, N.Y. 10001, enclosing the proper remittance which is the cost of the stamps to be affixed.

Requests for first day cancellations for the coil and booklet stamps should be sent to Airmail Stamps, Postmaster, Chicago, Ill. 60607.

NASA WILL accept mail from the public to be canceled on Saturday, Nov. 10, when Skylab IV is scheduled for launch. In case of a delay in liftoff, mail will be held and then cancelled with the new date.

Covers should be sent to Special Philatelic Cancellation, IS-DOC-M, NASA, Kennedy Space Center, Fla. 32899. There is a limit of five covers per person.

Mail orders will be accepted by the Postal Service in Houston. Covers should be addressed to Space Cancellation, Main Post Office Window Service, Houston, Tex. 77013. The five-cover-per-person limit applies here also.

THERE HAS been no response from the U.S. Postal Service regarding procedures used in servicing requests for first-day cancellations.

For want of a better explanation, I assume that requests for first-day cancellations are held until they are all processed and then released at the same time.

I AM LOOKING into special cancellations serviced by the U.S. Coast Guard in connection with Operation Deep Freeze. As soon as that information is available,

I will pass it along.

THE CANADIAN Post Office will release four Christmas stamps — 6-cent, 8-cent, 10-cent and 15-cent denominations — on Nov. 7.

Requests for first day cancellations should go to the Philatelic Service, Canada Post Office, Ottawa, Ont., Canada K1A 0B5. Your remittance must be in Canadian funds and include a five-cent service charge for each cover. Specify in pencil which stamp you wish affixed on the upper right corner of your cover.

THE NORTHWEST Suburban Stamp Club's next meeting, an A.P.S. slide presentation on the stamps of Yugoslavia, will be held at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 6 at St. Mark's Youth Center, 205 S. Wille St., Mount Prospect.

'Gifts' equal corruption

Disclosures last week by the Better Government Association that some township officials have been accepting gifts from chemical companies in return for purchases have pointed out again that there are numerous ways for corruption to invade public office.

Yes, the word is corruption, even though the amounts of money were small and the methods by which township officials fattened their wallets were circumspect.

As the BGA outlined the methodology, township officials would purchase small amounts of detergents and other types of household chemicals from certain companies and in return receive "premiums" in the form of gift certificates or goods.

Named by the BGA as one official who accepted the premiums was Schaumburg Highway Comr.

Ralph Wilkening who has admitted he received — and kept — $375 in gift certificates after he bought certain chemicals.

The way these things work, in all probability no charges will be filed against Wilkening.

The State's Attorney's office does not seem very interested in wholesale indictments since the amounts involved are so small, and other politicians are reacting to the matter as if it is a shame Wilkening is being put through an unnecessary embarrassment, they reason.

We don't share that view at all. We think Wilkening should resign from his office immediately and at the very least apologize to the people of his community for his scandalous behavior.

We find it incredible that someone who admittedly has benefited from his public office has the effrontery to stay on the job and that his cronies in other township offices have the gall to picture Wilkening as the one who deserves sympathy.

Among the comments: Schaumburg Township Auditor Walter Wing said what Wilkening did in keeping the $350 was different than a bribe. "He accepted a gift that was not solicited."

Vern Laubenstein, township supervisor, said it's too difficult to draw a line between gifts taken by Wilkening and other gratuities such as free dinners.

And Township Clerk Kay Wojcik was reported saying such gifts are "a fact of life." In truth, Mrs. Wojcik said the practice is a "sad fact of life," which gives her meaning not as harsh a ring.

Nevertheless, township officials throughout the state have closed ranks behind their accused brethren and have dodged the real issue.

Ralph Wilkening

That issue remains in stark focus no matter what obfuscations politicians throw up in defense. The issue is utilizing public office for a person's own gain, something Comr. Wilkening clearly did in accepting his "premium" money.

It is no use comparing gifts accepted by township officials with similar practices in private industry or mooning about "what hard workers those township guys really are."

Wilkening and other officials who accepted money are a slur on township government and are all too typical of the informality with which that form of government conducts itself.

Bob Lahey's column

Asserting our freedom

by BOB LAHEY
Political Editor

It was a shining moment in a gloom period. Like a glimpse of blue sky in a long period of cloudy days, quickly covered over again by dark sky.

It does little to warm the atmosphere, but at least it is an assurance that beyond the clouds the sun is still shining and will break through sooner or later.

Justice William O. Douglas, 73, a champion of individual liberties and human dignity since he joined the U.S. Supreme Court in 1939, appeared briefly before the TV cameras. He had just become the justice to have served longer than any other on the highest court of the nation.

He appeared only briefly. But what he said were the most heartening words that this beleaguered country has heard in many weeks:

"I have been in Washington long enough to realize that people here get the idea that they sort of run the country, own the country, control the country."

"But we're all pretty minor characters, actually, in the big drama, because the people of this country are the sovereigns. They can make it exactly the kind of country they want..."

"The heart of America is strong. The conscience of America is bright. The future of America is great."

The idea — the fact — that the people are sovereign is one which is easily obscured, perhaps because it is taken so much for granted by the people.

But that sovereignty has a way of asserting itself when a threat to the rule of the people is perceived.

The latest proof of that was in the "firestorm of controversy," to use the words of a presidential aide, which swept the country when President Nixon cleaned out the Justice Department in the worst move he has made (we hope) in the whole Watergate debacle.

Despite the lame disclaimers of administration officials that this firestorm was kindled and stoked by an "outrageous," hysterical press, the reaction of the people was spontaneous and nationwide. It is ludicrous to imagine that the nation's press and electronic media, acting independently or in concert, could have somehow orchestrated the cries of rage which rose from Maine to California at the President's action.

While Nixon loyalists propounded legalistic arguments about whether the President was defying the nation's laws and the courts, the people got right down to brass tacks.

For several days, there had been arguments among the legal eagles over whether Mr. Nixon was in contempt of court for not having delivered the Watergate tapes as instructed by the court.

The public was seemingly bored by the niceties of those arguments and waited doggedly for the issue to be resolved. But when the President fired Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox — and nobody ever seriously questioned his legal right to do so — the people, without consulting any constitutional authorities, quickly concluded that the Watergate investigation was being perverted.

It was a fortunate accident of time that all this occurred during a holiday weekend, at a time when 90 per cent of the members of Congress were in their home districts. Senators and congressmen saw immediately and directly the reaction of their constituents, and many of them were quite candid in their awe of the public uproar.

As the lawmakers drifted back to Washington late Monday night the leadership of both parties got first-hand reports of the depth of the indignation which the President had stirred. By Tuesday the White House had been convinced that the President must back down on the tapes.

One wonders if the administration would have retreated if it had only heard of the public outrage through the press, which it is so inclined to distrust.

Be that as it may, the reaction of the people was a forceful reminder to those in the highest positions in Washington that they do not own the country, that the people, when they speak, have the final say in what kind of country it is going to be.

'Cover our high school'

I am writing in regard to an article which appeared in the Herald, Thursday, October 18. It was located in section 3, page 1, and the headline was, "Student government — a new twist."

In it you stated that St. Viator High School has a new dimension in its student council. You said that their council meets with the faculty, that they have organized a Pep Club, re-activated the Lettermen's Club, encouraged the bowling league, and worked with the pupils of Sacred Heart of Mary High School.

I am a sophomore at Forest View High School and a member of the Representative Assembly there. When I read your article on St. Viator's student council, I became rather indignant. During my two years at Forest View, I have yet to see an article about its student council. What you call St. Viator's new twist is old hat to us!

R. A. meets every day fourth hour to hold business meetings, plan activities and meet in committees. This also includes after school meetings every Monday with the faculty and school administrators, class meetings every other week, our executive board and extra committee meetings.

Forest View's Representative Assembly does much to promote school spirit and those involved in it really feel that they are doing something for the school and its students.

Unlike St. Viators, Forest View does not need to start a Pep Club, re-activate a Lettermen's Club or start any other various clubs. Our school seems to have enough initiative to start their own clubs and keep them going. We act merely to help and advise.

Our council is filled with interested, imaginative and hard working students and because of this Forest View has one of the most modern and active student councils in Illinois.

I am immensely proud of Forest View and of its student council and I feel that we deserve some recognition.

School district policy blasted

The Dist. 54 policy of "what the public don't know won't hurt them" has reached the point where it may be hurting the students in Dist. 54.

There have been several cases of drug abuse in the junior high school. The administration has knowledge of the cases and until asked by board members kept it secret. When a case of measles is reported in the K through 6 schools, a letter is sent home to alert parents. Why not alert parents to this far more dangerous situation? The board has the information that the problem exists, why has it not done something?

The district should contact local and county law enforcement agencies and ask them to investigate. The district can and should get information to the parents as to what they can do to detect drug use; what steps to take to prevent drug sales in the area.

The problem will not be solved by keeping them secret. If the problems in Dist. 54 are brought into the open, they can be solved. The power to combat the problems lies with the Dist. 54 board and administration. Call and ask them what they are going to do about the problem.

UNICEF defended

Halloween must be near, because we're hearing the "spook stories" about UNICEF again. (I refer to Gertrude Brogan's letter in the Herald of October 25). We know that these annual attempts to discredit the United Nations Children's Fund are the work of groups opposed to the U. N. — but most Americans do not believe that deprived children should be made the victims of political opinions.

This year the charges seem to focus on UNICEF's plans to help the children of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia recover from a disastrous war. The UNICEF international board has allocated a total of $3 million for current aid programs for all of Indo-China's children — a pitifully small amount measured against the needs. Whatever help UNICEF provides will depend entirely on supplemental contributions by European and Asian governments. As far as the children of North Viet Nam, no American funds will be involved.

Opponents of the United Nations have distorted this relief program with false charges that "money collected by UNICEF will be turned over to Hanoi to reward aggression." Anyone familiar with the facts knows that this is not true. UNICEF gives no money to any government to spend as it wishes. Over 80 per cent of UNICEF aid is given in medical supplies, high protein food supplements, and equipment for carefully supervised child care programs in 111 developing countries. Most of it is purchased in the U. S. The remaining percentage goes for training grants for teachers and health workers.

These facts have been confirmed by official State Department bulletins. UNICEF's mandate is to help any child in need, regardless of his race, nationality, religion or the political system in his country. That is why it has been endorsed by five presidents, both Illinois Senators, Mayor Daley, and many civic and religious leaders.

And it is why millions of our children learn about caring and sharing when they go out to "Trick or Treat for UNICEF" on Halloween.

Cairo exemplifies racial trends

by DAVID E. ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — "I think," said Rev. John I. Cobb, "that 'South' has moved all over the country."

Cobb, a black minister from Cairo, Ill., made the comment at a hearing of the U. S. Civil Rights Commission on the racial situation in the Illinois town.

He had no intention of slurring the South. What he meant was that there is today a northern white resistance to integration that parallels resistance in such places as Alabama and Mississippi in the late 1950s and through the 1960s.

Cairo is not unique. The resistance has been militant in Detroit against school busing, in Chicago against integrated suburban housing and in New York against transfer of black students to white schools.

Where Cairo has perhaps been unique is in the degree of resistance and the violence that accompanied the push for civil rights in the southern Illinois town.

Paul Good, who sifted through the extensive record of the commission's hearings on Cairo and prepared a report on them, put it this way:

"Blacks marched, boycotted and fought pitched battles with white vigilantes, and the city experienced a long night of shooting, burning and disorder unmatched in its duration anywhere else in the country. That night still has not ended."

While the commission hearings were meant to document racism in a particular town, Good said he found a more disturbing theme.

"During the hearings," he wrote, "one listened in vain when state and federal officials testified, to hear a tone of outrage in their voices at conditions in Cairo."

"But the capacity for outrage over racism seemed to have deserted them, if they ever possessed it."

Good said their attitudes "perhaps are understandable at a time when national leaders are not above using code words that are really racist shibboleths, as they practice their politics. The officials take their cue from those on top and when 'leaders' chose to lead backwards, subordinates follow."

Just as important, perhaps, was Good's defense of the city of Cairo. Cairo whites, he said, "have been conditioned to act the way they do by their total American experience." They have been getting a message from Springfield, the state capital, and from Washington, he said.

"With varying degrees of explicitness, that message has been: racial equality laws are an inevitable legal outgrowth of the Constitution but enforcement will be satisfied with apparent, not essential, change."

Good returned to the Rev. Cobb's words and concludes: "Racism isn't regional today and never has been."

He didn't offer any solutions for the situation in Cairo — or any other northern city — but said: "Whether this truth turns the American Dream into the American Tragedy depends on the national conscience and will." (UPI)

Business Today

by LeROY POPE

NEW YORK — Juvenile delinquency and drugs are dangerous problems in America and only businessmen can solve them, a chain store magnate said.

Amnon Barness, chairman of Daylin, Inc., a 700-store chain based in Beverly Hills, Calif., said that the Watergate affair, the Middle East, Vietnam and even inflation cannot menace the nation's future more than juvenile crime and drug addiction.

"National and local government are failing to solve the problems or even attack them vigorously," he said in an interview. "So are the educators and the clergy. That leaves it up to business."

BARNESS, who came to the United States from Israel in 1947, is trying to do something. His company has created a movement in the past year called JOE — Juvenile Opportunities Endeavor. JOE puts Daylin employees and their wives to work helping young people. The wives do more than token work.

"There's a bonus in that for Daylin," Barness said. "It brings the wives closer to the company and gives them a new mission in society."

Barness said he also considers combatting juvenile delinquency a lot more important than conquering cancer or other maladies. "Crime and drug addiction are the real sicknesses of American society," he said.

JOE already is active in California, Texas, New Jersey, New York and Georgia and will be extended to other states.

"We are trying to create a model company-community organization that other companies can emulate to help children and young people combat delinquency and drug addiction," Barness said.

HIS PRIME REASON for believing business can accomplish more than government, the church and educators have been able to in recent years is that "a business sponsored movement is entirely voluntary and generates enthusiasm among those who are working and those being helped. Volunteers don't limit their hours the way professional social workers must, and they gain the confidence of the young people who need help more easily."

Money to finance JOE's operations is raised by the workers in the company. Eventually JOE boxes will be installed in all the company's stores to gather contributions from the public.

Many of JOE's activities sound unassuming — staging picnics and brief encampments for impoverished children, running clothes closets to provide good used garments for distribution to juveniles on probation, supplying cookies and other snacks to juvenile institutions and many athletic programs.

THERE ARE some more sophisticated efforts. In San Antonio JOE maintains a Salvation Home for girls and also one for boys. At Griffin, in the Atlanta area JOE operates a treatment center for juveniles. And JOE cooperates with VISTA, a government agency engaged in finding job opportunities for juveniles. In Los Angeles County, JOE has more than a score of Daylin people working directly with juveniles on probation, thus easing the load of professional probation officers.

The work directly with juvenile probationers is done in cooperation with the National Council on Crime and Delinquency's Volunteers in Probation, a movement that has enlisted more than a quarter of a million volunteers in hundreds of courts across the country.

Managing your family's money

Learn to live cooler—and save on fuel

by MERLE E. DOWD

You can help conserve scarce energy this winter by learning to live comfortably in a cooler environment. A potential shortage of energy threatens homeowners this winter in addition to a rising cost of fuel — oil, gas and electrical power. Thus, even though you can afford to pay, fuel may be rationed or restricted in some way.

So — you have two good reasons to attack heat outflow — saving cash and avoiding running out of fuel.

Heat energy escapes through the walls, roof, ground, and openings in your house. There's no way you can stop the flow, but you can slow the rate at which it escapes. And for every 100,000 BTU's of heat energy you keep in your house, that's 100,000 fewer BTU's you need to replace by burning more fuel.

AS YOU LOOK for ways you and your family can slow the escape of heat from your house, think of heat like water. Water runs faster down a steep slope than down a gentle slope.

Heat acts similarly; that is, it will escape more rapidly if the outside temperature is much lower than the interior temperature. Engineers call this the heat gradient — like a geologist's stream gradient.

There's little you can do about the outside temperature, although windscreens, dense shrubbery, trees, and roof overhangs can blunt the effect of outside wind and temperature extremes. But you can control inside temperatures. Setting your thermostat higher than necessary increases the heat gradient — raises the high end of the slope and, thus, quickens the pace of heat flowing through walls and roof.

For every one degree Fahrenheit above 70 degrees that you maintain the thermostat, you can expect to burn roughly 3 per cent more fuel. If you maintain 74 degrees F inside, you will be upping your fuel bill by about 10-12 per cent.

EUROPEANS, particularly the English, have long acclimated themselves to a comfort level of 70 degrees F or below. Inside temperatures in the U.S. typically range higher by two to five degrees.

Body comfort levels are affected by cold wall and window surfaces too. Heat is transferred by any one or combination of these three methods — conduction, where one surface touches another; convection, where a difference in temperature sets up a flow of air that carries heat with it; and radiation, where a warm surface radiates heat electromagnetically to a cooler surface.

All of these heat transfer methods are constantly at work bringing the temperatures of a system to one even level — cooling the warm objects and warming the cold objects — like water seeking a common level.

You need not "live cold" at a lower inside temperature if you apply the heat-transfer principles to your clothing. A sweater insulates your body against a heat loss either by convection or radiation. You can wear a long-sleeve shirt or blouse along with heavier pants to slow heat loss. The pantsuits for women are ready-made for living in a slightly cooler environment.

WHEN YOUR WARM skin is near a cold window, it radiates heat toward the window — and you feel cool.

The same action causes the earth's surface to radiate heat into outer space on a clear night.

Even when room air is 72-74 degrees, you may feel chilly near a window or wall. Just by covering the window with loose drapes, you hide the cold glass surfaces from your body and, thus, reduce the heat loss through radiation. Insulation in walls keeps their inner surface relatively warm.

One more effect can help you adapt to a cooler interior atmosphere. As per-

Northern Illinois Gas

Northern Illinois Gas Co. reported earnings a share for the 12 months ending Sept. 30, of $2.97 on net income of $12.3 million. This compares with $2.91 on net income of $40.8 million for the same period one year ago.

Revenues increased to $449 million from $401 million.

Results for the nine months ending Sept. 30 show earnings a share of $2.66 in 1973, up from $2.61 in 1972. Similarly, net income has increased to $37.5 million on revenues of $342 million.

Commonwealth Edison

Commonwealth Edison Co.'s earnings in the first nine months of 1973 were $2.38 a common share compared with $2.32 in the similar period of 1972. Net income increased to $137,207,000 from $120,573,000, said Thomas G. Ayers, chairman and president. The Chicago-based utility's electric operating revenues for the first nine months of this year were $941,717,000 compared with $948,573,000 for the same nine-month period of 1972.

McKay-Nealis Realtors®

1810 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights 255-3535
1600 Oakton St., Des Plaines 824-0161

The firm of McKay-Nealis Realtors, presently with two offices, was founded by John P. McKay and Walter A. Nealis 20 years ago.

John P. McKay, partner, has been a resident of Des Plaines for 24 years. He served in the U.S. Navy for five years on active duty during World War II in both the Atlantic and Pacific areas of combat. He is past president of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors and has also served that organization for three years as director.

He has served as a director of the Des Plaines Chamber of Commerce and is past chairman of the Board of Bristol Oaks Corporation. He is a member of the Des Plaines Elks Club and is presently serving as vice-president of District #1 of the State of Illinois Real Estate Board. McKay is also enrolled for the second term of the G.R.I. School in Springfield.

Walter A. Nealis, partner, has also been a resident of Des Plaines for the past 24 years. He served four years in the U.S. Naval Air Force during World War II in the Pacific Theater. He is presently a member of the Des Plaines Elks and Lions Club, and has been particularly active with the Lions on their Tag and Pancake Day promotions held for the benefit of the blind. He is presently treasurer of the M.A.P. Multiple Listing Service and chairman of the Board of Directors of the Bristol Oaks Corporation, which owns and operates two golf courses in Wisconsin.

Robert J. Darmstadt, real estate manager, joined McKay-Nealis Realtors 17 years ago. He has served as a director of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors and as president of the Des Plaines Multiple Listing Service. For many years, he was an instructor in the Board Real Estate School and served as Educational Committee Chairman for two years. Prior to joining McKay-Nealis, he operated his own property management business in Chicago.

Douglas D. DeCremer, assistant sales manager, at the Des Plaines office has been with the firm five years and has consistently been among the top producers of the firm. He is a member of the Salesman's Million Dollar Club and is presently serving as associate director of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors. He is enrolled as a third term candidate at the G.R.I. School.

Four years ago, McKay-Nealis Realtors opened its Arlington Heights Office at 1810 E. Northwest Hwy. At the present time, John W. McKay is sales manager at that office. He is a graduate of St. Leo's College, Tampa, Florida, and served in the U. S. Army in Vietnam. He is enrolled as a third term candidate at the G.R.I. School.

Russell Christensen serves as assistant sales manager at the Arlington Heights Office and has been an outstanding producer since joining the firm.

The sales staffs of both offices in addition to the aforementioned include:

Des Plaines Office: Frank Semrau, Roy Thompson, Sal Passarelli, Gus Anagnost, Jerry Schuessler, Brian Ipsen, Ray Naegele, Richard Kresin, Eleanor Kelly, James Anzalone, Robert Eberl, Frank Madl, Tom Perconti, Margaret Harz, Roland Harz.

Arlington Heights Office: C. Vern Swanson, Lorraine Medal, J.W. McKee, Leonard Barwing, George Dye, Claudia Niemic, James Shortall, Gordon Davis, Beatrice Harris, Russell Dieter.

In addition to the Real Estate Department, McKay-Nealis has operated a Building Department for the past 18 years. During that time, it has built approximately 600 Custom Homes in addition to various commercial and industrial buildings.

Under the direction of Roy Baker, C.L.U., McKay-Nealis operates a complete Insurance Department writing all lines of coverage. Baker is also an expert income tax adviser and seasonally handles hundreds of income tax returns for McKay-Nealis clients.

McKay-Nealis is a member of both the Northwest Suburban Multiple Listing Service, Inc. and MAP Multiple Listing Service. Through these multiple services, both sellers and buyers can be assured the finest and most complete service by the McKay-Nealis Sales Counselors. The firm is a member of Home-to-Home Referral Service, a nation-wide organization, through which agency referrals can be handled for those either moving in or out of any given area, in an easy and efficient manner.

The growth of the firm has been consistent with the expansion of all the northwest suburbs. "Service, integrity and adherence to the Golden Rule, as set forth in the Realtors Code of Ethics, are norms by which McKay-Nealis expects future success and continued expansion," the partners said.

Builders' parley will seek solutions to housing slowdown

Responding to the pleas of concerned homebuilders, the fourth INBEX Building Exposition, Nov. 27-29 in Chicago, will concentrate on four pressing problems now facing the building industry which could sharply reduce 1974 home building. The show has been targeted to offer the builder solutions for the mortgage squeeze, higher building costs, the energy crisis and the rising tide of consumerism.

"Builders are now using the term 'crisis' to describe these tough problems we will feature at INBEX," Marsh P. Trimble, executive director for the show and publisher for Professional Builder magazine, said. "We determined that INBEX will become a show totally dedicated to fighting the forces so often faced by the homebuilding industry. And introducing new ways to build which will benefit both the builder and the homebuyer," he commented.

INBEX this year will be held at McCormick Place with nearly 300,000 square feet required for the more than 200 exhibitors. It will be the most complete exhibition for construction ever held with complete homes, systems and components, machinery, transporters and cranes, building products — everything required for a industry now responding to dynamic economic forces accelerating change.

Nationally-known speakers for INBEX include George C. Martin, president, National Association of Home Builders; Hugh Downs, TV commentator and environmentalist; Elliot Janeway, financial columnist; Barry Berkus, famed designer, and Walter E. Ekblaw, president, Inland-Scholz division, Inland Steel Co. INBEX WILL introduce for the first time this year a "Financial Contact Center" to bring lenders and builders together to discuss money availabilities for the 1974 building season. Seminars planned will review the status for conventional financing, but will also explore new approaches — including junior mortgages, gap loans, mortgage backed securities, wrap-around loans, lease-back, going public syndications, private sources, and new town joint ventures.

George Martin recently commented that, "the housing industry is deeply concerned about declining production trends and the rising costs that are pricing customers out of the market while demand for housing is high." He said that cost increases are outstripping people's ability to pay and that the typical single family home nationally was now priced at around $33,200.

INBEX is the only major building exposition offering in-depth seminars and exhibits showing builders how to save time and money by increased use of factory-produced house parts or complete homes. Until recently houses and other buildings were built by the "conventional" method. This consists of bringing the building materials to the building site where they are then cut, fitted and assembled into the structure by skilled workmen. But a large and increasing number of buildings are now being constructed by the newer "industrialized" building method. Industry sources estimate that a half-million homes will be built in whole or large part by factories in 1975. With inflationary pressures still continuing, it is expected that even more builders will turn to factory methods in 1974.

INBEX WILL REVEAL for the first time how to build a home or apartment which requires up to 50 per cent less energy — gas, oil or electric — to heat or cool. The added cost is about $500 more for the typical home, which pays for itself in two years. All the building products required are already on the market and the necessary technology is proven by both laboratory and field testing. Speakers at INBEX will also present the options open to architects, engineers and contractors who now must build schools, hospitals and other commercial structures, which require less energy to heat and cool.

The totally new energy conservation package requires much more than just additional insulation, though this has become increasingly important. For example, the home might have a brand-new type of insulation on the exterior walls to provide a "thermo-break" for the studs, which up to now have been largely ignored. Now research indicates that studs not insulated contribute substantially to heating and cooling losses. For now housing reflecting the energy crisis the specifications also call for higher quality windows which minimize air infiltration and have insulating glass, plus storm windows, or triple glazing, in some areas where extreme heat or sub-zero temperatures prevail.

ADDITIONALLY, the EC house must use new concepts for home ventilating to minimize heat losses, often the result of low quality or faulty kitchen, bath and chimney vents. Research shows that many fans soon become jammed and stay "open" dissipating costly heat or cooled air to the great outdoors. Attention must also be paid to more efficient heating and cooling equipment and more precise "balance" of equipment to the house size. Finally, the house must have throughout appliances and other household equipment selected on the basis of satisfactory performance, but at less cost for energy.

INBEX will offer builders for the first time a brand-new, special display area restricted to building products, mechanical equipment and appliances, which contribute to energy conservation. By touring the center, the builder will be able to conveniently review products availability and assemble his own energy conservation package suitable for his area of the country.

Convincing environmental activists that planned projects are suitable and increasing homebuyer satisfaction has become the concern of builders nationally. INBEX plans strong presentations showing builders what can be done in both areas.

NEEDED HOUSING IS now being postponed by arbitrary environmental requirements so stiff across the country that they could price the proposed project totally out of the market. Seminars at INBEX will demonstrate how to win these battles by bringing reason and professional skills to play on environmental questions.

Less of a problem the INBEX seminars on increasing buyer satisfaction center on the pitfalls for builders, and the new ways they can respond effectively by factual advertising, honest sales policies, homebuyer guides or manuals and with a helpful program for post-sale adjustments and service. Fully discussed will be a new proposed warranty program now being considered by the National Association of Homebuilders.

Hanover Park bank to expand facilities

Another building expansion at The First State Bank and Trust Company of Hanover Park has just been announced by First State Bank's president, G. William Christensen. Six additional drive-in lanes will be added to the west side of the bank building, with construction expected to get underway within the next week or 10 days. When completed, the new facility will be operated in conjunction with three existing lanes on the east side, bringing the total drive-in capacity to nine operating lanes.

Dubbed "Phase IV" by Christensen, this latest expansion marks the fourth major physical improvement of the bank since it was founded three years ago. The most recent expansion of lobby and lower level bookkeeping facilities was just completed in July of this year.

Christensen said he hopes to have the new drive-in lanes in full operation by the end of the year. "They are badly needed," he said, "based upon our very rapid growth which has caused the blockage of Irving Park Road several times in recent months by customers using our present facilities."

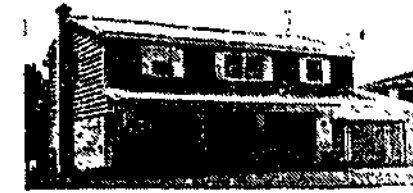

Housed since 1971 in its present building, First State Bank already has more than 20,000 accounts with total assets of more than $17.5 million.

THE OAKVIEW, at U.S. Home's Countryside community area that is perfect for informal dining or simply relaxing in front of the natural brick fireplace.

'Old-fashioned' kitchen becomes new home feature

The "old-fashioned" country kitchen is becoming an increasingly popular new home feature among Chicago area home buyers, and for better reasons than simple nostalgia.

If you have toured a new home development recently, you have probably noticed more and more model homes are featuring what has become known as a country kitchen. Although there is no specific definition for this term, it most commonly refers to a kitchen that is open and spacious. And, more often than not, this large, open kitchen is accompanied by an adjoining family room, creating for the homeowner a spacious family activity center.

There are several reasons for the increased popularity of this design concept and research by U.S. Home, the nation's largest home builder, reveals that these reasons are highly practical and functional, and go beyond just the need for more space. "There is more to the trend," said Ken Anderson, director of merchandising for U.S. Home, "than simple nostalgia for the good old days."

"DESPITE THE abundance and quality of frozen T.V. dinners, the woman still spends most of her time in the kitchen. Naturally, while she is in the kitchen she doesn't want to be shut off from the rest of her family. She wants to be able to cook dinner and at the same time, be able to talk to her husband and keep an eye on the kids," said Anderson.

"The country-style kitchen with its openness and adjoining family area allows the woman to be chief cook and family member both at the same time," Anderson said.

U.S. Home research also reveals that families prefer the country kitchen floor-plan because it is, in fact, more informal and casual. Many families see this room arrangement more reflective of their own lifestyle or living patterns.

U.S. Home, whose business it is to anticipate and meet home buyer preferences such as the one described above, recently introduced several new model homes at Countryside, located off U.S. Rte. 12 in the far northwest suburb of Lake Zurich. Three of the five new model homes now open for inspection were designed specifically to meet the buyer preference for country-style kitchen and family center.

ONE SUCH home is the three bedroom Oakview ranch model. The Oakview offers a kitchen area that is almost 19 feet long and 12 feet wide.

Spaciousness also is the word for the country kitchen offered in the four bedroom, 2½-bath Brookhaven. The actual kitchen area of the Brookhaven is over 10 feet long and 9 feet wide. And adjoining the kitchen is a 10-by-8-foot breakfast area. From wall-to-wall, the country kitchen stretches over 21 feet, providing ample room for the largest of families.

Another home featuring the casual country kitchen design is the Pinehurst, a four bedroom, two-bath ranch. The Pinehurst features an open kitchen and family room, separated by a counter-top bar. The adjoining kitchen and family area combine to create an activity area over 25 feet long.

The Pinehurst kitchen allows the cook to be right in the middle of family activity. And, like the Oakview, the Pinehurst features a natural red brick fireplace. Situated in the corner of the family room area, the fire can be enjoyed while dining or relaxing.

The Oakview, Brookhaven and Pinehurst are three of five new models opened by U.S. Home at Countryside in Lake Zurich. The new homes include a full package of extra amenities, and are priced between $39,900 and $52,900.

Do-it-yourself

Lacquer protects your metal fixtures

Metal hardware always looks good in a new kitchen or bathroom, on new furniture and in hardware store displays. Hinges, knobs, pulls and catches of metal are both attractive and durable. But some of that attractiveness fades in time.

Metal pieces lose their luster and may tarnish in time. Some are more durable than others and some are easier to clean than others. A few will pit and corrode if not taken care of right from the start. Some will be ruined by improper cleaning, even losing the exterior coating that made them so attractive in the first place.

A WIDE VARIETY of metal polishes is available and a good hardware store will carry most of them. A metal polish generally consists of a solvent and a mild abrasive. The solvent dissolves the oxides that form on metal surfaces. The abrasive is there for polishing.

These are mild polishes generally and are to be preferred because they do the least damage to the metal. But a mild polish is only effective before tarnish becomes too thick and heavy. Although the polish may be mild, use it sparingly, especially on plated metals. Frequent polishing eventually wears through the plating.

To avoid this problem with plated surfaces give them a protective coating while still new and clean. A coat of clear lacquer lasts indefinitely and the surfaces can be wiped off with no damage to the plating.

Apply lacquer only to a clean surface. Use a fine polish that will not scratch to remove all dirt and tarnish. Wipe with a rag dipped in denatured alcohol to remove all traces of polish. Then polish with a dry cloth.

IF POSSIBLE remove the hardware before lacquering. Apply two coats with brush or spray.

Do not use lacquer on objects that come in contact with flame or high heat.

Solid copper, bronze or brass are durable and do not present the problems of thin plating. But a coating of lacquer can help these too since they are metals that tarnish easily. They can then be cleaned with the mildest polish and soap and water.

Objects of copper, bronze and brass may become pitted through neglect. Clean first with a mild kitchen cleanser, then rinse with hot water. Remaining stains should be cleaned with a solution of vinegar and salt followed by rinsing in clear, hot water and polishing.

ALUMINUM doesn't rust but it does become dull and pitted in time, especially when exposed to the weather. Make aluminum bright again with fine steel wool pads and mild soap. Avoid strong cleaning agents, particularly those with lye. These discolor the aluminum. Special aluminum cleaners are available which will do the job easily if not neglected for too long.

Stainless steel does stain if substances dry on the surface. Soap and water are generally enough to clean it. Acid containing foods may discolor the steel but this can be corrected with a metal polish.

Chromium is a plated metal and should be cleaned with care. Use soap and water or a mild polish. The kind sold especially for chrome cleaning is best. Harsh abrasives will scratch the surface. If possible, protect the surface with wax.

Do-it-Yourself Show to feature live exhibits

Easy to install ceiling panels will be one of many features on display at the Do-it-Yourself Show, now thru Nov. 4 in the International Amphitheater.

The Celotex Corporation, of 640 Pier-son St., Des Plaines, will provide film clips in its booth on the ease of work-manship in installing its "panelmatic panels."

Other do-it-yourself exhibits in the show include:

Picture-frame kits from the E.O.L. Corporation of Shawnee Mission, Kansas. A special plastic pin allows the hobbyist to assemble the frame without tools.

Magic Memory Mold and Casting set by Rapco, Inc., 500 N. Spaulding Ave., Chicago. This set makes an exact duplication of an individual's hand, including fingerprints.

Instructions on how to spot and correct water leaks in basements and other areas of a house by Perma-Seal Systems, Inc., 1921 N. Harlem Ave., Chicago.

Repairs on all types of roofing, driveways and sidewalk surfaces by the U.S. Polycoat Corp., 3067 N. Elston Ave., Chicago.

Easy-to-install fireplaces, either by woodburning type or the more modern gas version, by Topline Distributors, 5805 Archer Road, Argon, Ill.

The handyman's dream workshop, a build-it-yourself workshop consisting of a work bench and tool-storage area, by The Stanley Works, of New Britain, Conn.

Trail-like kits by Heald, Inc., of Benton Harbor, Mich., motorized bikes that can be used around the house, on vacation trips or just for fun.

THE HERALD

Thursday, November 1, 1973

Section 2 — 7

If you've postponed plans to look for an existing home in an established community because you've heard that:

- They've been priced out of sight.
- Mortgage funds are practically nonexistent, and
- Interest rates have skyrocketed, you could be making a very big mistake.

One of Chicago's leading real estate authorities points out that sellers have been exposed to the same reports. The payoff is that some of the best used home buys in the last year are now available.

"There is no question that a wave of negative psychology has swept the market," observes Robert G. Walters, vice president and general sales manager, residential division, for Baird & Warner, Inc.

"Significantly, in the face of reduced demand, sellers have lowered their sights and they are pricing homes at levels lower than the trend of the past year or so," he suggested.

He pointed out that there is usually a seasonal dip in demand at this time of year anyway. Coupled with the decision of potential buyers to wait, sobered sellers are finding the market even softer than usual and, according to Walters, price tags have become more appealing.

WALTERS ASSERTED, however, that conditions are not as drastic as widely reported and the purchase of an existing home now makes good sense for several reasons.

"First of all, the reports that mortgage funds have dried up is nonsense. Even though there has been a slowdown in savings, lending institutions are not totally dependent on savings for funds. You'll find that, according to industry statistics, loan repayments account for about 40 percent of dollar income and payoffs or prepayments represent about another 20 percent of income to thrift institutions.

"So even though they may be experiencing a reduction of net savings, most savings and loans and banks have money to lend. And the pressure for credit from both sellers and buyers will keep money available for mortgages," said Walters.

TURNING TO the matter of rising costs of credit, Walters said that "even though mortgage interest rates are close to the legal limit of 7.9 percent in Illinois, that's an increase of less than one percentage point over the last nine months. At best, interest rates were running from 7 to 7.5 percent."

He said this increase was paltry compared to the rising price of new homes.

Three pass $1 million mark

Larry Schwartz

Suzi Gamm

Jack Garber

Three salespeople at Stan Lieberman Realty, 150 W. Dundee Rd., Buffalo Grove, have passed the $1 million mark in sales this year.

Larry Schwartz, Lieberman sales manager, joins Jack Garber and Suzi Gamm in achieving this goal. Two more Lieberman salesmen should reach the mark by the end of the year, Schwartz said.

Garber, who lives in Cambridge-on-the-Lake, is expected to top $2 million in sales by December. "This we feel is exceptional, since Jack is in his first year in the real estate business," Schwartz said. Mrs. Gamm of Buffalo Grove is also completing her first year.

Schwartz, who has been with Lieberman since its inception, also lives in Buffalo Grove. He is executive vice-president of the Buffalo Grove Chamber of Commerce and secretary of the Jaycees

"A number of leading home builders we've talked to report that their costs for building a new house have increased 10 percent since the first of the year, mainly because of the rising costs of material, labor, and money. Whatever mortgage conditions are also pertain to new homes as well. Consequently, a realistically priced existing home not subject to the same inflationary factors represents the best value to buyers in some time," he concluded.

Cut down on heating fuel consumption

Whether your home is heated by gas, oil or electricity, there is a possibility that you may face a fuel shortage this winter. Now, more than ever, is it necessary to learn how to cut down on fuel consumption.

From the National Better Heating-Cooling Council comes some practical advice on how to keep warm while using less fuel.

In the first place, don't overheat your home. For each degree you lower the setting of your thermostat, you save approximately 3 per cent in fuel consumption. If your normal setting is 75 degrees, lowering it to 72 degrees will save about 9 per cent.

Lower your thermostat when you retire for the night. Night setback, according to some studies, can achieve savings of up to 15 per cent. Although this is debatable, it certainly will not result in increased consumption. Anyway, from a comfort standpoint, most people prefer a cooler room when they sleep.

If you have a fireplace, close the doors of the other rooms when it is in use. A good fire draws a lot of air, and although the room in which it is located is warm, the other rooms may feel chilly. Above all, make sure the damper is closed tight when it is not in use, or literally all your fuel dollars will go up the chimney.

Draperies should be drawn as soon as the sun goes down. They can act as another wall against the cold and eliminate drafts.

Take a walking 'tour' around the house, and look for cracks in the foundation. Crum steel wool into any you find. Not only will it cut down on drafts, the council says, it will also prevent mice from using your house as their winter headquarters.

Repair or replace any loose or broken shingles. Ditto with windows. Storm sashes on windows and doors will reduce their heat loss by more than half, and significantly reduce fuel consumption. The same point can be raised for insulation. There should be at least four inches of loose insulation in the attic, and two inches above any crawl space. Call in a heating contractor who can advise you how to install insulation even in an older home.

More than anything else, make sure your heating system is in good working order. Have the chimney cleaned and the burner adjusted so that the flame burns cleanly. Vacuum all registers, baseboard heating panels, and other heat distributors.

FORMAL ELEGANCE is found in spacious dining-living room at Riviera in Glen Ellyn. Only six of 31 condominiums by Collins two-and three-bedroom units remain at 40 S. Main St., one block south of Roosevelt Road. Containing 1,450 to 1,900 square feet, they are priced from $40,500 to $49,900.

'The Landings' tells rates for hangars, parking spaces

Developers of The Landings, luxury fly-in community northwest of Elgin, have announced monthly rental charges for aircraft hangars and tie-down parking spaces.

The community's 3,000-foot runway has been paved and model homes now are under construction in the development, a mile east and a mile north of the interchange of Interstate 90 and Ill. Rt. 47.

"Two sizes of insulated metal T-type hangars are being built," said Barbara Kovacs, chairman of Barko Development Corp., Des Plaines, The Landings developer. "A hangar that will accommodate single-engine and smaller twin-engine aircraft will lease for $125 a month and rental for a larger hangar will be $135 a month, for homeowners at The Landings. A few hangars will be available to other flying enthusiasts who wish to base their planes here, at $135 and $185 a month, respectively."

Tie-down spaces will be leased to homeowners for $25 a month and to others for $35.

"HOMEOWNERS WILL be guaranteed the right to lease hangar or tie-down space for five years from the time they buy homes at The Landings," said Mrs. Kovacs, "even if they don't need aircraft parking facilities immediately."

Hangars will be leased for an initial five-year period, with options for lease renewal annually until the year 2003. Tie-down spaces will be leased for an initial year, with options for renewal until 2003. Each renewal option will provide for cost-of-living increases, Mrs. Kovacs said.

"Originally, we had planned to offer homeowners at The Landings 99-year leases on hangars or tie-downs," Mrs. Kovacs said. "However, a number of prospective buyers were reluctant to obligate themselves and their descendants for nearly a century."

"Under the new program, homeowners are assured of a base for their flight operations at a fixed base cost for at least 30 years. And, through greater lease flexibility, they can terminate their obligations without penalty if they move away from The Landings at some time in the future."

The developer will bear total costs of airport maintenance, taxes and insurance, Mrs. Kovacs added.

Homes, on half-acre-plus lots, are priced from $66,900 to $99,900. Purchase includes use of The Landings clubhouse, with associated swimming pool, tennis courts and other recreational facilities, as well as reduced monthly charges for hangar or tie-down rental.

Sales office is open on the site, a mile east on Freeman Road and a mile north on Powers Road from the Interstate 90-Rt. 47 interchange, from 10 a.m. till dusk on Saturdays and Sundays, and by appointment at other times.

Look for roof snow

Shop for a new house immediately after a snowstorm. If there is snow on the roof, it's a good sign that the house has a well-insulated attic. An insulated roof will keep heat inside during the winter and prevent the roof from getting warm enough to melt the snow. Saves money on fuel, too.

S&L officer can guide potential home buyer

Homeseeking families should call upon their savings association loan officer for guidance, before engaging in serious house-hunting. It can save steps and establish valuable guidelines.

That is the advice of Frank J. Kinst of Lincoln Federal Savings and Loan Association of Berwyn.

He advises:

"Often, prospective home buyers have only the vaguest idea of the home they want, where they want to buy and the mortgage they can handle."

"All they know is that they have outlived the old home or apartment and they want something different."

Instead of riding forth in all directions like the legendary headless horseman, Kinst says it is wise to examine the many factors involved in home purchase... what, where, near-what, how much, appearance, resale potential and mortgageability.

RULES OF any game should be understood by each participant. But, according to the Lincoln Federal president, home-buying is much more than a game, it's extremely serious business involving the largest commitment of money most families ever make.

Kinst says that pre-search counseling with a loan officer avails more than finding out one's credit limits. He notes:

"It can save valuable time, money and exasperations involved with random house-hunting."

Further, Kinst states, the mere recital of one's needs and preferences to the loan officer helps crystallize previously undetermined objectives.

Of particular aid is neighborhood data, transportation information and answers about schools, churches and shopping.

The S&L loan officer can advise on neighborhood trends, price appreciation and resale activity in given areas.

THE INTERVIEW need not be a brief one. It is to the benefit of both potential lender and borrower that all questions be answered fully.

How can a savings and loan officer tell if an information seeker will ever buy a home or, more specifically, obtain a mortgage from him? "He can't," Kinst says, "it's merely part of our service. We encourage these inquiries. It keeps us alert and permits us to meet people. That's a secret of institutional growth."

SMALL-FRY VISITORS at Kole Real Estate Ltd.'s nine offices in the Northwest suburbs are invited to choose a gift from the Treasure Chests found there. Enjoying the fun recently in the Palatine Kole office were Sara, left, and Andrew, children of Mr. and Mrs. Alan Winkelhake, 55 N. Linden, Palatine. Winkelhake has been associated with the Kole organization since May.

Andraschko nears lifetime membership in million club

Mel J. Andraschko, manager of Kole Real Estate Ltd.'s Palatine office since it opened in June, is two thirds of the way toward life-time membership in Illinois Association of Realtor's Million Dollar Sales Club.

Andraschko joined the Kole organization in the Rolling Meadows office in December, 1971, and topped one million dollars in sales volume during 1972 there. In April of this year he became associated with Kole's new Arlington Heights office, and moved his family from Rolling Meadows to Arlington Heights in September, 1973.

In June, Robert A. Kole, president of the eight-year-old firm, drew upon Andraschko's business experience and knowledge of the area in appointing him to expand Kole operations into Palatine and vicinity as manager of the new office at 160 N. Northwest Hwy. in that suburb.

By the end of July, 1973, Mel's sales volume had topped the million dollar mark for the second consecutive year. In Kole's Palatine office he heads a staff of 21 sales associates, plus secretary, Holly Overton. During the first three months of operation, his staff was responsible for listing 40 pieces of property in various Northwest suburbs.

BEFORE ENTERING the real estate field, Andraschko worked for International Harvester Co's home office in the treasury department for four years, held the position of manager of cash planning and forecasting for Brunswick Corp., and was assistant controller for Pollack & Skan, Inc.

Later he became manager of accounting for Swift Agriculture Chemical Corp., setting up their Liquid Fertilizer Department for sales throughout the United States. He served in the U.S. Army Military Police in Panama and Puerto Rico, and holds the rank of Major in the inactive reserves. During his army service he played on its All-Star Basketball team for three years.

He holds a degree in business administration from DePaul University obtained after 18 years of attendance at night classes beginning in 1952.

Motorola's Kohlman on trade board

Kenneth H. Kohlman of Des Plaines, national convention manager for Motorola Communications Division, has been appointed to the board of directors of the National Trade Show Exhibitors Association.

Kohlman joined Motorola in 1969 and formerly held a convention position with A. B. Dick Co. and an advertising/sales promotion post at Zenith Sales Corp.

He was graduated with a bachelor of arts degree from Michigan State University in 1958.

Vacation home to be awarded

Why buy a new vacation home when you can build one yourself?

Impossible? Not really. The Wickes Corporation of Saginaw, Michigan, will display a pre-assembled vacation home at the Do-It-Yourself Show October 30 thru November 4 in the International Amphitheater.

The display home — one of many different types of homes and floor plans that Wickes offers — can be put up according to the buyer's own time schedule. Three days. Two weeks. One month. You name it.

(The display home, incidentally, will be given away to some lucky visitor to the Wickes exhibit. A drawing will be held on the last day of the show.)

All Wickes homes are designed for fast construction. An experienced contractor can erect the basic structural package of a Wickes pre-assembled vacation home in two or three days. He can have the job finished inside and out in less than a month.

Do-It-Yourselfers usually take about two weeks to progress from foundation to closed structure. They need a long weekend to install the electrical system and another for the plumbing.

All of these factors will be explained at the Wickes exhibit, including a choice of floor plans and personalized decor. The do-it-yourselfer can also select bathroom fixtures, kitchen cabinets, counter tops, lighting fixtures, and other finishing details to suit individual needs.

Whether the visitor is considering a primary residence, a vacation hide-away, a retirement home or investment property, Wickes can easily accommodate him.

Stop at natural point

When you start or stop painting (for lunch, a break, or overnight) do so at a natural stopping point, such as a joint in the woodwork, or a corner of a wall.

Monthly realty transfers announced

Hanover

McTavish Oil Co. Inc. purchased the property at 777 E. Chicago St., Elgin, from John C. Sunko for $127,500. It was announced in the early autumn Hanover Township real estate transfer report from County Recorder Sidney R. Olsen.

There were 32 sales in Streamwood, 21 in Hanover Park, 2 in Elgin, 1 in Bartlett, and 3 in the rest of the township.

Olsen recorded the following property transfers for the township. The list shows the purchase price of equity and does not include the amount of a mortgage which the purchaser may have assumed. The price is indicated by the amount of state revenue stamps on the document.

The transfers are:

Take A Good Look At Our Signs, They Don't Last Very Long!

EL CONQUISTADOR two-bedroom home at Villas Salceda, an adult community being created by Red Seal Homes Inc. in Northbrook.

Red Seal home in Northbrook

'El Conquistador' under construction

The El Conquistador community of homes, at Villas Salceda, is now under construction in Northbrook by Red Seal Homes, Inc.

The El Conquistador home has a walkway consisting of Bomanite cobblestone, and is entered through a front double door. Beyond lies a foyer and large interior atrium courtyard and patio which provides open-air privacy. The foyer, dining room, informal activities room and master bedroom look out at the atrium courtyard area through thermo-insulated windows and patio doors. All rooms are on one level.

The living room is 22 by 15 feet and the formal dining room is 15 by 11 feet. The kitchen features a skylight, recessed fluorescent and accent lights, and contains a full array of appliances including a built-in gas barbecue. There's a 9 by 8 foot breakfast room and a utility room for the washer and dryer. Beyond the spindle wall from the breakfast room is an 18 by 16 foot paneled informal activities room with a gas-log fireplace. There's a dramatic wet bar, too, with top-line custom-finished cabinetry.

A security system that provides coverage of every home opening is included with the home as standard equipment. The home also has an oversized 22 by 20 foot two-car attached garage with an automatic garage door opener, plus an 18-foot-wide driveway including concrete ribbons on each side of the asphalt paving. The garage is accessible from the inside of the home.

COMPLETE EXTERIOR landscaping comes with the home. A Kitchenaid dishwasher, Wood Mode kitchen cabinets and decorator door hardware are standard in the El Conquistador, which also has a humidifier with humidistat.

The El Conquistador offers 2,340 square feet of living space, and is being built as part of small groupings of homes on private entrance streets.

Off-street parking is available for use by visiting guests.

There are two full baths in the home. One is a private bath complete with dressing room, separate shower stall and tub located in the master bedroom suite. This suite measures 28 by 13 feet and includes a full-sized sitting room or library. Adjacent is a large walk-in closet with special shelves for storing wearing apparel, shoes, purses and hats.

The second full bath, with dressing area, is close to the El Conquistador's second bedroom, which is 17 by 12 feet and has its own walk-in closet.

Depending on the particular design selected, the El Conquistador can have optional patios accessible from its dining room or informal activities room.

The El Conquistador is priced from $81,000 to $86,500.

Des Plaines man heads Kole office

Murray A. Breitberg, 541-A N. 4th, Des Plaines, has been named manager of Kole Real Estate, Ltd.'s office in Barrington.

Newest of the firm's eight residential sales offices in the Northwest suburbs, the Barrington location at 210 S. Northwest Hwy. has been open since November, 1972, and Breitberg has been its manager since August of this year.

Previously he was a sales associate with Willoughby Realty, Inc. in Skokie for 14 years, where he helped build this new firm by participating in 23 sales with a value of over one million dollars in a six-month period of 1973.

Before that Breitberg was with MGM Realty as advertising manager, and with the Chicago Tribune's promotion department as a production associate.

He began his business career as an art and production man with an advertising agency where Robert A. Kole was general manager, and states he is pleased to be back with his long-time friend and associate, who is now president of the real estate firm which bears his name.

Originally from Chicago's west side, Murray Breitberg graduated from Roosevelt High School and attended Northwestern University's School of Journalism. He and his wife, Marlene, are parents of two children, Susan, 7, a second grader at Cumberland School in Des Plaines, and Scott, 3. The family is active in Des Plaines Terrace Neighborhood Association.

Joins Gladstone

Bruce H. Gartzke has joined the staff of Gladstone, Realtors as a sales associate in the Elk Grove Village office.

Bruce Gartzke

Gladstone also has offices in Mount Prospect, Des Plaines, Villa Park, Franklin Park and Berkeley.

Gartzke attended the University of Wisconsin in Madison and the Milwaukee School of Engineering. Before joining Gladstone he was president and general manager of an audio film service.

Gartzke and his wife Alice live at 1038 Cypress Ln. in Elk Grove Village. In June, 1973, he was named Jaycee of the month by the Elk Grove Village Jaycees. He is corresponding secretary of the organization and was one of the award winners for the "best ways and means community oriented project for 1972-73."

A hot subject

According to results of a recent survey, heat is necessary in 90 per cent of all home-improvement projects. Hydronic (hot water) heating offers the most flexibility in home furnishing. The heat distributors never get hot to the touch and permit floor length draperies and wall-to-wall carpeting.

Kramer president of Hollywood Builders

Hollywood Builders Co., Inc., one of the largest builders and developers in the Chicago metropolitan area, recently named Jack F. Netchin, chairman-of-the-board and Manuel S. Kramer as president.

Under the guidance of Netchin, the company's founder and immediate past president, and Kramer, Hollywood Builders has spanned the construction spectrum — houses, apartments, condominiums, motels, hotels, nursing homes and inner-city reclamation — inaugurating many new concepts in land and space use.

Hollywood Builders Co. Inc. is a name that has stood for innovative design, quality construction and sound management for more than a quarter of a century.

Today, involved with more than $150,000,000 in developments, Hollywood Builders is projecting sales and revenues totaling $22 million for the year 1973, just from their current projects in their real estate division: Barcelona Condominiums in Skokie, Chelsea Cove Condominiums in Wheeling, Illinois; Colony Country Condominiums in Mount Prospect, and Stonebridge Hill rental apartments in Arlington Heights.

Realtors back state crackdown on shoddy practices

Reports that the Illinois Department of Registration and Education has launched a special investigation to seek out those realty brokers and salesmen involved in illegal practices have drawn a favorable reaction from Chicago's realtors.

Referring to initial reports that indicate fewer than 20 brokers and salesmen are targets for the state's probe, Chicago Real Estate Board Pres. Bernard Katz said, "This is something we have been saying for years. There are only a small handful of these fast-buck operators who prey on the emotions and ignorance of some citizens, but they receive all the publicity while the legal and ethical practices of the other 99 per cent go unnoticed."

Speaking for the 2,000-member Chicago Real Estate Board, Katz said, "We were finally able to have a law passed that will hopefully rid the neighborhoods of the unscrupulous operators while protecting the rights of the honest brokers and salesmen as well as the public. Chicago's realtors worked with realtors throughout the state in helping the Illinois legislature write and vote its approval of a meaningful law," Katz said.

HIS COMMENTS concerned HB 707, passed earlier this year by the state legislature and signed into law on Sept. 20 by Governor Walker.

"Our support of the work of the investigations by the Department of Registration and Education is predicated on their strict adherence to the facts of any case it examines," Katz said. "If the emotionalism and private interests of special groups tend to distract the investigation from the facts of a situation, then its true purpose will have been compromised and nullified. The realtors of Illinois worked for months in support of this bill, and now the local neighborhood groups are beginning to recognize it as the boon it is intended to be."

"We believe this is an excellent example of an industry policing itself," Katz continued. "We now have a more effective law that promises to bring higher standards to brokers and salesmen throughout the State."

Katz noted that realtors, active members of a local board of realtors and the state and national associations of realtors, have for generations pledged themselves to a strict code of ethics, and have established highly-repeated programs of education and professionalism. In Chicago, only active members of the Chicago Real Estate Board are entitled to use the identifying term Realtor, a privilege which is protected by federal law.

The new law establishes higher educational requirements than did the old law for persons to be licensed as real estate brokers and salesmen. It also establishes the office of Real Estate Commissioner to work with the Department of Registration and Education to enforce the laws.

PRACTICES commonly known as panic-peddling and block-busting are also made illegal by the law.

A special recovery fund is also created by a provision in the new law. This fund, financed by special assessments from real estate brokers and salesmen, will allow any citizen who suffers losses because of illegal acts by realty operators in Illinois to receive up to $10,000 in damages, plus possible attorney fees.

"The Department of Registration and Education has an excellent record of protecting the public from unscrupulous real estate operators," Katz said. "Now the director, Dr. Dean Barringer, and his staff will be aided by a new, tougher law, and by the commissioner of real estate. The realtors of Chicago continue to offer their full support to the purpose and functions of these offices in their efforts to rid the industry of the fast-buck operators," Katz said.

New officers elected by The O'Hare Group

The O'Hare Group, business and industry, real estate brokers, recently elected officers for the coming year. Elected as president was Al Polenzani of Keeper Nagel Inc. of Lake Forest. Vice President is Don Hager, HomeTown Real Estate of Palatine. Secretary-Treasurer is John H. Kehe, Smith Pipenhagen Inc. of Arlington Heights.

New directors are Grant M. Smith, McLennan Co. of Park Ridge; Mike Brudnak, Continental Real Estate Inc. of Elmhurst; Gene Davis, Koenig & Streib, Glenview, and Jack B. Whistler, Bryon Properties, Arlington Heights.

The O'Hare Group is an association of Chicagoland commercial and investment Realtors organized to exchange information on properties currently available in their own areas and techniques on how to better serve their clients needs. At the last meeting of the O'Hare Group George C. Widule of Property Exchange Co. of Milwaukee, Wisconsin led the O'Hare Group in Course No. 1 of the Wisconsin Exchange Club.

Cross over the bridge.

To your own recreational community.

The Crossings in the Buffalo Grove—Long Grove area. It's not just a place to live, but an atmosphere in which to enjoy living. The Richards Group designed it that way.

Think of waking each morning to clean country air and subtle country sounds. Yet be only minutes from the Arlington Heights commuter station. And a few miles from Woodfield and the Antique Village of Long Grove.

In your leisure time, fish and sail in your own sparkling lakes. For more vigorous activities, play a game of tennis. Or take a dip in a refreshing olympic size pool. There's even a clubhouse with a fireplace lounge, card rooms, exercise room, tot room, billiards, and ping pong.

Now, come inside the townhomes of The Crossings, distinctively designed for luxurious relaxation. From the insulated windows to the modern General Electric kitchens, to your own attached garage—convenience is yours. Even your professionally landscaped lot will be maintained by the Homeowner's Association—including snow shoveling and grass cutting.

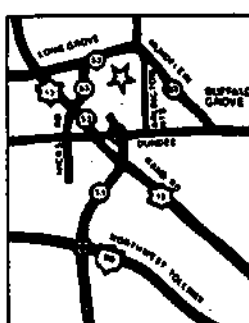

The Crossings is here today for the taking. All you have to do is cross over the bridge.

bers and have access to the wide variety of facilities available.

In addition to the swimming pool and shuffleboard court, Baldwin Court provides a pool table, game and conference rooms, tiny tots playroom and a huge lounge with a double fireplace for comfortable winter entertaining. All mainnance of the clubhouse and the fully landscaped grounds, buildings and other facilities will be handled by a professional staff.

For a price range from $21,900 to $23,500, each Baldwin Court condominium home also includes complete air conditioning; private balcony or patio; choice of carpeting throughout living room, bedrooms and hall; ceramic tile bath; color-coordinated kitchen, and individually controlled gas hot water heating.

Located in a private, fully landscaped setting, each of the 12 condominium buildings features private storage lockers, spacious laundry facilities and an intercom controlled front entrance security system.

Located on Rand Road (U.S. Rte. 12) and Baldwin Road, one-half mile northwest of Ill. Rte. 53 in Palatine, Baldwin Court is convenient to schools, churches, expressways, shopping plus the Chicago and North Western Railroad with regular service to Chicago's Loop.

Models are open Monday through Friday from 10 to 7 and Saturday and Sunday from 11 to 5.

Richard Williams

Williams reaches $1 million - again

Richard R. Williams, owner of Williams Real Estate, recently attained the coveted $1 million in residential sales for 1973. He also has done this in 1970, 1971 and 1972.

At the Illinois Association of Realtors convention at the Marriott Hotel in October, he was awarded Lifetime Membership in the Million Dollar Sales Club. One receives this award after three consecutive years of a million dollars in production.

Williams Real Estate is located in Mount Prospect.

Jack Coad named marketing director

Jack Coad of Park Ridge has recently been appointed marketing director of Prospect Enterprises Inc.-Fredland Developers Inc., both of Mount Prospect.

Cond said they are currently completing sales in Windsor Estates West, a home development in Mount Prospect. Only seven of the original 170 homes remain to be sold.

He also said presales have opened on Frediani's newest development, Lakeside Condominiums; and although the models

Homefinders' offers training course

Homefinders Realtors held a two-week sales training course last week for personnel who recently joined the firm.

Veteran office managers teach the class five days a week from 9 a.m. till 4:30 p.m. Subjects covered during the two-week course include telephone technique, office procedure, contracts, responsibilities of an agent to the public, creative financing, income tax as it pertains to real estate, buyer qualifications, salesmanship, marketing property nationwide through ERA, showing property, and advertising.

Realtor reports record September

Quinian and Tyson's three Northwest Suburban Area Offices have recorded more than $2,344,000 in sales during September.

The huge sales volume, split almost equally between the three offices, represents a more than 11 per cent increase over sales in September, 1972.

Marvin Kamps, Northwest regional manager for Q&T, said the large sales volume demonstrated a high level of activity, despite reports of a difficult mortgage market.

Office. Gladstone, Realtors also has offices in Des Plaines, Villa Park, Franklin Park, Elk Grove Village and Berkeley.

In his new position, Ed will assist management to develop the potential talents and abilities of all personnel. Before joining Gladstone, Westfall was an account executive for a Chicago advertising firm. In this capacity he serviced the south central region for one of their accounts handling advertising and marketing programs of a local level.

He has been active in community theater for a number of years and is a member of Village Theater Inc. of Arlington Heights.

Cosper joins MGM

William C. Cosper has joined MGM Realtors as a salesman in their Northbrook office. Cosper chalked up a record for new MGM salesmen by selling two houses in one day during the first month he represented MGM. Before joining MGM, Cosper was communications and office manager for Toys "R" Us Main office in Niles. The firm recently moved their main offices to New Jersey. Cosper lives in Wheeling.

Two-phase deal for Rubloff firm

Arthur Rubloff & Co., Chicago-based nationwide real estate organization, recently announced the completion of a two-phase transaction on behalf of New York-based Slant/Fin Corp., manufacturers of baseboard heating equipment, in Elk Grove Village.

The first phase covered the long-term subleasing of a 27,200-square-foot building at 2420 Lunt Ave., in Elk Grove Village, to Wallen-Fine Furniture. William A. Lederer of the Rubloff organization and Burton T. Getz of Burton T. Getz & Co. were co-brokers representing the sub-lessee, Slant/Fin. Robert Cole of Robert Cole & Co. represented the sub-lessee, Mark Schwarz of Finley, Kumbie, Underberg, Roth & Grutberg, New York, was legal counsel for Slant/Fin. Attorney Sam Kurland was legal counsel for Wallen-Fine. Upon extensive remodeling Wallen-Fine, with three metropolitan Chicago area stores, will use the Elk Grove Village building as an auxiliary warehouse for their Mount Prospect store. Total term rental was $260,000. The second phase involved the long-term leasing of a recently completed 15,000-square-foot building at 560 Bonnie Ln., Elk Grove Village, to Slant/Fin for midwest offices and distribution facilities. Roger Baum of Gladstone Realty represented the lessor. Rubloff's William Lederer was co-broker for Slant/Fin. Total term rental was nearly $153,000.

Soderstrom joins Baird & Warner

Victor Soderstrom

Hwy., according to Howard E. Kagay, sales manager.

Soderstrom is a licensed real estate broker and has been a resident of Arlington Heights for many years. For the past 14 years he has been active in real estate sales in the northwest suburbs and also served as a sales manager.

He has been honored as a lifetime million dollar member of MAP (Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights & Palatine Multiple Listing Service) and has consistently been designated a $1 Million Club member. Prior to entering the real estate field he was self employed as a general contractor.

Soderstrom is a graduate of U.S. Air Corps College for Cadets at the University of Missouri. He is an associate member of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors and is a member of B.P.O. Elks Club No. 2048, Arlington Heights Lodge.

Soderstrom and his wife, Helen, live in Arlington Heights.

Million in sales for two at Busse

Annen & Busse, Inc. Realtors honor Muriel Hogarty and Rosalie Voras, two additional members of their staff to reach a million dollars in residential real estate sales during the current year.

Muriel Hogarty, serving with Annen & Busse for nine years from their Mount Prospect location, reached this goal during August. She has maintained her million dollar sales status for four consecutive years and has been awarded lifetime membership in the MAP Multiple Listing Service' Million Dollar Sales Club. She also qualifies as a Lifetime Member of the Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards' Million Dollar Sales Club.

Muriel is a charter member and active participant in Women in Real Estate, an organization of professional real estate women. She is also a member of the Annen & Busse President's Club.

Rosalie Voras, a long-time resident of the Chicago area, and a member of the Annen & Busse staff in their Palatine Office, has been with the firm less than three years and has twice been honored for achieving this outstanding accomplishment. She reached her Million Dollar Sales plateau during September. Rosalie is active in quite a number of civic and community organizations in the Palatine area, enabling her to better serve her clients.

Both of these women, as well as all of the Annen & Busse associates, work through the MAP Multiple Listing Service as well as the "Homes for Living Network," the first national multi-list service having representatives in all 50 states and Puerto Rico.

State qualifiers await journey to Peoria

by LARRY EVERHART
Cross Country Editor

It wouldn't be surprising if the state cross country final race Saturday follows the pattern of state basketball and track competition in recent years.

In each case, an overpowering, super team dominated for two years. In basketball it was Thornridge. In track, Evans-ton. And in cross country, York.

But in the former two sports, the domination was ended last year when championship finales became much closer and more wide-open.

And although York looks awfully tough again and has to be considered a favorite — if you believe there should be one — the Dukes could be pushed harder than the last two years when they romped to the title, or could even be dethroned.

Fans will learn whether that possibility comes to pass, starting at 11 a.m. Saturday at the usual state meet site — Dot-weiler Park near Peoria. Course length is 3.0 miles and terrain is mostly flat, which allowed Craig Virgin of Lebanon — winner the last two years — to set an all-time state record last year with an incredible 13:50.

Although that mark probably won't be matched this time around, a few runners could come close. There are some superior individuals as well as several highly-impressive teams entered.

From the Herald area two teams, Fremd and Maine East — plus two individuals, Schaumburg's Arnie Jackson and Maine North's Bill Fancher — will be representatives. The Demons and Jackson are appearing for the second straight year. Fremd just missed going downstate last year, but has been there seven of eight seasons.

It is the Demons and Vikings who were considered most likely to make it, and it is they who have had the strongest harrier tradition through the years, which means a lot at this stage. As Fremd coach Ron Menely has pointed out, tradition is a great motivating force. Boys today run for what their predecessors have done.

But other schools, besides York, which are expected to be in the thick of the battle, are Riverside-Brookfield and Glenbard West. Besides tabbing York as favorite, it is fruitless to even guess at an order of finish, but the best five seem apparent.

Reasons for York being favored are their tremendous tradition (five state harrier titles in the last 11 years), their discipline and great coach Joe Newton, and the fact that they romped to victory in the Peoria Invitational last month, a meet which included every top team in the state except Riverside-Brookfield.

Jackson did not run in that meet, but a simple comparison of times on different courses says he has a chance at the top prize. There are other outstanding individuals, though, and any finish in the top five is a tremendous honor in this one.

Arnie was 11th in the finale last year and only six seconds behind the fifth-place man. He now has the experience of being there, easily won last Saturday's sectional (in which he was third last year) and, besides winning several invitational, has been unbeaten in all Mid-Suburban League competition for two years.

Many times Jackson's victory margin has been between 30 seconds and a full minute and he has run 14:20 for three miles, which not many have. He ran 14:36 downstate last year. The runner-up ran 14:20.

Fancher was the next-best Herald area individual in the sectional with eighth.

Fremd's finishers in that one, who have also been their best all fall, were Mike Rohrer (18th), Mike Scott (25), Chuck Ruppenthal (27), Wil Fieldhouse (31) and Jim Galls (35).

These places would not be especially impressive in many sectionals, but they were at Fremd because competition was the best of any such meet in the state. Everyone's times were slowed, however, because of rain and cold.

Menely remarked, "The problem is to not leave your race in the sectional because it is so much pressure and such tough competition."

"Everyone needs a week's mental rest after this. I think we can run a relaxed race downstate. We just want to run like we're capable and see what the others do."

"Our goal is to take a trophy, which means the top three. It's a tough year to do it. York and R-B won their sectionals, too. But we feel we've got the material and conditioning to stay with them."

"I think we're being overlooked by those teams because York beat us so easily at Peoria. That's great. It leaves us in a good position."

"We had a 16-second spread in the sectional for the first five guys. If we just move everyone up a little, we'll be all right."

Maine East is led by Lloyd Spitzer, who was second in the Central Suburban League meet and 13th in the sectional. Other top Demons are Dave Jenkins, Tim Glanos, John Hinterhauser and Mark Tomasik. The latter two are only sophomores.

This will be Spitzer's third state meet and second each for Jenkins, Glanos and Tomasik.

"Even though we'll probably be the youngest team there, we do have as much experience as anybody," said coach John Coughlan.

"I really think Fremd and we will be in the top five. We can win it if we run well. We're really excited about the opportunity we have. Some teams have four or five good guys, but Fremd and we are both seven-man teams."

Hersey has 'insurance' this time

(Ed.'s note: First of a two-part series on the teams that will play in Super Bowl IV, Nov. 9.)

Until some team proves otherwise, Hersey has shown to be the class of the Mid-Suburban League.

Take away the defensive lapse in the last seconds of the St. Vitor game and the Huskies would be unbeaten and ranked right up there with powerful (no TD's given up yet) New Trier East.

Two weeks ago they rolled over Wheeling, 62-0. That didn't convince some people for the Wildcats have only won once in two seasons.

The Hocking Meadows game last Friday made believers out of the skeptics. Here was a Mustang team that had whipped Arlington, traditionally tough, by an almost unheard of score — 54-22. The Huskies handled the Mustangs with ease, 45-12.

Why have they won a third straight North Division title? Opposing coaches usually point to four reasons for this team's success:

- Mark Zakula, a quarterback with all-state potential.
- The half dozen move-ins this past summer.

- A superb offensive line.
- A "no-name" defense, ala the Miami Dolphins, which has held seven opponents to just 67 points.

Of these reasons, the second seems the most intriguing to some observers. Just how much have these move-ins contributed to Hersey's juggernaut team?

If the Mayflower or Allied trucks had never rumbled into the drawing area for the high school, according to Gliwa, the Huskies still would have had a formidable football team.

"This (wealth of move-ins) is giving us added insurance for getting the job (the MSL championship) done," said the Huskies' coach.

"The integral part of the team was there to start with. Players like Zakula, Mark Krause (fullback), Tim Loch (center), Ray Bernatt and Kevin Temesey (guards), Jeff Reinhard and Mark Drogenmuller (tackles) and most of the defensive team."

Still, what coach wouldn't be happy to see four starters materialize out of six move-ins: Helping make a good team a great one have been the following:

- Jim Spicuzza — Milwaukee all-city offense with one paper and all-city defense with another last year. Presently he's tied for first in the league in rushing average (7.5), ranks second in rushing yardage (619) and is third in total offense.

- Jeff Forster — A starter on each level at Waukegan High School. Considered a fine blocker by Gliwa and a very capable runner — good enough to crack Hersey's talented backfield.

Radio coverage of Elk Grove, Schaumburg game

Who will represent the South Division in the Mid-Suburban League championship football game?

Elk Grove and Schaumburg high schools battle for that honor Friday evening at the Grenadier field.

WMM-FM of Arlington Heights will be at Elk Grove to broadcast the action, with WM Director of Sports Bud Kelly handling the play-by-play and Herald Sports Editor Bob Frisk the color commentary.

The broadcast is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. at 92.7 on the FM dial.

- Bill Hare — A varsity player for Enola, Pa. Presently alternates with another offensive end.

- Duggan McLaughlin — A varsity halfback on both offense and defense for North Shore Woods, Tenn. This defensive safety is called a "headhunter" by Gliwa.

Put this foursome on some of the have-nots in the league and they would have had better records.

Why don't the moving vans stop somewhere else? Why did their parents pick Hersey?

One parent admitted that he looked for the best football school first before buying a home.

"We knew this school district (Dist. 214) was No. 1 in football," said one father, referring possibly to Elk Grove's mythical state championship last year.

Joe Gliwa

"We purposely picked out a good school with the help of the real estate agent."

"We visited different district sites — Palatine, Schaumburg, Elk Grove and Hersey. We almost were in Elk Grove," he continued, but added that they didn't make the move there because of the "air traffic." It's (the Hersey area) a little bit easier on the ears."

The others mentioned being concerned mainly with the school district and finding out that Hersey was their school afterwards.

"I read about the Super Bowl game," said one dad, recalling one of his trips here prior to the move. "I brought the Herald papers back and my son said he'd like to play in it this year."

They moved to Mount Prospect. Had they settled closer to Prospect High School, he'd be watching the MSL title game from the stands.

"Most of the high schools were excellent as far as I was concerned," said another. Now he added that he realized Hersey was different from the rest, especially as far as football is concerned. "We couldn't be happier."

One real estate man who is familiar with the influence athletics has in choosing a home had this to say:

"They (Hersey) have got a good thing going for them — a good reputation. Some people come in and say, 'I understand Hersey has a good athletic program.' Their good band is pretty well known, too."

"In this area (the drawing location for Hersey), there's a greater cross section of homes. It's attractive to the white collar executive transfer."

Hersey's got a lot going for itself right now. Although still considered new (six years old), it is already old in tradition. Thanks to an able athletic director in Dick Kinnehan, a solid coaching staff and a good group of athletes from the school splits, it's been successful from the start.

The strongest overall varsity sports program the past two years has earned the school the Paddock Cup, symbol of athletic supremacy in the MSL. Alongside the giant trophy are many state awards as well as conference trophies (basketball, baseball, wrestling and gymnastics).

Gliwa would love to add a piece of gridiron glitter to the glistening foyer.

(NEXT WEEK: Hersey's Super Bowl foe)

WINNER AND STILL CHAMP. Schaumburg's Arnie Jackson continued his brilliant cross country season with an easy victory in Saturday's Sectional in rain and cold. This year is the first time he has won District and Sectional titles after being undefeated two straight years in the tough Mid-Suburban League. He is one of the top individuals going into this Saturday's state final in Peoria. (Photo by Jay Needleman)

Chicago Cards hockey entry to play here

The Canadians are coming, nearly 200 of them headed by an official from the Canadian Consulate's office in Chicago, to cheer on the Toronto Spurs when they meet the Chicago Cardinals pro hockey team.

Game time is 7:30 p.m. this Saturday, Nov. 3 and Sunday in the new Randhurst Metro Sports Ice Stadium in Mount Prospect, at highway 83 and Rand Road.

Joining the Cardinals for the opening game for both teams will be two former members of the Chicago Warriors, Ron Byrne who plays right wing and Gene Stoney, a defenseman. Several more are expected to try out for the team, said Ron Pretlac, general manager of the Cardinals.

In their two years in Chicago, the Cardinals have won 56 games against 14 losses and one tie. Pretlac urged fans to come cheer on the Chicago team which for the first time is playing in the north-west suburbs.

All 34 home games for the Cardinals will be played in the new Randhurst Stadium where the Chicago Nordics in the Midwest Junior "A" League, under coach Kenny Wharram, now are playing.

Pretlac said that most of the players on the team have come out of Canadian Junior "A" or college hockey and many who might have professional hockey ability decided instead to pursue a business career.

Players on the teams have an average age of 27. They are lawyers, business consultants, salesmen, engineers and in other professions.

He said the Toronto team essentially has the same calibre of players who thought they could make more money and further themselves by going into business rather than into hockey.

"Both the Chicago Cardinals and Toronto Spurs are just a step below the pro leagues," he added. He said the Cardinals this year will be passing the puck a lot and have a lot of end-to-end rushes. "We like to control the puck," he stated.

Tickets for the games Saturday and Sunday may be purchased at the door at $3.50 for adults and $2 for children.

Harper, Oakton set for Skyway; reach nationals

Oakton and Harper of the Skyway Conference will send their cross-country teams to the national junior college finals on Saturday, Nov. 10, in Tallahassee, Fla.

The two local schools qualified at last weekend's Region IV NJCAA meet in Elgin. Five teams advance to Florida from Region IV. Last week's totals in the 16-team field at Elgin showed Lincoln-Land 51, DuPage 60, Parkland 120, Oakton 166 and Harper 170.

Triton of the Skyway Conference placed eighth with 215 points, Wright Junior College of Chicago was ninth at 237. Neither advances to Tallahassee.

The Skyway Conference will bring its season to a close with the league meet at 3:30 p.m., Friday, in Schiller Park Woods. Standings after all dual meets show Harper (7-0) first, Triton (6-1) second and Oakton (5-2) third.

In Region IV finals, Harper place winners were Mike DeLaBruere fourth, Tom Fath ninth, John Jones 17th, Jim Simoniak 55th and John Bone 83th. Oakton placed Joe Cosentino 19th, Tom Wright 20th, Tom Kropf 29th, Dan Maher 40th and Frank Bailes 58th. Oakton's Scott Sedlak placed 78th but did not figure in the Raider team scoring.

FROM HUSKIE TO HAWK. John Jones, a former Hersey cross country runner, has been No. 3 man all season for Harper College as a freshman. He and the first two, Mike DeLaBruere and Tom Fath, should be near the top in Friday's Skyway Conference meet at Schiller Woods. DuPage and Harper are the favorites. In the recent Region state championship meet, Jones was 16th among 120 runners with 21:43 for 4.1 miles.

SENIOR DIVISION

Beats 11 - Lions 6
The Bears, for the fourth straight game, piled up more than 200 yards, and over 2000 total yards for the year, in winning the Senior Division championship. Defensively, the Bears allowed 329 yards for the year and a total of 15 points. Fumble recoveries Sunday were by Dan Hildreth, Tracy West, Chuck Hunsner and Tim Lee.

Cardinals 6 - Packers 0
The Cardinals blanked the Packers. Paul Ryan returned a punt 60 yards for the only score of the game.

The Packer ground game was a constant threat with the line running of Jeff Patterson, Dave LaCourse, John Fredericks and John Mischewich.

Giants 6 - Hawks 0

The Giants' touchdown was scored by Bill Hutton on a seven-yard quarterback draw. Pass receptions of 27 and 33 yards were completed by Rob Overstreet, and Mike Veselling snagged two for 21 and 10 yards. Jeff Taylor got a hand on a booming punt and limited it to 18 yards. Ron Neager and Pat Doyle each recovered a fumble. Lawlor led in defensive points with 10, with Doyle, Veselling and Jeff West each getting 9 apiece.

Chiefs 12 - Redskins 1

The Chiefs won the Junior National League championship with a hard-fought victory over the Redskins. The offense controlled the ball as they scored in their second offensive play, on a 64 yard end sweep by Mike Meyer en route to stalling out nine first downs. They broke the game open by taking the second half kickoff and marching 50 yards for their final touchdown in a drive featuring a 13 yard pass to Greg Miller and a 22 yard touchdown run by Bill Slavinski on fourth down and goal to go. Pat Byrne, Mark Shupatke and Steve Fandel led the team in tackles as they keyed a strong defensive effort by the entire team. Steve Brucki recovered the only Redskins fumble.

Chiefs 11 - Cowboys 0

The Chiefs with an incredible performance and a total team effort walked off with the American Junior Division championship. The second consecutive year, Mark Smolan earned over 100 yards rushing in the first quarter and scored three times on runs of 2, 23 and 5 yards. Tony Falduto started the scoring in the second quarter with a 43 yard pass reception thrown by Smolan. QB Tim Minton, who has led the Chiefs attack all year, tossed a 28 yard TD pass to Smolan, ending the half. Jeff Lowe beat the Cowboy defense and pulled down a Smolan pass and raced into the end zone completing a 38 yard TD pass. Scott Lapevich contributed to the scoring when he broke off tackle and ran 21 yards and across the goal. Falduto, taking a Tim Minton pass, went 29 yards for his second TD. Mike O'Callaghan, Smolan and Lowe added the extra points. The Red Machine defense, in the second half, played the line play and notched their fourth shut out of the season. It overcame fumbles by Kevin Minton, Dan Slavinski, Scott Lapevich and Tim Minton, who also had two pass interceptions.

Steelers 7 - Raiders 6

The Steelers clinched second place in the Junior American Division by beating a much improved Raiders eleven, but losing by Jeff Nelson's 20 yard pop up the right side and Curt Thomas' Calais important extra point. Two plays earlier, Nelson set up his touchdown when he intercepted a Raiders pass and ran the ball back 25 yards. Mike Johnson recovered a fumble. Jeff Miller, Steve Schurr and Phil Toepfer had the most unassisted tackles.

The Raiders finished their first winning season with perhaps their best effort ever. Although losing to the Steelers, they displayed the pride and poise that has been growing all season. The defense was excellent, allowing only the single score after an interception early in the fourth quarter. The Raiders went 45 yards in six plays to come within one point of a draw.

Jets 36 - Rams 6

Pat Laurski, pined the Jets with three touchdowns. Chuck Arnsfeld scored twice and Mike Bardi got one. Fumble recoveries were picked up by Bardi and Shudron Laurski, Bill and Giff each intercepted an enemy pass. While going down to defeat, the Rams showed a valiant defensive effort. Jeff Fender recovered a fumble. Andrew Bennett intercepted a pass and Joe Pizzo and Eric Marly man were the leading tacklers.

Chiefs 30 - Browns 13

The Chiefs scored in every quarter to defeat the Browns. Chip Crooks threw scoring passes to Tom Treppert and Dave Rogers. Mark Norris ran 24 yards for another score while Bob Minton ran 25 yards for one TD and received a lateral from Treppert for another.

Falcons 28 - Vikings 6

The Fighting Falcons blanked the Vikings. Field general Tom Wolkiewicz drew first blood in a quarterbacking role, and tipped a pass to John Gierzen all alone for the P.A.T. Chris Montibano made a shambles of the defense on a 27 yard, and an 18 yard runner, breaking a wild tie to make for pay dirt. Bobby J. a Falcon powered his way for the P.A.T. and Keith Davis, on a delay, carried two defenders into the end zone to end the game on a touchdown.

BANTAM DIVISION

Brutus 12 - Hawkeyes 0

The Brutus completed their second year as an undefeated team. Brad Kay scored on a 10 yard run and a 20 yard pass play from Jay Kivick. The hard tackling defense allowed only 12 points all year. Bob Seabarth had an interception and Terry VanRooyen a fumble recovery.

Key injuries and sickness over the past three weeks left the comeback Hawkeyes team vulnerable against the champion Gophers and Brutus.

Gophers 15 - Wolverines 0

The Gophers, co-champs with the Brutus for the American Bantam Division now have three straight championships. Tom Maloney opened the scoring with a two yard sneak and then flipped a pass to Randy Bachman for the extra point. The Gopher Green Machine scored the second touchdown when Maloney flipped a five yard scoring strike to Bill Nicholson. Glenn Garlick led the defense with eight solo tackles with Tim Vail and Mike Hissell recovering fumbles.

Wolverine Dave Kotol ran for 37 yards.

Hollersmakers 19 - Huskies 0

Congratulations to the Bantam National Division champions — the Hollersmakers. Ken Luanski scored two TDs. John Koepke scored a TD as Greg Franzen and Dave Ochuh opened a big gap in the line. Koepke also blocked a punt. Steve Langel and Dave Hlib interrupted Hollers passes and Engel scored an extra point. Steve Scott kicked four times for significant yardage and Bob Sloma kept the Hollers deep in their territory with his long punts.

Badgers 10 - Hints 11

The Badgers and Hints knocked heads in one of the best games of the season. Badger Pete Murphy scored the first of his two long touchdowns on a 20 yard double reverse, the excellent ball handling and taking by Barker Jamie McGough was the key to the whole play. Murphy carried in for the extra point. After the Hints scored their second TD, they kicked off to John Lauvum, who looked like he was shot out of a cannon on a 60 yard TD run. Murphy carried in for the extra point. Late in the fourth quarter Murphy took a Brian Korf pitchout and outran all the defenders for a 42 yard TD, and finished the game with 167 yards running. Interceptions by Murphy, and Korf led the Badger defense against a good Hints team.

A pass completion thrown by Todd Matthias enabled Jim Bennum to make an electrifying run of 28 yards for an Hints touchdown, with Bill Schmitt zipping over for the extra point. Scott Kerbs streaked down the sideline to gain 40 yards, enabling Steve

Spartans 27 - Huskies 6

The Spartans finished a successful season by winning over the Huskies. Doug Wolfe carried the ball for two TDs while Billy Tubbs scored seven points and Brian Krauss six.

Quick hitting Mike Hinciriff racked up a two point safety. Key interceptions by Cory

Douglas and Dave Mages set the scene for two of the four scoring opportunities.

Wildcats 13 - Hawks 0

The Wildcats played one of their best games of the season. Charlie Jennings scored a TD, with Marc Zielinski running in the extra point. John Altman got the other six points.

Charity cards reflect true Christmas spirit

"The purchase of this card represents a contribution to the Association for retarded children."

"The children cared for by the Illinois Children's Home and Aid Society benefit from this Christmas wish."

"This card represents a gift to the American Cancer Society."

Holiday cards with footnotes such as these are appearing more and more each year as senders choose to purchase cards that reflect the true spirit of Christmas — compassion for others less fortunate or in need.

Cards purchased from charitable organizations can help an underprivileged or retarded child. They can help eradicate a dread disease, help research a mysterious cause of death in infants or help a hospital help the sick.

During the past decade many charities have made Christmas cards available to the public, a few of which are reprinted here.

Prices are competitive and at least a portion of your donation helps humanity. It also provides a tax deduction.

AMONG THE MOST popular of cards that benefit charity are the UNICEF (United Nations Children's Fund) cards. UNICEF, which works to remove the burdens of disease, hunger, ignorance and despair borne by millions of children throughout Asia, Africa and Latin America, offered its first benefit card 21 years ago.

As in the past, this year's selection reproduces designs that span the globe and a millennium of artistic genius. Cards run the gamut from a reproduction of a Peruvian folk art nativity scene to photos, wood cuts and lithographs, to animal scenes and humorous art.

Most cards, in boxes of 12, are $2. An assortment of 25 cards with a minimum of eight designs popular from past years sell for $3. A few sell at six cards for $2.50.

MEMBERS OF THE League of Women Voters are selling the UNICEF cards. Mary Duncan of the Arlington Heights League is taking orders at 394-9158; Renate Proll of the Des Plaines League, at 294-6003; Joanne Minuti of the newly formed Hoffman-Schaumburg League, at 694-0030.

League members report that the purchase of only one box of cards can supply enough vaccine to protect 72 children against smallpox. Proceeds from a single card can pay the freight on enough dried milk to make 35 glasses of liquid milk.

STAR (SUBURBAN Townships Association for the Retarded), which serves Elk Grove, Maine, Palatine, Schaumburg and Wheeling townships, has a collection of 14 cards priced from $2.50 to $4.50 per 25 cards. Imprinting is 50 cents additional for 25 cards.

Selection is varied, ranging from quaint to religious and scenic. Some of the available designs were created by mentally retarded persons, including those shown.

A phone call to 593-1531, 296-2307 or 392-5687 will bring a STAR representative with card samples.

Proceeds support national and state associations which lobby for the welfare of the retarded; locally, proceeds aid Clearbrook and Kirk Centers.

TINY DEER foraging in a peaceful winter woodland warmed by a bright golden sun set the scene for the holiday card offered by Illinois Children's Home and Aid Society. The modern-type card bears the simple message, "Wishing you all the joys of the holiday season."

The cards are sold in multiples of 25, costing $25 for 100. Imprinting on cards only is $5 per 100, envelopes only, $7. For an additional charge Society volunteers will address and mail cards from lists furnished by the purchaser.

Sherri Nilson, 397-4067, president of Countryside Auxiliary of the ICHA, is taking orders.

NORTHWEST COMMUNITY in Arlington Heights is the only area hospital with a special card this year. Designed by local artist Christi Hansen of Mount Prospect, the card, an original charcoal, depicts two children gazing at the Christmas star.

The auxiliary of the hospital is offering the card through Mrs. Walter Pugh, 358-0202. Without imprint, the card sells for $5 per box of 25.

While members of Alexian Brothers Medical Center Auxiliary do not have a special card, inserts explaining the hospital benefits are available with the purchase of any of the cards offered in a book of 48 selections. Prices range from $12 per 100 to $50 per 100. Imprinting is extra. Virginia DuBeau, 760-6737, is in charge of orders.

A BRIGHT RED Christmas bow with a sprig of holly on a background of ivory moire is the card chosen this year by the American Cancer Society. The cards, 25 to a box, are available for $12 per box. Imprinting for 100 cards or less is $2 plus 50 cents an order for an added second line.

Those wishing a sample card and detailed price list may call the Society's Palatine office, 358-3963.

A SELECTION of four cards is offered by the Chicago Heart Association. There is no minimum order and imprinting is included at no extra cost. A winter scene sells for 25 cents per card; a flocked card with white doves and another with colorful wreath, $35 cents; flocked card with gold partridge, 50 cents.

Virginia Hunter of the Heart Association's North Cook County office will send a flyer with pictures of the cards and an order blank to all who phone her at 675-1535.

YOUTH GUIDANCE, a professional youth counseling agency of the Episcopal Diocese and the Church Federation of Greater Chicago, which receives aid from the Crusade of Mercy, has its own card custom designed from original art.

It features doves of peace in white on brilliant purple. The envelope is a harmonizing shade of purple. A sample of the card, which sells for $2.50 per 25, half price over last year, is available by phoning 427-1082.

AS IN THE PAST, cards benefiting Little City in Palatine have been designed by residents of the foundation. All are priced at $5 for 25 cards with an extra charge for imprinting. There are four cards, one with two little children pulling a sleigh, the others with a snowman, partridge and a church. Sample cards are available by calling 358-3510. Orders may also be placed at this number.

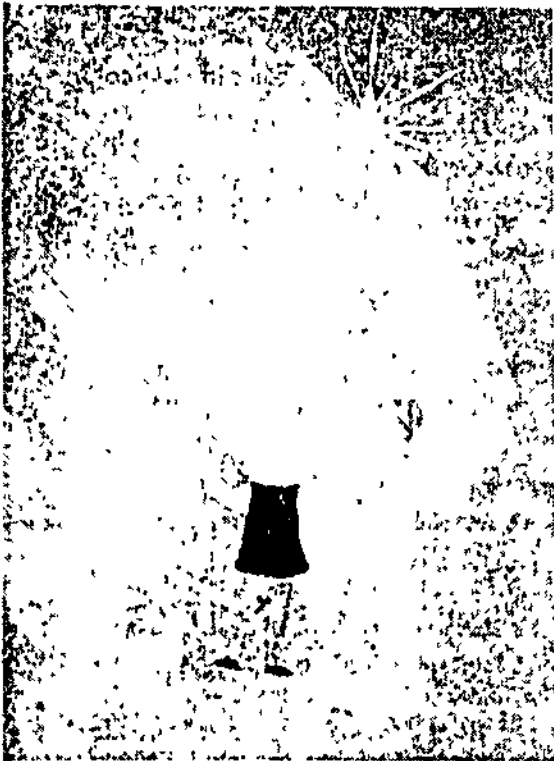

The Christmas card offered by Sudden Infant Death Syndrome is a flocked card with two white doves perched on an evergreen bough with flame and yellow flowers. Boxes of 25 sell for $3.75 and there is an 80 cent shipping charge per order. Those wishing information about the SIDS card may call 259-1167.

A MODERN ART card, white with gold and green kings and a manger, is offered by the Lutheran Welfare Services of Illinois. The cards which normally retail for 20 cents each are available with any contribution one wishes to make.

Those wishing the cards may send an order with donation to Lutheran Welfare Services, 189 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill., 60602. The cards will be delivered direct from the printers to your home. No orders are taken by phone.

WHILE THE purchase of cards that directly benefits a given charity and thus provides a tax deduction for the purchaser is on the increase, so is the purchase of cards that indirectly benefits a church or charity group.

In the latter, cards are selected from one or more Christmas card catalog books and the sponsoring or selling organization receives a commission on the sale. Although the cards do not state that the purchase represents a specific contribution, proceeds do go to the sponsoring group which may have a local, national or international charity to which it contributes.

Bride wears mother's golden cross

A 40-year-old gold cross belonging to her mother complemented the sate peau gown worn by Patricia M. Bader when she became the bride Oct. 8 of Kenneth C. Frey. The couple's double ring wedding took place in St. Raymond's Catholic Church in a 2:30 nuptial mass.

Daughter of the Elmer Baders, 108 S. Edward St., Mount Prospect, Pat and Ken, son of the Fred Nelsons of Chicago, met at a ski club in Morton Grove during the winter of 1971.

A '67 graduate of Prospect High, Pat studied a year at Northern Illinois University, DeKalb, and is now with Allstate Insurance Co., Northbrook. Ken studied two years at Carthage College, Kenosha, Wis., and is with Honeywell, Arlington Heights.

Pat's gown featured a wide Alencon lace panel down the bodice and the A-line skirt. A lace-covered mantilla held her long mantilla veil, and she carried white roses, stephanotis, white carnations, Starburst mums and baby's breath.

CORINNE CRUMRINE, Elk Grove

Mr. and Mrs. William Hopkins

Village, was matron of honor, and bridesmaids were Avis Thornton, Chicago; Carole Racanskyk, Palatine; and Kathy Baker, Rockford. All wore apricot crepe gowns trimmed in white Val lace. They carried apricot carnations, baby's breath and white Stardust and melen pos with ivy. They wore apricot mums and baby's breath in their hair.

David Hansen, Mount Prospect, was best man, and ushers were Richard Williams, Wheeling; Scott McIntosh, Greenfield, Wis.; and William Surmin, Hoffman Estates.

The reception was held in the Navarone Restaurant, Elk Grove, where 175 guests greeted the couple. Pat and Ken honeymooned in New Orleans for a week and are now making their home in Wheeling.

A New England wedding trip

A 10-day trip to Cape Cod and the New England states was the honeymoon for Karen Kelly and William Hopkins. The pair were married Oct. 8 in an 11:30 a.m. service in Lutheran Church of the Holy Spirit, Elk Grove Village. The double ring service was followed by a reception for 50 guests in Two Knights Restaurant, Itasca.

Karen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Kelly, 546 Crest Ave., Elk Grove, and William, son of Mrs. Arthur Kohl, Oak Park now make their home in Arlington Heights.

For her wedding Karen chose a princess gown of white silk tulle with square neckline trimmed in Venice lace and with lace panels from neckline to hem. The long sleeves ended in petal cuffs finished with matching lace. Bands of lace trimmed the chapel train and her elbow-length mantilla was held by a Juliet cap of Venice lace. She carried nosegay of pink and white roses.

ONLY ATTENDANT to Karen was her sister, Lynn, who wore a floor-length gown with shocking pink crepe bodice and white chiffon skirt. White lace trimmed the collar and the cuffs of the long sleeves. Her nosegay was of pink and white roses with purple trim.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth C. Frey

Arnie Lerner, Mount Prospect, was best man.

A graduate of Elk Grove High School, Karen studied at Western Illinois. Her bridegroom studied two years at Loyola University, Chicago.

Invite newcomers to coffee tonight

Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Welcome Wagon Newcomers Club is hosting an informal coffee tonight for prospective members, to acquaint them with the club and its activities.

Women who are new residents of the area are invited to DeAnn Glover's, 8 Amhurst Court, Buffalo Grove, for the 8 o'clock gathering.

Further details are available from her at 537-7401.

Tea is canceled

Because remodeling at the Park Ridge School for Girls in Park Ridge has not been completed, today's tea at the school has been canceled. Invited were clubwomen of 7th district.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: I have a lovely patch of parsley and wonder if there is a way to preserve it for future use — maybe even freeze it.

—Myrtle Vollman.

Sure, but there are other things you can do, too. One is to pot some of it and have it on your windowsill all winter. Another is to dry the leaves, as a lot of us do. Rinse well, put the leaves in a flat pan and every time the oven is used and turned off, the pan goes in. This done several times, the leaves come out absolutely dry and go into tightly sealed glass jars. Of course, they can be used only in cooking, but this goes for the freezing, too. In freezing, clean some tender sprigs, cutting off the tough stems. Pack in small airtight containers in layers so the leaves can be taken apart easily.

Dear Dorothy: Here's another use for the granules used to line kitten boxes — and should delight many people. Use it to deodorize shoes and boots — particularly men's work shoes. Fill the shoes with granules, then bury under more granules. One day's treatment does the trick and the shoes lose all odor of perspiration and mildew. Not only that, but for some reason the odor doesn't seem to build up as quickly as before the treatment.

—Louise Woodruff.

Dear Dorothy: Is there a trick to keep drop cookies from spreading too much?

—Martha Tippet

If the dough is too sticky, add more flour. If the eggs are too large, cut down a little on the other liquid. Don't overbeat the dough. If the recipe calls for baking soda, don't use more than called for (this, too, is a common cause of spreading). The dough should be cold, as should the cookie sheet — and this shouldn't be greased. Be sure to test one batch to make sure both rack and heat are right.

The Consumer

by Monica Wilch

Did you ever buy a new car only to have the bumper fall off on the way home? Or the brakes fail to operate? Or the power windows jam?

This column is conducting a survey of problems encountered by new car owners during the first year of ownership. If you have had trouble relating to the quality or safety of a new car, please send a description of your experience, including make and model of the car, the dealer involved and your name, address and phone number, to: The Consumer, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill., 60006.

SPEAKING OF defective automobiles, columnist Jack Anderson has added his voice to others demanding safer design and positioning of automobile gas tanks. Says Anderson, "Between 2,000 and 3,500 Americans are burned to death in auto accidents every year . . . the victims of poor engineering and government indifference."

According to Anderson, tests filmed for the U.S. government show that upon rear end impact, gas tanks located near the rear of the car rupture, spewing gas into the car and on the road. When ignited by sparks from the impact, the burning gas quickly cremates occupants of the car.

Yet, Anderson charges, the major automobile manufacturers have refused to heed these and other tests, including their own, and relocate the gas tank over the axle. General Motors, he reported, is even moving its tank further back.

INTERESTINGLY, Anderson observed, auto racing, which the auto industry supports for the alleged purpose of auto safety research, has long had strict requirements to avoid unnecessary fire.

The National Association for Stock Car

New car gripe? Tell us about it

Auto Racing, Anderson said, requires racing autos to have a "firewall of steel not less than 20 gauge thickness," and a gas tank "as far forward as possible in the trunk compartment."

Anderson noted that the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety and Ralph Nader's Center for Auto Safety have presented their findings on fuel systems to the Transportation Department, and have been supported in Congress by Rep. John Moss, D-Calif.

But, says Anderson, the Big Three automakers have responded only by "vigorously defending the safety of their cars," and the Transportation Department has largely ignored the issue.

Show abortion films at Wayside Sunday, Nov. 11

"Abortion — a Woman's Decision," a film depicting a pregnant teenager who must decide whether to have her baby or abort it, will be shown at 3 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 11, in the Junior High School Auditorium of Wayside Church, 400 S. Ridge, Arlington Heights. The film is from Clergy Concerned for Life.

So that parents can be familiar with the type of films shown in high schools that advocate the ease of abortion, the Planned Parenthood film, "Each Child Loved," will also be shown.

Speakers will include Marey Sneed, vice president of the Illinois Right to Life Committee and founder and director of Prospective and Adoptive Parents of America, and John Langhenry, jurisdicator and author of the law brief which declared Dr. Bart Heffernan guardian of the unborn in Illinois. Both Mrs. Sneed and Mr. Langhenry are members of the Wayside parish.

Brochures and pamphlets will be available during the evening.

Small incomes

Nearly three out of 10 families, 28 per cent headed by women, had annual incomes of less than $3,000 in 1971, says the latest report on women workers from the U.S. Department of Labor.

The Potting Shed

by Mary B. Good

This week's originally scheduled column is being shelved till next week in deference to Carl Klehm. A giant in the world of horticulture. A most unforgettable man.

I can still see Carl wearing his favorite tired brown suit, streaking around his Arlington Heights nursery. When he shouted a greeting across the geranium benches to dropper-liners, his gravelly voice boomed enthusiasm, vitality, friendship. If he ever talked to his plants, it must have been a verbal caress of sandpaper. The voice was only a surface comment; he was a sensitive person, open to everyone.

HE WAS ALWAYS surrounded by people, yet he relished being alone with Lois, his wife. He lived for his precious few quiet moments. He always arose at the crack of dawn, and usually took an icy dip in the little lake outside the beautiful home he built for Lois. He was devoted to his wife, she an equally fascinating person, who shared his awareness of God's beautiful creation. They were drawn to each other like a bumblebee to a flower, since the day he gifted her with her first box of candy in the fifth grade.

Carl Klehm espoused the ethic of hard work, of days crowded with a million activities, gone too soon, passed too fast. You wonder how such enormous meat-hooks could do such delicate work as hybridizing and transplanting seedlings, yet through the skill of those hands and the creativity of his brain, his contributions to the development of the peony and other species were enormous.

HE WAS NO PANSY. Carl Klehm, a virile, aggressive, resilient hollyhock of a man. He loved business as competition and as a tester of moral strength and human fibre.

He was a community leader, a bank director, a business tycoon, a famed nurseryman, yet he was totally devoid of pretentiousness. He didn't attend to glamour or elegance. He was refreshingly genuine.

Carl Klehm had a most dynamic personality. He oozed charisma. When he walked into a room, the room blossomed.

His heart was as big as he was. His pastor eulogized him as one of "God's great children." He was so loved that lines of people waited two hours to file past his bier for a last farewell. If you were his friend, you never again had to ask yourself whether anybody liked you.

HE GAMBLED with people, he took chances. He kept himself open, don't you see, he allowed himself to feel.

You ended with a beautiful man, his face etched by feelings, each line a memory, a story of his interaction with other people.

He lived passionately and purely, but with an obsessive sense of fleeting time, as if life was ticking away. On Oct. 22 it did.

Change location of flea market

The date's the same but the place is changed.

The pre-holiday flea market being arranged for Sunday, Nov. 18, by the women of Unity Northwest Church, Arlington Heights, will be held at Rand Junior High School, 2550 N. Arlington Heights Road, Arlington.

Former plans called for the market's location at Jack London Junior High in Wheeling. Hours will be the same 1 to 3 p.m.

The churchwomen are renting 7x7-foot spaces for $5 each to anyone wishing to sell merchandise. It may be handmade articles, white elephants, anything at all that's worth selling.

Reservations can be made by calling 885-7053 or 394-0260.

Cowboys don't sleep in baby beds

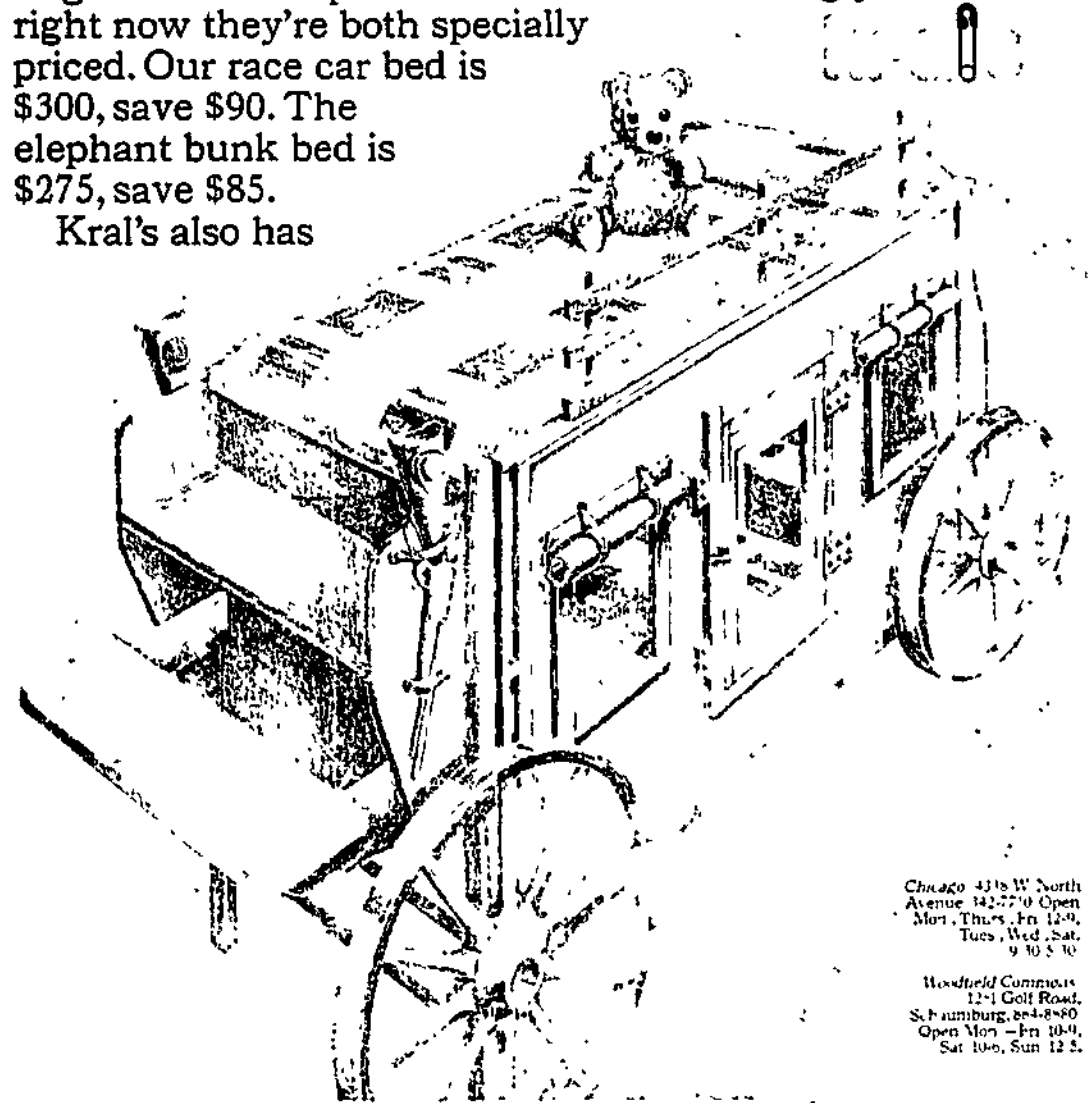

A stagecoach just pulled into Kral's. You'd take it for the real thing. Except that it has bunk beds and bookcases. The stagecoach is only one of our imaginative approaches to children's beds.

We also have Indy racers and bright colored elephants. And right now they're both specially priced. Our race car bed is $300, save $90. The elephant bunk bed is $275, save $85.

Kral's also has traditional and contemporary styles of cribs and beds for infants to teens from all the best known manufacturers.

But if you were a cowboy riding the range all day, where would you rather hang your hat?

Suburbia must also face growth of urban crime

(This column is presented by Forest Hospital in Des Plaines, a fully accredited 125-bed psychiatric hospital widely known for its intensive programs in psychiatric treatment, research, education and community service.)

The high rate of urban crime poses great concern for the general population. Crime in the cities does not affect city dwellers alone. It often affects the suburbanite who works in the city as well. And if crime rates have risen as the population of cities has grown — what does that portend for the continually expanding suburbs?

Dr. Harold Feldman, director of the Quinn Rehabilitation Program for drug addicts at the Essex County (N.J.) Penitentiary has been studying factors contributing to crime in Newark and has come up with some interesting ideas about why crimes are committed and how they can be deterred.

"We're talking about stranger-to-stranger crimes: murder, atrocious assault and battery, rape, sexual attacks. Murder can occur," he explained, "within the family or among people who know each other. The crimes we're talking about are mostly those of assault — that is robbery with an armed weapon where murder results in the process of the robbery or the crime of rape."

"THESE CRIMES are often the result of poor social relations or poor mental health care. In Newark, for instance the high crime rate can be attributed to the poverty and the black and white struggle. Many of the Blacks in Newark come from the South where they were lacking certain advantages, facilities — they were suppressed in most endeavors."

"So they come North with a chip on their shoulders believing they have to reach out for what they can get. They reach by committing crimes because they don't have the backgrounds which would help them in legitimized work. And their authority figure becomes the welfare agencies. They do not know how to depend on themselves and they have no sense of community."

Another of Dr. Feldman's findings about the causes of urban crime is startling — pollution. "Newark is a highly industrialized area and according to our study pollutants point out to be a factor in the amount of crime in our urban area."

"Pollutants may have a chemical effect — we can't explain it specifically because we haven't done any specific biologic studies. It seems there is some chemical reaction in the individual to particular agents like sulfur dioxide, ozone, even smoke shade like fog and smog."

URBAN CRIMES, according to Dr. Feldman, are greater than small-town crimes because of the population increase, crowding, poverty, and less neighborly help available. "A great deal of family problems result in criminal acts. Many of the people I see come from broken homes, parents separated while the inmate was in an early stage of his life and a great deal of alcoholism in the family is prevalent among criminal offenders."

Dr. Feldman thinks one way of reducing crime is to provide psychiatric treatment to people before they are jailed or tried. He believes this would reduce the amount of recidivism that comes from many jailed people. "If people are found to have been mentally ill at the time of their crime they should be committed to the State hospital — if not, they should be put on trial."

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

There may be some bridge player somewhere who never falsecards. We haven't met him yet, but he must be there. On the other hand there are plenty of players who falsecard as a matter of habit. They don't recognize that there is a real art in false carding.

Now look at the South hand. West opens the jack of hearts. East follows with the deuce. The automatic falsecarder wins with the ace. The nonfalsecarder wins with the queen. The artful falsecarder wins with the king two-thirds of the time and with the queen the third. He never considers playing the ace!

Let's see why. He leads a diamond to dummy's queen at trick two. East takes his ace and considers what suit to return. He knows from the jack lead that his partner doesn't hold the queen. Therefore the automatic falsecarder who played the ace is now marked with both king and queen and a heart return is hopeless. He laps down his queen of clubs and it will be a hot day in January before South makes his three notrump.

He might shift to a club if South had won with the king or queen, or he might

CONTRACT BRIDGE YOUR GAME? BID-N-BUDDY IS MY NAME

I'm a unique bidding aid for contract bridge. Based on the slide-rule principle, only much simpler, I'll give you your opening - responding - opener rebid - and response rebid, bids. All you have to do is count your points and read what I say. A special bonus is my LEAD-N-BUDDY section; working on the same slide-rule principle, it shows you your opening leads for suit contracts, leads against slams, and no-trump contracts - plus best, worst, and waiting leads. The amazing thing is my price.

For this wealth of information, for just $1.00, you can pick me up at the Herald office, 217 W. Campbell Street, Arlington Heights, Illinois. If you want to use my coupon (below), and have me mailed, I'm still only $1.00.

WANTED! WANTED! WANTED!

Social Security and You

Persons receiving medical services covered by Medicare are reminded by Norman R. Thoresen, manager of the Arlington Heights Social Security office, to request payment promptly. "As soon as your bills come to $60 send them to the office that will handle your medical insurance claims," suggests Thoresen. "Additional bills should be sent as soon as you get them. You will be paid sooner that way."

"Medicare cannot pay for any bills incurred during the period of Oct. 1, 1971, to Sept. 30, 1972 unless a claim is sent in before Jan. 1, 1974," Thoresen added.

The form to use to submit a claim is the "Request for Medicare Payment." Copies of this form may be obtained from any social security office. The claim should be sent to the carrier for the state where the services were received, except for railroad annuitants who should send their claims to the Travelers Insurance Co. nearest their home.

"Of course payment cannot be made for services received before the date medical insurance protection started — the effective date appearing on your Medicare card," Thoresen said. "Medicare benefits were not available to persons receiving disability checks from social security or railroad retirement to two or more years, until July 1, 1973."

For more information or help with your claim, call your local Social Security office. The Arlington Heights office is at 120 Eastman, 255-7512.

AMPEX Gives Your Talents More Room To Grow

The increasing popularity of musical tapes creates a very busy atmosphere here at Amplex — and many opportunities for advancement and growth. If you're looking for a position that makes the most of your talents... check out these immediate openings.

- SECRETARY
To Manager of Engineering
Excellent opportunity for the individual who can combine typing and shorthand skills with some bookkeeping or accounting related experience. Duties will include maintaining important department records as well as secretarial assignments.
- ACCOUNTING CLERK
Variety and increased responsibility make this position an excellent career choice. Requires a person with previous manufacturing accounting experience, some light typing ability and knowledge of 10 key adding machine.
- RECEIVING DEPARTMENT CLERK
Some previous office experience and the ability to handle details and responsibilities could qualify you for this interesting position involving receiving department activities. Light typing and good figure aptitude needed to type bills of lading and prepare weekly reports.

These positions offer very good starting salaries, complete benefit program, (including liberal discount on pre-recorded tapes) and lots of growth potential. For appointment or more information:

AND EVERYTHING NICE ABOUT FOOD

New beef labeling ends guesswork at meat-counter

A new labeling system instituting uniform retail meat identification standards has been established by an industry wide cooperative committee spearheaded by the National Live Stock and Meat Board. This system is, in effect, a universal meat language as every meat cut has been given an accurate anatomical name.

The newly established logical terminology replaces a lingo including literally hundreds of "fanciful" names that vary from state to state, city to city and even store to store. For example the beef cut now termed a heel of round is known as a Pike's Peak, Diamond or Horseshoe Roast, a Denver Pot Roast or a Beef Round Heel Pot-Roast, depending on where it's sold.

The 34 standard cuts from the beef chuck alone are called over 200 names and the six basic steaks from the beef loin (club, T-Bone, Porterhouse, top loin, sirloin and tenderloin) are sold under more than four dozen different labels. Most of the "fanciful" names have been acquired by usage, caprice, merchandising zeal and mere chance. They are virtually meaningless and have caused confusion at the meat counter.

"Master List of Recommended Names" totaling more than 300 identifications for as many retail cuts of beef, pork, lamb and veal is the solution adopted by the Industrywide Cooperative Meat Identification Standards Committee coordinated by the Meat Board.

The new meat label language, or meat identity labeling as it is called, is easy to learn. First on every label appears the kind of meat, such as — Beef. Following on the same line is the primal (wholesale) cut, such as — Chuck. This second word tells where the meat comes from on the animal. The standard name of the retail cut, such as Blade Roast, is printed on the second line. This tells what part of the primal cut the specific retail cut of meat comes from.

The retailer has the option of including his own name for the cut, but only if the correct standard identification appears on the regular label. In this case a label reading Beef Round, Heel of Round also could include the terminology of Pike's Peak or Denver Pot-Roast.

Three dozen of the most popular beef cuts, identified in the new label language, are illustrated below. The most acceptable cooking method for each is included.

Beef top loin steak also is called a beef loin strip steak. The cooking recommendation is "broil, panbroil or panfry."

Mrs. Jack Laansma

Her recipes are tastefully easy

by LOIS SEILER

Quickie recipes with taste appeal are Sharon Laansma's specialties. Admitting that she likes to eat as well as cook, other interests vie for her time compelling her to concentrate on dishes that can be prepared in a hurry.

In addition to being a den mother, library volunteer at Westbrook School and a deaconess at her church, she enjoys crewel work, playing the piano, reading and tennis. Although her children John, 9, and Cheryl, 7, prefer the old favorites, Sharon also likes to experiment with foods so she tries new recipes when entertaining.

One of her favorites to serve when having guests for dessert and coffee is a Raspberry Ribbon Pie. This is made by alternating a raspberry gelatin mixture with a whipped cream-cream cheese mixture in a baked pie shell. Chilled until firm, this rich pie is impressive in appearance and looks particularly pretty when sliced, according to Sharon.

For a ladies' luncheon, this Mount Prospect cook suggests a seafood dish made with crabmeat and hard-cooked eggs baked in a rich mayonnaise sauce. Onion and green olives add zest. Although it tastes very special, there is a minimum of preparation involved. As accompaniments Sharon suggests carrot and celery sticks and hot rolls. The Raspberry Ribbon Pie could be served for dessert.

A colorful dish with man appeal is Sharon's Confetti Casserole which is especially enjoyed by her husband, Jack. It consists of ground beef, onions, green pepper and mixed vegetables baked in tomato sauce. Cream cheese adds body to this hearty meal-in-one which can be made ahead and baked when needed. A tossed salad and rolls are ample accompaniments.

RASPBERRY RIBBON PIE

- 1 9-inch baked pastry shell, cooled
- 1 3-ounce package raspberry gelatin
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 1/4 cups boiling water
- 1 10-ounce package frozen red raspberries
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 3-ounce package cream cheese, softened
- 1/3 cup sifted confectioners' sugar

1 teaspoon vanilla
Dash of salt
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
Dissolve gelatin and sugar in boiling water. Add frozen berries and lemon juice. Stir until berries thaw. Chill until partially set.

Meanwhile, blend cheese, confectioners' sugar, vanilla and salt. Gradually fold in whipped cream.

Spread half of cream cheese mixture over bottom of pastry shell. Cover with half of the red gelatin mixture. Repeat layers. Chill until set. Serves 8.

LUNCHEON SEAFOOD BAKE

- 1 6-ounce can crabmeat, drained
- 1 cup soft bread cubes
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 1/4 cup milk
- 6 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
- 1/3 cup chopped onions
- 1/4 cup sliced green olives
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup buttered bread crumbs for topping

Mix all ingredients together except the buttered crumbs and turn into individual baking shells or large casserole. Sprinkle buttered crumbs on top. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes. Serves 8.

CONFETTI CASSEROLE

- 1 pound ground beef
- 1/4 cup chopped onion
- 1/4 cup chopped green pepper
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Dash of pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 tablespoon brown sugar
- 1 3-ounce package cream cheese
- 1 8-ounce can tomato sauce
- 1 10-ounce package mixed vegetables, defrosted

Brown meat; add onion and green pepper and cook until tender. Add seasonings, sugar and cheese. Stir in tomato sauce and vegetables.

Turn into ungreased casserole and sprinkle crushed cornflakes over the top. Cover and bake for 40 minutes at 375 degrees. Uncover and bake 10 minutes longer. Serves 6.

MRS. JACK LAANSMAN suggests serving this rich Raspberry Ribbon Pie when having guests for dessert and coffee. Whipped cream and cream cheese are combined then layered with a raspberry gelatin mixture into a baked pie shell. When sliced, the red and white layers can be observed.

Mostly For Men

by Charles Flynn

For those who have a penchant to try Mexican cooking from time to time, I recommend recipes from "The Mexican Cook Book" by George and Inger Wallace, published by Nitty Gritty Productions of Concord, Calif., and available in paperback at a modest price.

This work not only gives excellent recipes, but supplies historical backgrounds and much of the folklore related to development of the Mexican cuisine, which combines Spanish, French and native influences.

A simple yet delicious Mexican dish is that for Empanadas, or Turnovers, which give one an excellent opportunity to use leftovers. Step One. Sift 2 cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, and 1 teaspoon salt. Cut in 1/2 cup shortening with pastry blender. Add 1/3 cup ice water and knead lightly.

Step Two. Prepare a filling by mixing together 1 cup cooked chicken, minced, with 2 1/2 cups mild white or cheddar cheese, shredded, 3 tablespoons chopped green olives, 6 minced ripe olives, 1 clove garlic, minced (or garlic powder to taste), and 1/8 teaspoon oregano.

Step Three. Divide dough into 12 balls.

Roll each into a circle 1/8-inch thick. Put 1 large spoonful of filling on half of each circle. Moisten edges of circles with water, fold over the filling and press edges together with fingers, then crimp with fork tines.

Fry the empanadas in hot oil (300 degrees) until golden and drain on paper toweling. Or, you can put the empanadas in a baking dish and bake at 400 degrees for 20 minutes. Serves 6.

AN UNUSUAL FISH dish is Pescado a la Madelene. Chop together 1/3 cup almonds and 1/2 cup parsley. Wash and wipe dry 1 1/2 pounds of fish fillets, turbot, red snapper, bass or halibut. Place fish in a lightly buttered baking dish and sprinkle with the almond-parsley mixture.

Melt 2 tablespoons butter and mix in 2 teaspoons lemon juice. Pour half this mixture over fish. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, then cover tightly with foil and bake 15 minutes at 350 degrees.

Remove foil, pour remaining half of butter-lemon mixture overall and bake uncovered for another 10 minutes. Serve to 4, with a garnish of lemon wedges.

How to beat high cost of food

Meal Stretchers

Potatoes, rice, macaroni products, beans and breads are more economical foods than cuts of prime beef, pork, lamb and fish. If the family insists on having meat or fish with a meal, serve a smaller portion of these — about half the normal amount — and stretch the meal with servings of the less expensive foods. Such a meal will be nutritionally balanced, especially if green vegetables and fruit are included, and cost less per serving than when each diner fills up with large portions of expensive beef, for example.

Leftovers for lunch save time and money

Dressing up leftovers for a school lunch to eat at home or brown bag to school saves time and money.

For example, leftover chocolate pudding takes on a new taste plus more nourishment when sliced peaches or maraschino cherries are stirred in. Cheese slices and pickle relish revive a meatloaf sandwich and another vegetable added to a bean soup gives it new taste life, too.

Beverages and sandwiches stay fresh when properly packed. For example, insulated bottles keep hot things hot and cold things cold in a hard-to-break container. Sandwiches are easier to eat and stay fresher when cut into sections and wrapped separately.

Sandwiches frozen in advance stay cold until lunchtime or you can keep ingredients cool by spreading them on frozen bread. Never make a sandwich with lettuce and tomato to pack in a lunchbox. Wrap these separately in waxed paper or put in plastic bags. If bread is buttered and filled to the crust then it will not get soggy from moist fillings. Another tip to get the youngsters to expand their eating habits — peel and section citrus fruit and place in sealed container or plastic bag. An unpeeled fruit remains freshest and is easier to eat when cut into wedges and again wrapped properly. Here are a Corny Bean Soup, Cheesy Meatloaf and Cherry Chocolate Pudding for school day eating.

CORN BEAN SOUP

- 1 can (10 1/2 ounces) condensed bean with bacon

- soup
- 1 can water
- 1/2 cup cooked whole kernel corn
- 1/2 teaspoon chili powder

Empty soup into saucepan, blend in water. Add corn and chili powder. Heat, stir now and then. Makes 4 servings.

CHEESY MEATLOAF

- 8 slices cooked cold meatloaf
- 1/4 cup sweet pickle relish
- 1/4 cup ketchup
- 4 slices American cheese
- 8 slices whole wheat bread or 4 hamburger buns, split

Arrange meatloaf slices on 4 slices of bread. Add pickle relish, ketchup and cheese. Top sandwiches with remaining pieces of bread. Slice and put in plastic bag. Makes 4 sandwiches.

CHERRY CHOCOLATE PUDDING

- 2 cups prepared chocolate pudding
- 1 can (8 ounces) sliced peaches, drained and chopped
- 1/4 cup coarsely chopped maraschino cherries
- 1/4 cup miniature marshmallows

Blend all ingredients. Spoon into serving dishes or snack jars for lunch box.

Soup, fruit and a hearty sandwich satisfy schooltime appetites.

Is buying bulk meat best for you?

Buying meat in quantity can be a money-saving investment, but the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) warns consumers to proceed with caution.

Here are some USDA guidelines that may help you decide if a bulk meat purchase is best for you:

Your first consideration should be to find a dealer with a well established reputation for honesty and fairness. The length of time he has been in business in the community is a fairly reliable indication of his reputation but check with the local Better Business Bureau or Chamber of Commerce if you're not sure.

Beware the dealer who advertises fantastic bargains too sensational to believe, and then, when you inquire about them, tries to switch you to something more expensive. No dealer can afford to give meat away, and reputable ones will not pretend to do so.

A beef carcass, side, or quarter is normally sold by its "hanging weight" which is its weight as it hangs on a hook prior to removal of the bones and excess fat. First-time bulk beef buyers commonly mistake the "hanging weight" to be the amount of meat they take home, when, in fact, the actual amount of edible meat taken home will be considerably less than the "hanging weight" of the purchase.

This example illustrates the point: an average 300 pound side of beef will yield approximately 225 pounds of edible meat to take home, but you pay for the entire 300 pounds including the 75 pounds of fat and bones that has been removed. This makes the actual cost per pound of edible meat higher than the listed cost per pound.

A USDA rule-of-thumb is the average carcass will yield 25 per cent steaks, 25 per cent roasts, 25 per cent ground and stewing beef, and 25 per cent waste.

Before buying, be sure to select the quality of meat you want, otherwise you might not be satisfied with your purchase even if it was expensive. There are eight USDA beef quality grades that can help you select the quality of beef you prefer. USDA Prime is the top grade, and USDA Choice — the grade most commonly found in supermarkets — is the next highest and most popular grade. Most people find USDA Good — the third highest grade — quite satisfactory.

The other USDA grades in descending order of quality are: Standard, Commercial, Utility, Cutter, and Canner. The presence of any of these red shield-shaped grade stamps on the outside fat covering of the meat is your assurance that it meets the quality standards of that particular grade.

Since some carcasses contain more waste than others, knowing the percentage of waste in a specific carcass will help you determine the amount of edible meat it'll yield. The percentage of waste can be accurately estimated by referring to the carcass USDA Yield Grade. The higher the number, the higher the percentage of waste will be. A Yield Grade 1 carcass will yield 79.8 per cent or more edible meat; a Yield Grade 2 from 75.2 to 79.7 per cent; a Yield Grade 3 from 70.6 to 75.1 per cent; a Yield Grade 4 from 66.0 to 70.5 per cent; and a Yield Grade 5, 65.9 per cent or less edible meat.

The yield grade stamp rarely appears on single retail cuts, but does appear on the larger wholesale cuts and is very useful in estimating the waste in bulk purchases. But, like quality grading, yield grading is also a voluntary service, meaning not all carcasses are yield graded. USDA officials say the kind of carcass to look for is USDA Choice, Yield Grade 2. A "Choice 2" or "Choice 3" will have high quality meat without excess waste.

Remember, when you buy a carcass, side, or quarter, you get all the cuts from it, from steaks to hamburger, at the same price per pound. Compare the amounts of each different cut you'll be getting with the price you would pay for the same thing at the supermarket.

Don't forget to include the cost of cutting, wrapping, and freezing in the total cost. Sometimes these expenses are included in the listed price, and sometimes they aren't. Ask about them. Also include the cost of operating your home freezer and any finance charges involved.

For most people, buying meat in bulk is confusing because they're dealing with a product they are unfamiliar with — meat in carcass form. If you make a wise purchase, you can save money buying meat in bulk. But, since the purchase usually involves a considerable amount of money, you should thoroughly investigate all aspects of the purchase before you buy.

To help you make wise decisions USDA has prepared a useful 27-page booklet titled "How to Buy Meat for Your Freezer," (G-168). For a single free copy write to: Office of Communication, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250. Please mention the booklet by name and number and include your zip code.

Weekend special features waffles

There is growing interest in preparing a dish from scratch. Waffles make an ideal weekend offering when the family and guests have time to relax at the breakfast table. Fruit Cream Waffles may become one of the male chef's specialties for such occasions.

FRUIT CREAM WAFFLES

- 2 1/4 cups unsifted flour
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 package active dry yeast
- 2 cups milk
- 2 tablespoons corn oil
- margarine
- 3 eggs, separated
- Corn oil margarine
- Preserves (strawberry, raspberry)
- Dairy sour cream

In a large bowl thoroughly mix flour, sugar, salt and undissolved active dry yeast. Combine milk and 2 tablespoons corn oil margarine in a saucepan. Heat over low heat until liquid is very warm (120-130 degrees). Margarine does not need to melt. Gradually add to dry ingredients and beat 5 minutes on medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Cover. Let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk: about 45 minutes. Beat egg whites until soft peaks hold; set aside. Beat egg yolks into batter, then fold in egg whites. Let stand at room temperature 15 minutes. For each waffle pour enough batter onto preheated waffle iron to spread within 1-inch from edge. Bake until steaming stops and waffle is done. Serve with corn oil margarine, preserves and sour cream. Makes about 24 four and one-half inch waffles.

Salmon Sandwiches

Fill sandwich orders with versatile salmon

One of the most versatile foods is the sandwich. Its popularity undoubtedly stems from the fact that it is easy to make, yet satisfies — two of the most important aspects of modern day living and dining which demand ease.

Salmon makes a super sandwich filling just as it comes from the can. Or it can be mixed with almost any kind of chopped vegetable and mayonnaise or salad dressing or sour cream. It can be combined with chopped crisp apple, with orange segments or grapes for variety. Almost any imaginable combination is good, because not only is salmon versatile, the sandwich is too.

The combination of salmon and sandwich is hard to beat, whether you need it for a hearty family sandwich, for double deckers, open facers, or finger snacks such as the dainty ones described in the first recipe.

A TREASURE OF A SALMON SANDWICH

- 1 7 1/2 ounce can salmon
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1/3 cup cottage cheese
- 1/2 cup sour cream
- 1/2 cup chopped water cress or parsley
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 16 slices buttered bread
- Cherry tomatoes for garnish

Drain and flake salmon and combine with lemon juice, cheese, sour cream, water cress or parsley and salt and pepper. Spread mixture over 8 slices bread. Cover with second slice. Trim bread and cut into triangles or rounds. Garnish with cherry tomatoes. Makes 8 sandwiches.

SALMON EGG CHEESE DECKERS

For each sandwich use 4 slices trimmed whole wheat bread. Put two slices together with 2 1/2 tablespoons cream cheese and water cress filling, spread top slice with 3 tablespoons salmon salad filling, top with third slice of bread, spread with 3 tablespoons egg salad filling. Press fourth slice of bread on top and cut into triangles.

SALMON SALAD FILLING (For Twelve Sandwiches)

Combine 1-pound canned salmon, drained and flaked, with 1/2 cup chopped pimiento, 1/2 cup minced green pepper, 1 teaspoon minced onion, 1/4 teaspoon salt and 1/2 cup mayonnaise.

CREAM CHEESE AND WATER CRESS FILLING (For Twelve Sandwiches)

Combine 1 pound soft cream cheese with 1/2 cup chopped water cress (or parsley) and 2 tablespoons milk.

EGG SALAD FILLING (For Eight Sandwiches)

Combine 6 hard-cooked eggs, chopped, with 1/2 cup minced celery, 1 teaspoon minced onion, 3/4 teaspoon salt and 1/2 cup mayonnaise.

SPECIAL SALMON SNACK FILLING (For Eight Sandwiches)

Combine 2 cups flaked salmon with 1/2 head lettuce, chopped, 1 small onion, chopped, 1 tablespoon olive oil, 1 cup chopped celery, 10 large pitted black olives, sliced, 1/2 cup mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon wine vinegar, salt and black pepper to taste.

SALMON AVOCADO FILLING (For Eight Sandwiches)

Combine 2 cups flaked salmon with 1 teaspoon chopped onion, 1/2 cup chopped pecans, 1 hard-cooked egg, chopped, 1/2 cup chopped pimiento, 1/2 cup chopped endive, 1 large avocado, sliced, 3 tablespoons mayonnaise and salt and pepper to taste.

SALMON CUCUMBER FILLING (For Four Sandwiches)

Combine 1 cup flaked salmon, 1/2 cucumber, peeled and chopped, and 1 tablespoon each minced green pepper, parsley or dill, chives or scallions, lemon juice and French dressing. Season to taste with salt and pepper and stir in mayonnaise to moisten.

SALMON WALDORF FILLING (For Four Sandwiches)

Combine 1 cup flaked salmon with 1/4 cup each minced apple and celery, 1 tablespoon chopped walnuts and mayonnaise to moisten.

SALMON TEATIME SPECIAL FILLING (For Four Sandwiches)

Combine 1 cup flaked salmon with 1/4 cup drained crushed pineapple, 2 tablespoons finely chopped pecans, 1 teaspoon lemon juice and mayonnaise to bind. Makes 4 sandwiches.

This is where shoplifting stops being "fun."

If you've ever thought about doing a little shoplifting, think again.

Think how easy it is to get caught.

Think how it must feel to get caught.

Think how you'd answer the question that's on every job application, "Have you ever been arrested? If so, explain."

Think how—to the people you know, and the people you love, and yes, even to yourself—you can never be the same person again.

Think about it.

Mrs. Toshio Okuma

She makes Oriental cooking easy

by FRAN HECKART

Mrs. Toshio Okuma, a full-time real estate saleswoman, still finds time to share her interest in Oriental cooking.

Besides giving three annual demonstrations on Cantonese cookery for the Mount Prospect Park District, Uni Okuma often invites friends and fellow employees to her Des Plaines home to learn the techniques of making egg rolls and tempura.

Upon hearing about my disastrous attempt at making fried rice, Uni simply pulled out her skillet and provided a first-hand demonstration. She's well-versed in the art of Oriental cooking and willing to share her knowledge to those willing to learn.

UNI DOESN'T profess to be a purist and will not object if you happen to like a little catnip on your fried rice. Nor will she hesitate to use bacon in fried rice although she admits that many less liberated cooks would find the addition not in keeping with true Oriental cookery. But this captivating woman feels that food is to be enjoyed — be it Japanese, Chinese or American.

"Food that is pleasant to look at is always more appealing," said Uni on the theory behind the esthetic quality of Oriental foods.

Serving is just as important as preparation and cooking, she said. "You never throw the food on the plate, but take time to make it attractive."

COOKING IS FUN with Uni and she sets forth with few inhibitions, working quickly and confidently. This is not to say that her recipe for egg rolls is a snap. Preparing the ingredients will take time for those less adept at chopping and slicing the numerous ingredients for the egg roll filling.

Although egg roll wrappers may not be available at local supermarkets, Uni relies on the Star Food Market on Clark Street in Chicago for the wrappers, bamboo shoots, fresh ginger and fresh bean sprouts. The ingredients may also be obtained from Chinatown or any other Japanese grocery store.

Uni's recipe for egg rolls follows along with two of her other favorites, Stuffed Shrimp and Tempura.

EGG ROLLS

7 or 8 lean pork chops or a boned pork roast (3 pounds)
1/2 pound or 12 ounce bag of frozen deveined, cleaned shrimp
1 large can Takenoko (bamboo shoots)
Piece of fresh ginger and garlic
1 tablespoon peanut butter
Salad oil
1 egg white
3 or 4 pounds egg roll wrappers
Salt to taste
Soy sauce to taste (about 1/2 cup)
2 or 4 green onions
1 1/2 to 2 pounds fresh bean sprouts

First cut meaty part of pork chops into thin pieces. Cut shrimp, bamboo shoots and onions into thin pieces.
Line the bottom of hot skillet with oil and fry meat and shrimp. After this is thoroughly cooked, add the bamboo shoots, ginger and garlic (grated). When this is cooked, add salt, peanut butter and soy sauce to taste. At the very end add onions and bean sprouts, but do not cook this very long. After you have tasted this mixture and it has the right flavor, drain into a colander. When cooled, take a spoon and spoon into individual wrappers and seal shut with the egg white.

Fry the sealed egg rolls in oil until lightly brown. The wrappers can be cut in half for small individual egg rolls. Serve this with a mustard sauce and/or a sweet-sour sauce.

There are about 20 egg roll wrappers in a pound. The more meat and shrimp you use in proportion to vegetables, the tastier egg rolls will be.

This recipe makes approximately 60 large egg rolls or 120 small ones. You may freeze the extra rolls.

STUFFED SHRIMP

1 pound shrimp
1/2 pound ground pork
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon aginomoto or Accent
Cracker crumbs
1 egg, beaten
1 pound raw ham, chopped fine
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon soy (soy sauce)
4 or 6 water chestnuts.

Remove shell from shrimp. Split shrimp down stomach, making a pocket, being careful not to cut completely through. Clean veins. Soak in a combination of 1 teaspoon crushed ginger, 1 teaspoon soy (soy sauce) and 1 teaspoon wine.

Combine all ingredients except cracker crumbs and eggs. Put stuffing in shrimp. Dip shrimp in cornstarch, egg and cracker crumbs. Deep fry.

Mrs. Okuma serves the following Cantonese Sauce with the Stuffed Shrimp:

1/2 cup catsup
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup water
1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Dash of Tabasco
1 teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons vinegar

Combine all ingredients and mix well. Bring to a boil and simmer for a few minutes.

TEMPURA

Tempura consists of batter-coated seafood, meats and vegetables, deep-fried by hostess and guests. All foods and the batter should be prepared before serving time. Two cups peanut or vegetable oil may be heated in a wok or similar vessel until a one-inch cube of bread will brown in 50 to 60 seconds. (Oil should be about 400 degrees.)

Use chopsticks, metal or mesh skimmers, tongs, cocktail spears, pierced spoons or fondue forks to place in and remove food from hot oil. Dip selected food in batter and drop in the hot oil. When food rises to surface of oil and batter has puffed and browned, turn over and fry on the other side, about three or four minutes. Remove to plate and allow to cool and drain a few seconds before eating.

Mrs. Okuma suggests the two following batter recipes.

To prepare the first, combine 2 cups flour, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon baking powder, 2 1/2 cups cold water and 1 egg yolk. The ingredients should be stirred briefly; batter will be lumpy.

For the second batter, combine 1 cup cake flour, 1 egg, 1 cup ice water, 1/2 teaspoon baking powder and a dash of salt. Do not stir well, leave lumpy.

Ingredients that may be dipped in batter then fried include any or a combination of the following:

Shrimp, shelled and deveined
Eggplant, thin strips or quartered in 1/2-inch sections
Sweet potato
Carrots, shredded
Green beans, tips and strings removed Green pepper
Mushrooms, small whole or "T"-shape slices

Zucchini
Onion rings
Asparagus
Parsley sprigs
Bamboo shoots, sliced
Cauliflower segments
Batter-fried ingredients may be dipped in mustard or sweet sour sauce. Mrs. Okuma also suggests a sauce made by combining 1/2 cup stock, 4 1/2 tablespoons soy sauce, 2 tablespoons sugar and 2/3 teaspoon Accent.

Household hints

Don't thaw turkey quarters before you cook them. Place a large sheet of heavy duty aluminum foil in a shallow roasting pan. Place a frozen turkey quarter, skin-side up, in the center of foil. Brush with cooking oil, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Bring the foil up and over the top and seal with a double fold. Leave ends open but cupped to hold in the juices as the turkey cooks.

The cut of pork known as smoked Boston shoulder roll or boneless pork cottage roll tastes very much like ham.

Keeping cheese

Grades have been established for some varieties of natural cheese. These are based on flavor, body, texture, finish appearance and color.

Hard cheese will keep in the refrigerator for up to several months if protected from drying out and mold contamination.

Jars of process cheese spreads and cheese foods can be kept at room temperature until opened. After that, refrigerate.

Attention to two rules will insure a successful cheese dish: use low heat, and do not overcook. When cheese is melted, it is cooked.

Shop according to your needs, not according to your impulses.

You can keep Cheddar cheese for several weeks if you refrigerate it in the original wrapper until you are ready to use it. After opening, wrap cut cheese in foil, waxed paper or plastic to prevent drying.

MRS. TOSHIO OKUMA, left, gives Linda Bass, a fellow employee of Gladstone Realty, first hand advice on wrapping an egg roll. Mrs. Okuma recently invited several women from her office to her home for an informal lesson on Cantonese cooking.

Average prices recorded Monday are relatively stable compared with a week ago. Exceptions include bacon, eggs, butter and lettuce. Average cost per pound of bacon is down seven cents, eggs and butter show a decrease of five cents and lettuce has dropped 12 cents from Oct. 22. Frozen orange juice concentrate shows an increase of five cents. Remaining prices reflect only minor variances from last week. Recorded prices are based on averages obtained from four area supermarkets to measure general trends.

Flank steak with tasty stuffing

The price of mushrooms is still quite attractive in comparison with the meats, fish and fowl which mushrooms can "extend" as well as flavor. The following recipe for Mushroom Stuffed Flank Steak Roll-ups with Mushroom Gravy makes a delightful main dish, elegant enough for guests, thrifty enough for "just family."

MUSHROOM STUFFED FLANK STEAK ROLL-UPS

- 2 flank steaks (about 1 1/2 lbs. each)
- 1 cup domestic soy sauce
- 1 cup wine vinegar
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1/2 pound fresh mushrooms or 1 can (8 to 10 oz.) sliced mushrooms
- 5 tablespoons butter or margarine, divided
- 1/2 cup minced onion
- 1 can (4 oz.) pimientos, drained and diced
- 1/2 cup chopped parsley
- 1/2 teaspoon salt

Mushroom Gravy
Place steaks flat in a snug-fitting baking pan. Combine soy sauce, vinegar, Worcestershire sauce and garlic; pour over both steaks turning to coat all sides. Cover and refrigerate for 2 hours. Meanwhile, rinse, pat dry and slice fresh mushrooms or drain canned mushrooms; set aside. In a large skillet melt 3 tablespoons of the butter. Add mushrooms and saute for 3 minutes; remove mushrooms to a medium bowl.

In same skillet melt remaining 2 tablespoons of the butter. Add onion; saute for 2 minutes. Remove from heat and stir in pimientos, parsley, salt and the reserved mushrooms. Place steaks on a cutting board and reserve marinade. Spoon half of the mushroom mixture lengthwise down center of each steak. Roll lengthwise jelly-roll fashion, holding securely with hand. Cut each steak crosswise, slightly on the diagonal, into 2-inch thick slices.

Roll each slice tightly and secure with small skewer or wooden toothpick. Press any remaining stuffing into center of each roll. Arrange rolls on broiler pan cut side up; broil under a preheated hot broiler for about 8 minutes on each side, brushing occasionally with reserved marinade, until rolls are done as desired. Carefully remove rolls to a heated platter and keep warm. Reserve pan drippings. Serve with Mushroom Gravy.

MUSHROOM GRAVY

- 1/2 pound fresh mushrooms or 1 can (8 to 10 oz.) sliced mushrooms
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- Pan drippings from steaks
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 beef bouillon cubes
- 1 1/2 cups boiling water

Rinse, pat dry and slice fresh mushrooms or drain canned mushrooms. In a medium saucepan melt butter. Add mushrooms and saute for 3 minutes. Add drippings from steaks and flour. Cook and stir over medium heat for 1 minute. Dissolve bouillon cubes in water. Blend into mushroom mixture. Bring to boiling point, stirring constantly; cook and stir for 1 minute. Serve over Steak Roll-ups. If desired, serve with rice.

Mushroom Stuffed Flank Steak Roll-ups

by Fran Heckart

Besides taking the guess work out of buying meat, the new meat identity program (see front page, this section) can also help homemakers avoid mistakes in the kitchen.

The name of the primal (wholesale) cut on the standard label, which signifies the location of the retail cut, provides a reliable key to the correct cooking method.

In general, retail cuts from the same primal cut of beef are cooked in the same way. The more tender cuts come from the less exercised muscles — the rib and loin. The less tender cuts come from the more active muscles located in the other wholesale cuts.

Of the two fundamental types of meat cookery (dry heat and moist heat), dry heat is best for the tender cuts, moist heat for the less tender. Therefore it is recommended that retail cuts from the wholesale rib and loin (such as rib roasts, Porterhouse steaks and sirloin steaks) be roasted, broiled, panbroiled or panfried.

THE OTHER wholesale beef cuts (including chuck, round, fore shank, brisket, short plate, flank and tip) are less tender to varying degrees and are enjoyable when braised or cooked in liquid. Slow cooking in moisture (either steam or liquid) around the meat softens the connective tissue, the part of the meat more difficult to tenderize. Braising, for example, is generally recommended for pot roasts and steaks from the chuck and round. Beef for stew and large less tender cuts, such as corned beef brisket, are cooked in liquid.

There are, of course, exceptions. These, however, are easy to keep in mind. Some of the cuts from the less tender parts can be cooked by dry heat methods. For example, some large cuts such as beef tip (sirloin tip), beef rump and beef eye of round roasts can be roasted. They are most tender when roasted only to rare and carved in thin slices for serving. Ground beef and cubed steaks from the round, having been mechanically tenderized, may be broiled, panbroiled and panfried. Some steaks from less tender cuts such as top round steak, flank steak, tip steak and beef chuck blade steak may be broiled or panbroiled and are especially satisfactory when marinated and/or scored and served rare and thinly sliced.

Bake chuck roast 'steak'

Instant meat tenderizer makes it possible to bake or broil chuck roast and have steak at chuck prices at a reasonable cost per serving. If you've thought chuck roasts were only for long stewing and pot roasting, it's time to change your mind. Baked Steak Ragù takes only one hour to treat the family to a delicious, juicy, tender sliced steak. For ease in saucing the finished beef, simply heat a jar of spaghetti sauce. A delicious and easy main dish to serve with pasta of your choosing, tossed greens and of course, bread and wine.

BAKED STEAK RAGÙ

- 1 (4-pound) chuck (7-bone, blade bone or round bone arm), 2 inches thick

Instant meat tenderizer,

seasoned or unseasoned

- 1 (15 1/2-ounce) jar spaghetti sauce
- Slush fat edges of chuck. Prepare all surfaces of meat, one side at a time, with instant meat tenderizer as follows: 1) Thoroughly moisten meat with water. 2) Sprinkle meat tenderizer evenly like salt over entire surface. Use no salt. 3) To insure penetration and retain meat juices, pierce deeply with fork at about 1/2-inch intervals. Bake steak in shallow pan in 400 degree oven, allowing about one hour for medium rare. Meanwhile, heat spaghetti sauce. Slice meat diagonally across grain into thin slices to serve. Pass sauce. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Tuna main dish goes a long way

A meatless main dish seems to be the order of the day in many households. One that has plenty of protein oomph to it is a Cheesy Tuna Pie. This is a stretch dish that goes a long way when served with a hearty green salad and fresh fruit or a baked fruit dessert.

CHEESY TUNA PIE

- 1 can (11 ounces) condensed Cheddar cheese soup
- 4 eggs, slightly beaten
- 1/2 cup milk
- 2 tablespoons instant minced onion
- 1/2 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
- 2 cans (about 7 ounces each) tuna, well-drained and flaked
- 1 9-inch baked pie shell
- Tomato wedges
- Parsley

In bowl, combine soup, eggs, milk, onion and hot pepper sauce. Stir in tuna. Pour into pie shell. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Let stand 5 minutes before serving. Garnish with tomato and parsley if desired. Makes 6 servings.

(*If necessary during baking, cover edges of pie shell with aluminum foil to prevent overbrowning.)

Stuffed peppers vary vegetables

Stuffed peppers are favorites of many and prove to be an easy way to depart from servings of individual vegetables. Green peppers filled with a blend of stuffing mix, sausage, corn and topped with Cheddar cheese make a one-dish meal or go well with barbecued chicken or sliced cold turkey.

STUFFED PEPPERS

- 4 medium green peppers
- Salted water
- 1 package (7 oz.) stove top chicken flavor stuffing mix
- 1/2 pound bulk sausage
- 1 can (10 oz.) whole kernel corn, drained
- 1 cup grated Cheddar cheese

Halve peppers lengthwise; discard stem and seeds. Parboil peppers in boiling salted water 8 to 10 minutes; drain and place in shallow baking dish with 1/8 inch of water. Prepare stuffing mix as directed on package. Saute sausage until browned; pour off fat. Add sausage and corn to stuffing. Spoon into green pepper halves. Bake at 400 degrees for 30 minutes; then top with cheese and bake 10 minutes longer, or until cheese is melted. Makes 4 cups stuffing mixture or 8 servings.

United Fund hits two-thirds mark in fund-raising effort

by LYNN ASINOF

The Wheeling-Buffalo Grove United Fund has passed the two-thirds mark for its efforts to raise $12,000 for this year's fund-raising campaign.

United Fund Pres. James Bauer said $8,133 has been raised so far, and said he expects the $12,000 goal to be reached before the end of the campaign. "I'm real pleased that this early in the campaign we're two-thirds of the way to our goal," he said.

Originally, the United Fund campaign was going to concentrate on local business and industry this year. Bauer said, however, response from this segment of the community has been weak.

"The areas that we're having trouble with are the areas we were hoping to have success with, and that's the industrial and business areas of the campaign," he said.

UNITED Fund workers sent more than 600 letters to local business and industry. Bauer said in response to these letters the United Fund raised only $226, "and that barely covered the postage."

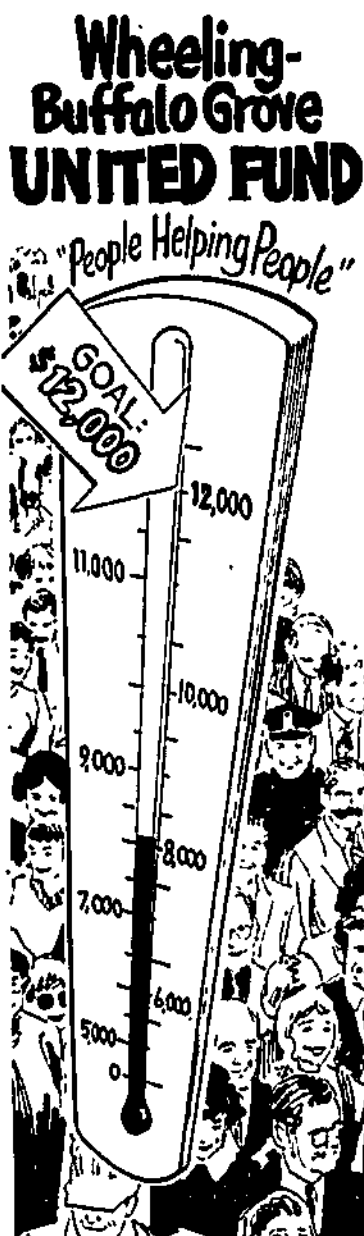

In comparison, Bauer said the teachers in the local school districts have already contributed about $3,200. "The teachers have been just great in responding. In fact they're carrying the load," Bauer said. "They realize that all of the money they give there stays in the communities."

The United Fund president said he did not know why business and industry have been so slow to respond to this year's campaign. "They just haven't come across," he said.

Bauer added, however, that efforts are continuing to stimulate some interest in the campaign in these sectors of the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove community. For example, a presentation was recently made to the Wheeling Chamber of Commerce.

THE RESIDENTIAL United Fund campaign is going well, according to Bauer. He said 1,300 letters were sent to local residents, resulting in donations of $1,973. "We're over 35 per cent ahead of where we were last year in the residential campaign," he said.

Bauer attributed the success of the residential campaign to the growth of the village. He said the United Fund has been able to collect money from residents in developments that weren't in existence during last year's campaign. "Last year we didn't get anything from Tahoe Village because it wasn't there," he said.

Several special projects have also brought substantial funds to this year's drive. A McDonald's Day, sponsored by the Wheeling drive-in on Dundee Road, raised $1,500. The United Fund also raised an additional $750 through a rock concert at Wheeling High School.

ACCORDING TO BAUER, the United Fund is also looking towards contributions from both villages.

The United Fund president said he thinks the $12,000 goal will be met if interest in the campaign is stimulated in the business and industrial areas. "We think if we get any kind of stimulation in those areas we should be able to make the goal," he said.

In addition to the $12,000 local goal, the United Fund is expecting to get over $14,000 from the metropolitan campaign, bringing the total amount to over $26,000.

Money raised by the United Fund will be used to support nine local agencies. They are Omni-House: Youth Services Bureau, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Campfire Girls, Northwest Suburban Homemakers Service, Clearbrook Center for the Retarded, Countryside Center for the Handicapped, Northwest Mental Health Center and the Salvation Army Family Counseling Center.

Last year, the fund fell only $30 short of its $10,000 goal. Bauer said this year's goal was increased $2,000 because of "the increasing need in the community."

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is a story of the mood of the Midwest and the way a presidential candidate is received in these times of scandal and disruption in national politics. It is a story of everyday people and how they feel about the times and how they feel about Charles Percy from Illinois, who is running for President three years before the election in the heartland of America, where presidential elections are won and lost.

by DOUG RAY

IOWA'S INTERSTATE 80 — If there is a middle American, he is a man like Big Larry Noble from Muscatine, Iowa, driver of this black Cadillac limousine cruising past the corn and soybean fields of the Midwest.

"Cool enough for you, Senator?" Big Larry glanced slightly to his right and behind him where the Senator was sitting with two reporters.

"Just perfect," Percy answered.

Big Larry smiled. He looked straight ahead across the steering wheel of the car while the air conditioner pumped recycled air over us. It was Thursday afternoon and it must have been near 80. Outside there was a trace of smog, but there never is in these parts. No Sears Tower or Hancock or tollways or brightened street corners lit up like Christmas trees.

This is the Midwest, home of the middle American, the silent majority — the home of the people who elect Presidents.

BIG LARRY grabs another Camel from the dashboard, lights it and takes a long, heavy draw. He doesn't say much, especially to strangers and even to get the basic information about the car and why he is driving, you have to wring it out of him.

It seems the car belongs to Larry's father-in-law who is in the sand and gravel business. And the last time one of the family's gas guzzlers hit the political trail — at least for presidential politics — was in 1964. Barry Goldwater was back there right where Chuck Percy now sits glancing through small note cards with his ankles crossed.

"It wasn't very good luck was it," Larry grinned. He has a hard mean look though he is friendly enough. Size him up and you can tell right off he is the kind of guy you don't talk back to unless you tip the scales at about 200 with most of your weight in the shoulders.

"What are the people like around here?" I asked him. "You know, the politics?"

"I'd say conservative Republican, most of them," he said shrugging.

In a few minutes the black limo would arrive at the Iowa campus. Big Larry pushed on, his brown cowboy boots with the pointed toes pressed firmly on the footboard.

The state trooper in the lead car took a quick right onto another route and the caravan of Oldsmobiles and the limo responded in order. We moved up the highway through red traffic lights to keep the head and the tail together.

THIS WILL BE the second stop for the Percy party. We began the day before noon, in Moline, Ill., at the headquarters of John Deere and Co., the firm known for its green farm tractors. The Senator spoke to businessmen, mayors and presented Deere Chairman William Hewitt with an award for a movie the company made. We spent more than an hour there, ending when Percy jumped aboard a John Deere snowmobile for a ride across the massive company properties.

Now we are rolling again, toward Iowa City. In the spirit of a Cadillac whistlestop campaign. In the back seat, Percy is getting the third degree on everything from his friends in Washington to his physical fitness program and a stationary bicycle he uses to keep the pounds off.

Percy asked how much time before arrival. Just a few minutes. He cut off the interview as we approached the city limits. Last minute cramming before the speech. He would be lecturing children of the plains country, boys who had actually milked cows, rosy cheeked farmer's daughters, students from Des Moines, even Chicago and New York; all who somehow found themselves together on the campus of rolling hills and narrow streets with the sweet smell of Indian summer and a river that cuts the campus in two.

We got out of the car. Percy stayed inside, then emerged and walked briskly up the steps of the Iowa Memorial Union. "Hi, I'm Chuck Percy." He shook hands with the desk clerk and went upstairs for a press conference.

DOWN IN THE auditorium the students waited, about 800 of them. All the seats were taken and many kids stood in the back.

"Why are there so many people here today?" I asked a

Rovin' the presidential trails with Chuck Percy

petite red-haired girl who was passing out leaflets at the door. "Is this a convocation?" She looked at me quizzically; her eyebrows sagged. "Do they make these people come for college credit?"

She said no, that this is just the first in a series of guest speakers on campus, that yes there are more kids here than expected.

A senior, one of the campus Young Republicans who says after graduation he plans to work for the party, had a wide smile spread across his face. "I was afraid things wouldn't work out . . . I was a nervous wreck. In '71, McGovern got about 1,500 when he came here. Last year, Tower (Senator John Tower of Texas) got 200 people . . . this is what I call a great turnout," he said.

The kids were anxious. As Percy walked on stage, their attention went with him. He began his talk. It was on the Soviet-U.S. relations and he urged the Soviets to open up to the concept of free speech.

There is only one group upset with the Senator's appearance. And that is a limp effort by the Young Americans For Freedom who like Ronald Reagan better as a presidential candidate. They pasted bumper stickers on the walls, but most were torn down later by students leaving the union. There are only 50 YAF members on campus.

PERCY WENT ON. "We merely ask that the USSR live up to its own constitution which guarantees freedom of speech."

I walked outside. Not because the speech was uninteresting but because it is a beautiful day, too nice to stay indoors even to listen to the man who three years from now might have the presidential seal in front of him when he talks.

Sun splashes a shine over the school and students are carrying their jackets under their arms. Parked outside the union are pickup trucks. Across the street dozens of girls are batting a ball around with paddles. The black limousine in front is as out of place as the tall lean Iowa state trooper standing next to it.

Walking alone, between the athletic field and the union, is a girl dressed in blue jeans and sweater. She carries a tennis racket in one hand and a book entitled "Power Politics" in the other. She is small, bespectacled of the wire-rim variety.

She says her name is Patricia Zimmerman, 18, a freshman from Westchester, Ill., and that she is heading for the auditorium for the Percy speech, but a little behind schedule.

Right away she volunteers that she hates Richard Nixon. Who does she like? Really nobody, she said. Then why is she going to hear Percy? "Because he may capture the '76 nomination" was her answer.

PATRICIA ZIMMERMAN says she is rather typical of college kids today. She is concerned but no activist, functioning in sort of a transition period between what was and something else. An Allende rally a few days ago brought out the usual people you might find at that kind of thing. Even Patricia Zimmerman was there, but she wasn't impressed.

"It seemed like they were using an excuse to protest and it didn't work out," she said.

"So what are students in the heartland of America concerned about right now?"

"I'd say politics and the university," she said quickly.

There is this intramural athletic field and a day-care center that face destruction by a new road, and believe it or not the

Aqua Dome completion still uncertain

Buffalo Grove Park District officials yesterday said they are hopeful but still unsure that the Aqua Dome swimming pool in Buffalo Grove High School will be ready by Saturday.

Completion of the pool, originally scheduled for Labor Day, has been set back repeatedly because of construction delays. Park district swim classes were scheduled to begin last Saturday but were postponed again.

Stan Crosland, park director, said the length of the swim programs will not be shortened because of the late start. He said classes will run into Christmas vacation.

The park board last week voted to withhold further payments to Pritscher and Erbach of Arlington Heights, the general contractor for the pool, until construction is completed. Board members approved the 10th payment of $38,111 but directed Crosland to withhold it until work is completed.

PARK PRES. EUGENE Muryn and Comr. William Kiddie said they opposed approving the expenditure before work is completed. They both favored removing the payment from the warrant and considering it at the next regular park board meeting.

Comr. Joseph Seltanni termed the contractor's performance "unprofessional," but said the park board should "demonstrate good faith" by making the payment available should work be finished.

Charles Erbach Sr., of Pritscher and Erbach, said last week his firm has had problems getting subcontractors in to do work on the pool. He said the delays were not the fault of his firm.

een costume contest at Kilmer School. The Halloween party was one of many conducted throughout School Dist. 21.

Commentary

Do firemen have too much pride?

Rich Honack

by RICH HONACK

Pride. It's a word that causes wars, death, embarrassment and makes lasting enemies. It's also a word that is causing problems in an area that should be clear of conflicts — fire departments. For several years the Wheeling and Long Grove Fire Protection Districts have been fighting. They continue to argue who is going to give protection to the Lake County section of Buffalo Grove.

The feud boils down even further between the Long Grove district and the Buffalo Grove Fire Department Inc., which is employed by the Wheeling district to cover Cook County Buffalo Grove.

SOME DAY THIS FIGHT is going to end in the death of an innocent citizen, who happened to be caught in the middle. Unlikely? Normally, the answer would be "yes." But the way things have been going the last few weeks, anything could happen.

Take for instance, last week when the Long Grove district ambulance responded to an auto accident with injuries at Rt. 83 and Arlington Heights Road.

In that accident, nine people were taken to Northwest Community Hospital — all in the same ambulance at the same time. Also riding in the vehicle were two firemen, which brings the total number of people in that ambulance to 11.

The passengers were two adults and seven children.

ACCORDING TO OFFICIALS at Northwest Community, all of the passengers of that ambulance were treated for some type of injury. One was serious enough to be kept overnight in the hospital. This disputes what Long Grove District officials said about only a few of the victims being injured.

The passengers were also from two different vehicles, and represented two different families. This disputes Buffalo Grove village officials, who said yesterday that the reason for all the people riding in one ambulance was because a mother requested it.

No matter what the reasons, there should never have been nine accident victims piled into one emergency vehicle when two more ambulances were less than 1 1/2 miles away in the Buffalo Grove fire station.

A Buffalo Grove policeman offered to call the Buffalo Grove department for mutual aid but Long Grove refused, according to police officials.

WHY THE REFUSAL?

Two of the reasons given by officials are above, but the fact of the matter goes deeper — too much pride by the Long Grove department.

Pride that says:

• If we call the Buffalo Grove firemen, we'll see their names in the headlines because they have a working paramedic program.

• If we call Buffalo Grove for help, residents of the Lake County section of the village may think we can't handle the job of covering their area.

• Asking Buffalo Grove for help may cause Lake County Buffalo Grove residents to vote in favor of annexation into the Wheeling district in what seems to be an inevitable referendum by Jan. 1.

While it's entitled to fight for its territory, the Long Grove district should confine that battle to the conference table and the voters.

Let's leave these problems out of the business at hand for a professional fire department — The job of saving life and property, using all resources available.

THE MANY FACES of Halloween jack-o-lanterns range from the festive to the grotesque. James Lenahan's skillfully carved pumpkin (above) displayed the spooky side of last night's festivities. Children from the Kilmer School, however, like their pumpkin faces a bit more cheerful, as evidenced by their window decorations at the Ranchmart Shopping Center in Buffalo Grove (below).

Scheduled Nov. 11

Volunteers asked for blood drive

The Buffalo Grove Blood Donor Commission is seeking pledge captains for its Nov. 11 blood drive at Buffalo Grove High School.

Harold Gianopoulos, chairman of the commission, said yesterday the commission is looking for volunteers to go door-to-door in the village to solicit donations. Anyone wishing to serve as a pledge captain should call Carol Lauter at 541-4640 or Sylvia Bogart at 541-1620.

Dr. Gianopoulos said residents can donate blood at the school, which is at Dundee and Arlington Heights roads, between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Those wishing to donate blood should call the village hall at 541-8984 to make an appointment.

The goal for the drive is 100 to 150 pints of blood, Dr. Gianopoulos said.

The donations will go toward the village program which provides free blood replacement anywhere in the country for all residents of a community if 4 per cent of its population donates one pint of blood each year.

The entire village is now covered, but officials said continued donations are necessary to assure future eligibility.

IN ADDITION TO the village program, there is also one for organizations it operates the same way as the community program except that a pint of blood must be donated by 20 per cent of the organization's members each year in order for every member to be eligible. The blood donated toward the organization also counts toward the village goal.

If the community or organization falls short of its requirements, individuals who have donated and their immediate families are still eligible for free blood replacement.

Persons eligible under the program will be given as much blood as they need for as long as they need it.

Donors must be between 18 and 65 years old and weigh at least 110 pounds. Persons who have had hepatitis are not eligible to donate.

Milwaukee Avenue widening plans set

Plans are being made to widen Milwaukee Avenue at Hintz Road in unincorporated Wheeling Township.

The Illinois Department of Transportation this week opened bids on a project to construct turn lanes on Milwaukee, which is currently four lanes.

Low bid was submitted by Milburn Bros. Inc., Mount Prospect, for $184,000. The contract is expected to be awarded in three to four weeks, with the job slated to be completed in 50 working days. The tab will be picked up by the state transportation department.

Other bids were submitted by Glaze Construction Co., Algonquin, $204,827, and Rock Road Construction Co., Des Plaines, $208,157.

Disorderly charge

Frederick T. Rutter, 37, of 234 W. Jeffery Ave., Wheeling, was charged with disorderly conduct Tuesday after he allegedly forced his way into a neighbor's home.

Police said Rutter was found inside the house of Raymond Hernandez, 8 E. Jeffery Ave., at 12:25 a.m. grasping Hernandez by his bathrobe. Police added that Rutter said the house was his and he was trying to get the Hernandezes out of it. Rutter will appear Nov. 20 in Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Illegal possession of drugs charged

A 21-year-old Buffalo Grove man was charged with illegal drug possession Tuesday by Wheeling police after he was stopped for traffic violations.

Wheeling police said a quantity of marijuana was found in the car of Ronald J. Anderson, 453 Diane Dr. Anderson was stopped after he was allegedly driving eastbound in the westbound lanes of Dundee Road, near Elmhurst Road. This was about 3 a.m. Tuesday.

Anderson was charged with possession of marijuana, driving on a suspended license, driving in the wrong lane and unlawful use of a license, police said. He will appear Nov. 20 in Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Tickets still available for Thompson breakfast

A limited number of tickets are still available for the Wheeling American Legion's Eggs and Issues Breakfast Nov. 10 which will feature U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson, the man responsible for the recent investigations into corruption in the Chicago area.

Tony Parelio, chairman of the breakfast, said tickets are now at a premium. He said most of the 150 available tickets have now been sold. The breakfast will begin at 8:30 a.m. at the Union Hotel, 124 S. Milwaukee Ave.

Interest in the breakfast has been stimulated by the current investigation that has called a number of Wheeling officials before a federal grand jury. The investigation is focusing on alleged building and zoning shakedowns in Wheeling.

Thompson, however, has said he expects to limit his remarks to his office and its operations. "What I'll be talking about is the operation of our office, what we're engaged in and general remarks about public service in general," he said when contacted. The topic of his speech will be "Integrity and Public Service."

THE U.S. ATTORNEY last week announced the first indictments resulting from the series of investigations into suburban corruption. Those indictments affected former officials in Hoffman Estates, and may be discussed by Thompson at the breakfast.

Gene Sackett, past commander of the Michael R. Blanchfield American Legion Post 1068, said Thompson was the post's first choice for a speaker at the breakfast.

"We think he is a rising star on the law enforcement horizon," Sackett said. "What we try to do each year is pick a speaker who would appeal to the local businessman."

Donations for the breakfast are $3. Persons interested in ticket information can call 541-4280 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays.

Move is tougher than state law: attorney

City council acts to reveal beneficiaries of land trusts

by STEVE BROWN

City officials took action Tuesday to require disclosure of land trust beneficiaries in all zoning matters in Des Plaines, but a city attorney hinted the provision may be extended to cover a number of other matters.

Terming the land trust disclosure provision "rather unique, and probably the first to be enacted in this area," City Corporation Counsel Robert DiLeonardi said such disclosure would aid the city in many different areas.

DiLeonardi also noted a new state law, which became effective Oct. 1, requires the disclosure of all land trust beneficiaries in all matters in which the trust seeks zoning relief, liquor licenses, business permits or other forms of approval from any government unit in the state.

He noted that the Des Plaines' action, which comes as a text amendment to the zoning ordinance, is more stringent than the state law.

DiLeonardi said the city ordinance would also require the disclosure of all beneficiaries for 12 months preceding the zoning request. This would prevent the beneficiaries from dropping out of the land trust just prior to a zoning hearing and then rejoining the trust after the relief had been granted. The ordinance was suggested last spring by Ald. Thomas Koplos (1st).

The attorney said the disclosure amendment is justified by the city's home rule authority granted by the 1970 state constitution.

"It would be helpful for the city to know who the land owners are in case there was any conflict of interest or an aspect of unreliability concerning the matter," DiLeonardi noted.

He added the provision would also be beneficial in enacting Planned Unit Developments (PUD) agreements. He said the disclosure would allow for speedier enforcement of city code violations.

There were no objections to the text amendment during the ZBA hearing. In a letter to DiLeonardi, James Sheldon, trust officer for the First National Bank of Des Plaines, endorsed the proposal.

Sheldon said the bank strongly supports the enactment of the ordinance change. He added the bank has advised trust customers not to use land trust or other types of conventional trust agreements as a way to hide the ownership of the land.

Sheldon also promised the bank's cooperation in providing any assistance necessary concerning the ordinance.

DiLeonardi indicated the city might enact disclosure provisions to cover all aspects of municipal business where land trusts might be involved. The city could enact the state law or it could elect to incorporate the provision requiring disclosure of all land trust beneficiaries within the last 12 months.

DiLeonardi said he believes the city law should be more severe and noted the city has the authority to enact a more stringent provision than the state law.

Home improvements store approved by zoning board

Despite protests from a number of local residents, the Des Plaines Zoning Board of Appeals granted a zoning change to allow the establishment of a home improvements store at 517 N. Laurel in the city.

The change will rezone the property, which is presently owned by Scientific Machinery Movers, from R-5, multiple-family residential, to C-4, commercial.

Attorney James Frankel, who represented both the present owners and the Kraftwood Lumber Co. of Highland Park, said the building would be used as a retail store for wall covering, floor and ceiling tile, and other home improvement products. The company presently operates a store at 515 Lee St., Des Plaines.

Frankel said that the present occupants of the 20,000 square foot building have caused many complaints from neighbors, resulting in the issuance of several city code violation tickets.

A group of local residents, headed by former city treasurer Irving Ratelke, presented a petition objecting to the zoning change and argued the multiple-family zoning should not be altered.

While representatives of the lumber company contended several other properties in the area had been rezoned to commercial recently, Ratelke argued those parcels of land were some distance away from the Laurel Street tract.

In addition to a proposed $50,000 renovation of the building, Thomas Mathan, president of the lumber firm, said the company also plans to blacktop an adjacent lot for customer parking. Mathan also noted that if the rezoning were not granted, the company would probably close its Lee Street store when the lease expires in April because the present store is too small.

ZBA member Bud Thomas voted against the zoning change suggesting the move might represent spot zoning. Other members agreed the possibility might exist, but voted for the proposal.

Another resident, Burton Kosmen, raised a question on possible flooding problems that may be created by construction of the 13,000 square foot parking lot.

Kosmen contended covering of the area with blacktop would hinder present drainage and could overburden local storm sewers.

Frankel contended the lot would cause no more problems than current ones.

A FINAL ARCHITECT'S rendering of the proposed Superblock project, was released this week by the downtown redevelopment proponents. The new design for the $12 million facility, includes three floors of retail space and a 12-story office building.

This view, which was prepared by the architectural firm of Erickson and Stevens, looks northeast from the corner of Lee and Prairie streets in Des Plaines. Developers hope to begin construction in February.

City to weigh more parking at apartments

Developers of new multiple-family housing in the city will be required to provide more parking space for tenants if the city council passes a change approved by the Zoning Board of Appeals Tuesday.

The increased parking space requirement was introduced by Michael Richardson, city director of zoning and planning. Richardson said the changes were developed after he had received complaints about inadequate parking space at a number of apartment areas in Des Plaines.

Richardson said he also surveyed several locations and determined parking spaces provided with the apartment were full, and adjacent on-street parking appeared to be "overflowing."

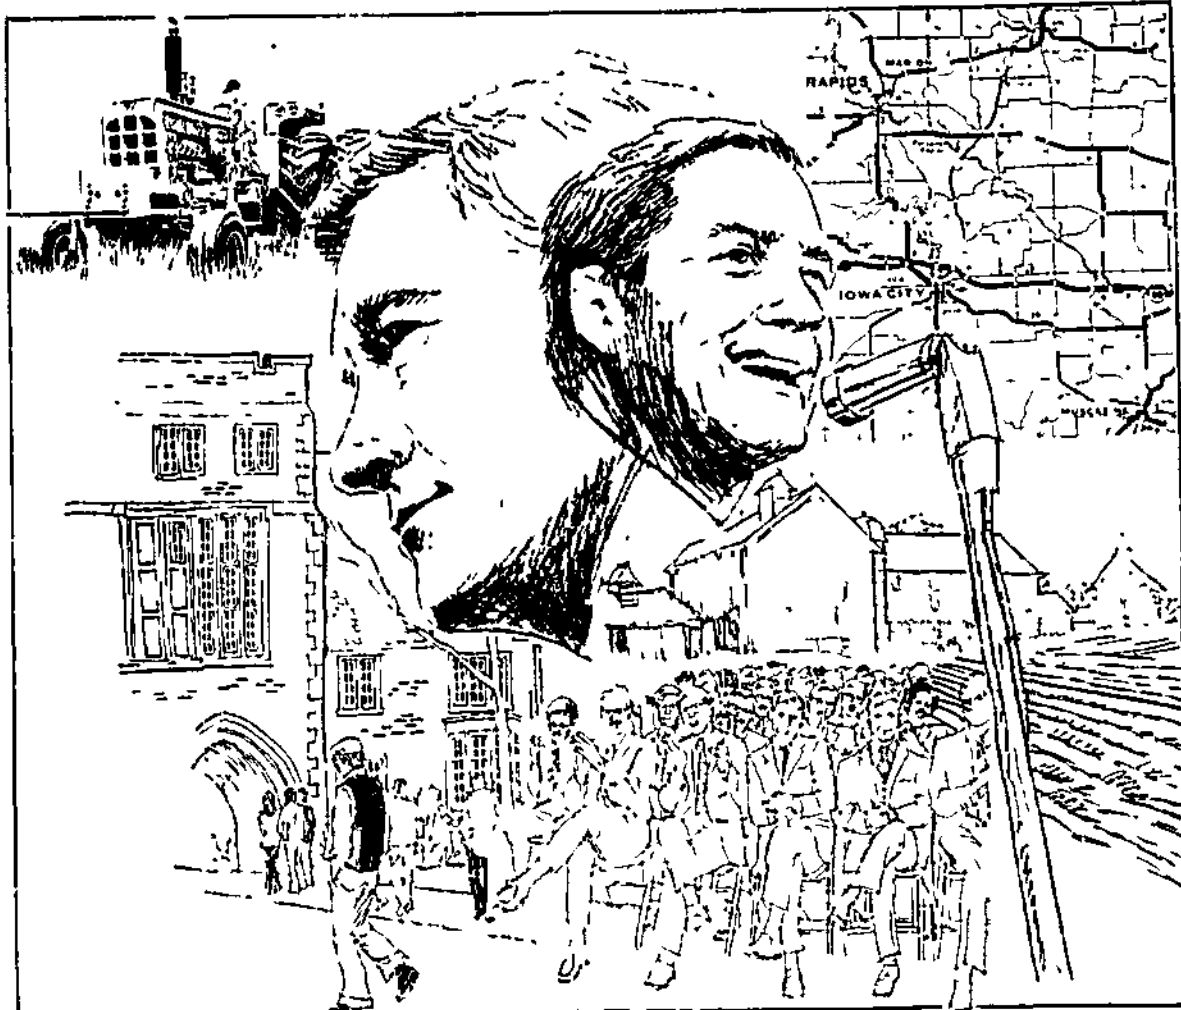

Under the text amendment approved by the ZBA, R-5, multiple-family residential, units will be required to increase parking space from one space per unit to one and one-half spaces per unit.

SINGLE-FAMILY homes, row houses and town houses will be required to provide two spaces per unit as opposed to the present one space per unit.

Richardson said in researching the matter, 1970 Census statistics indicated 47 per cent of the 16,718 households in the city had two or more cars.

"We do not foresee a decrease in the ownership of cars in the city," he said, adding that while downtown area apartments were built with the idea residents could walk to shopping and use public transportation, many appear to be keeping their automobiles.

The only residential zoning class not changed in the new ordinance is the R-4, multiple family, units which will still require one and one half parking spaces per unit.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is a story of the mood of the Midwest and the way a presidential candidate is received in these times of scandal and disruption in national politics. It is a story of everyday people and how they feel about the times and how they feel about Charles Percy from Illinois, who is running for President three years before the election in the heartland of America, where presidential elections are won and lost.

by DOUG RAY

IOWA'S INTERSTATE 80 — If there is a middle American, he is a man like Big Larry Noble from Muscatine, Iowa, driver of this black Cadillac limousine cruising past the corn and soybean fields of the Midwest.

"Cool enough for you, Senator?" Big Larry glanced slightly to his right and behind him where the Senator was sitting with two reporters.

"Just perfect," Percy answered. Big Larry smiled. He looked straight ahead across the steering wheel of the car while the air conditioner pumped recycled air over us. It was Thursday afternoon and it must have been near 80. Outside there was a trace of smog, but there never is in these parts. No Sears Tower or Hancock or tollways or brightened street corners lit up like Christmas trees.

This is the Midwest, home of the middle American, the silent majority — the home of the people who elect Presidents.

BIG LARRY grabs another Camel from the dashboard, lights it and takes a long, heavy draw. He doesn't say much, especially to strangers and even to get the basic information about the car and why he is driving, you have to wring it out of him.

It seems the car belongs to Larry's father-in-law who is in the sand and gravel business. And the last time one of the family's gas guzzlers hit the political trail — at least for presidential politics — was in 1964. Barry Goldwater was back there right where Chuck Percy now sits glancing through small note cards with his ankles crossed.

"It wasn't very good luck was it," Larry grinned. He has a hard mean look though he is friendly enough. Size him up and you can tell right off he is the kind of guy you don't talk back to unless you tip the scales at about 200 with most of your weight in the shoulders.

"What are the people like around here?" I asked him. "You know, the politics?"

"I'd say conservative Republican, most of them," he said shrugging.

In a few minutes the black limo would arrive at the Iowa campus. Big Larry pushed on, his brown cowboy boots with the pointed toes pressed firmly on the footleed.

The state trooper in the lead car took a quick right onto another route and the caravan of Oldsmobiles and the limo responded in order. We moved up the highway through red traffic lights to keep the head and the tail together.

THIS WILL BE the second stop for the Percy party. We began the day before noon, in Moline, Ill., at the headquarters of John Deere and Co., the firm known for its green farm tractors. The Senator spoke to businessmen, mayors and presented Deere Chairman William Hewitt with an award for a movie the company made. We spent more than an hour there, ending when Percy jumped aboard a John Deere snowmobile for a ride across the massive company properties.

Now we are rolling again, toward Iowa City, in the spirit of a Cadillac whistlestop campaign. In the back seat, Percy is getting the third degree on everything from his friends in Washington to his physical fitness program and a stationary bicycle he uses to keep the pounds off.

Percy asked how much time before arrival. Just a few minutes. He cut off the interview as we approached the city limits. Last minute cramming before the speech. He would be lecturing children of the plains country, boys who had actually milked cows, rosy cheeked farmer's daughters, students from Des Moines, even Chicago and New York; all who somehow found themselves together on the campus of rolling hills and narrow streets with the sweet smell of Indian summer and a river that cuts the campus in two.

We got out of the car. Percy stayed inside, then emerged and walked briskly up the steps of the Iowa Memorial Union. "Hi, I'm Chuck Percy." He shook hands with the desk clerk and went upstairs for a press conference.

DOWN IN THE auditorium the students waited, about 800 of them. All the seats were taken and many kids stood in the back.

"Why are there so many people here today?" I asked a

Rovin' the presidential trails with Chuck Percy

petite red haired girl who was passing out leaflets at the door. "Is this a convocation?" She looked at me quizzically; her eyebrows sagged. "Do they make these people come for college credit?"

She said no, that this is just the first in a series of guest speakers on campus, that yes there are more kids here than expected.

A senior, one of the campus Young Republicans who says after graduation he plans to work for the party, had a wide smile spread across his face. "I was afraid things wouldn't work out . . . I was a nervous wreck. In '71, McGovern got about 1,500 when he came here. Last year, Tower (Senator John Tower of Texas) got 200 people . . . this is what I call a great turnout," he said.

The kids were anxious. As Percy walked on stage, their attention went with him. He began his talk. It was on the Soviet-U.S. relations and he urged the Soviets to open up to the concept of free speech.

There is only one group upset with the Senator's appearance. And that is a limp effort by the Young Americans For Freedom who like Ronald Reagan better as a presidential candidate. They pasted bumper stickers on the walls, but most were torn down later by students leaving the union. There are only 50 YAF members on campus.

PERCY WENT ON: "We merely ask that the USSR live up to its own constitution which guarantees freedom of speech."

I walked outside. Not because the speech was uninteresting but because it is a beautiful day, too nice to stay indoors even to listen to the man who three years from now might have the presidential seal in front of him when he talks.

Sun splashes a shine over the school and students are carrying their jackets under their arms. Parked outside the union are pickup trucks. Across the street dozens of girls are batting a ball around with paddles. The black limousine in front is as out of place as the tall lean Iowa state trooper standing next to it.

Walking alone, between the athletic field and the union, is a girl dressed in blue jeans and sweater. She carries a tennis racket in one hand and a book entitled "Power Politics" in the other. She is small, bespectacled of the wire-rim variety.

She says her name is Patricia Zimmerman, 18, a freshman from Westchester, Ill., and that she is heading for the auditorium for the Percy speech, but a little behind schedule.

Right away she volunteers that she hates Richard Nixon. Who does she like? Really nobody, she said. Then why is she going to hear Percy? "Because he may capture the '76 nomination" was her answer.

PATRICIA ZIMMERMAN says she is rather typical of college kids today. She is concerned but not activist, functioning in sort of a transition period between what was and something else. An Allende rally a few days ago brought out the usual people you might find at that kind of thing. Even Patricia Zimmerman was there, but she wasn't impressed.

"It seemed like they were using an excuse to protest and it didn't work out," she said.

"So what are students in the heartland of America concerned about right now?"

"I'd say politics and the university," she said quickly.

There is this intramural athletic field and a day-care center that face destruction by a new road, and believe it or not the

Party tonight for retiring Haag

A party in honor of retiring Des Plaines Fire Chief Frank Haag will be held tonight at the Camelot Restaurant, Elmhurst Road and Oakton Street.

A cocktail hour will begin at 6:30 p.m. to be followed by dinner at 7:30. Tickets at $7.50 each are still available and may be obtained by calling Lt. Richard Arthur, 298-4800. Tickets may also be purchased at the door.

Dorothy Oliver

We've got a small-time boys football program in Des Plaines — and boy, are we lucky.

For the past two months I've refrained from writing about the Des Plaines Park District's midget football program at the risk of being an obnoxious football mother.

My oldest played defensive linebacker for the South Rams this season. It was his first time on the gridiron and, under the leadership of coach Mike Powers, it was a tremendous experience.

I found myself slipping naturally into the football mother role. Although I tried hard not to interfere with the coaching or making suggestions on plays I couldn't help running along the sidelines yelling, "Get him . . . Block for him . . . Catch it . . . Watch out behind you."

I TRIED TO FIT right in there with the fathers. My only error of the six-game season was asking my son how his leg was after he limped off the field.

"You don't do that. It embarrasses the kid," I was advised by a supporter who knew better.

Other than that I kept in mind all times that to let a kid know he's done a good job you either slap him on his tailbone pad or slug him one in the shoulder pads. Then you whisper something eloquent like, "Atta boy, good play."

By standing next to one father I learned there are standard, accepted football words that are to be yelled from the sidelines. They include: Be tough. Way to be. Way to go. Get tough.

I ALSO LEARNED you don't say, "Get tough, Billy." You say, "Get tough, Oliver."

When it's your kid on the field football is fun in three inches of water after a driving rain (that was about three weeks ago) and also during the cold driving rain (that was last weekend).

The kids played hard, played to win, but also played just because it was fun.

There were few standing heroes. Any kid who did something well was a hero. We'd cheer, the kids would practically knock him to the ground in their enthusiasm, and the coach would shake his hand and slap him in the shoulder pads.

I saw only one example of bad sportsmanship by the kids — and that was precipitated by an opposing coach who overreacted to a referee's decision and turned into a temporary loudmouth. The boys chimed in with the coach.

WITH THE EXCEPTION of one team — Maple, the winners of the conference — our boys dressed in original hodgepodge. Few of the boys had full equipment. The Park District supplied shoulder pads and helmets and parents supplied the rest.

Jerseys included everything from father's worn out T-shirt to the purple, black, blue, yellow, red or green store-bought types. Some had pants with pads; most had jeans with holes in the knees.

They wore little colored pull-overs in order to tell the home team from the opposition. They may not have looked like much but they had a good time.

That's why we're lucky.

The Des Plaines program is totally disorganized and amateurish compared to midget football in other towns near here. Our kids begin in mid-September, practice twice a week, play six games to the cheers of a few fans and that's it.

NOW TRY THIS ON for size: One other Northwest suburban community starts practicing — daily — in August. They have cheerleaders (remember these are fifth and sixth graders), a homecoming game, uniforms, play-off competitions, trophies, pictures, banquets, booster clubs and, would you believe, road trips out of state for games.

I like organized sports but if a 10-year-old gets soaked with all the hoopla at that tender age what do they have to look forward to four years later when they make the freshman team in high school. After traveling across the country as a fifth grade pigskin hero, how must it feel playing on the lowly frosh team in front of empty bleachers.

I see it as too much too soon. Kind of a parental ego trip with big people acting out their Joe Namath fantasies through their kids.

I like what we have — disorganized as it may be.

North Shore annexations proposed

by KATHERINE BOYCE

A citizens' committee at Oakton Community College, frustrated by its inability to select a permanent campus for the college, has reversed an August decision by suggesting annexation of the North Shore to Oakton's district.

After two hours of heated debate Tuesday night the committee, formed a year ago to pick a site for the college, voted unanimously to seek annexation of four high school districts on the North Shore to Oakton's district.

The Oakton board of trustees has twice failed to get public support for two campuses it has selected and formed the citizens' committee to pick a site acceptable to the community.

The committee has been looking at several sites in the college district and on the North Shore for a permanent campus, but North Shore residents have said they want their own college and do not want to annex to Oakton. When Oakton's citizens' committee met Aug. 7 it voted unanimously to reject all sites on the North Shore and split its vote 4 to 4 between two sites in the college district.

TUESDAY NIGHT'S meeting was marked by frustration among committee members who claim they have accomplished little in selecting a campus for Oakton. Committee members complained they are at the same stage of site selection as they were a year ago, suggested the committee should be disbanded, suggested the college hold a referendum asking Oakton voters to choose a site, suggested the committee choose a site immediately, and finally decided to ask for annexation.

Committee member Evelyn Rosenzweig from Skokie said, "You've been around for four years and I can't believe you're at this point tonight" and added the college board is "too concerned about the community" reaction to the selection of a site.

"The worst thing that could happen is you won't get elected next time," she said. She suggested that the committee should disband.

Criteria for selecting a site "should have been on the table two years ago," said Wallace Lieberman from Skokie. "What it really boils down to is getting down and picking a site. I'm getting sick and tired of these meetings and I think the community is getting sick and tired," he said.

"The school does have to be someplace — doesn't it?" asked Ed Blake, committee representative from Glenview. "We've got one, two possible choices," he said, adding the college is going to have to pick one "and the state is just going to have to live with it."

OAKTON TRUSTEE Griffith MacDonald commented, "I find that this is frustrating to the point of mental masturbation. I don't see why we can't make a choice. What are we horsing around for?"

Paul Gilson, chairman of the board of trustees and its site committee, said the college wants to know what criteria the public feels is important in site selection and what its objections would be to each site under consideration.

"We want to know what these things are before we walk into another meeting with another site," said Gilson. The board doesn't want to "have to sit there with 500 people screaming out 'You didn't consider this,'" said Gilson. "One thing we don't want to be is naive."

Several committee members said the college was trying to second guess public reaction and told Gilson public reaction to a site cannot be anticipated.

LIEBERMAN suggested the board hold a referendum allowing the public to select a campus. The committee agreed by a 5 to 3 vote. The suggestion was later discarded when the committee agreed to ask for annexation.

Railroad may appeal fine on noise law

Officials of the Chicago and North Western Ry. will decide during the next month whether to appeal a court decision stating the company was in violation of the Des Plaines noise ordinance.

In the meantime, city officials expressed satisfaction that the court upheld the controversial ordinance in its first legal test.

The railroad was fined $30 earlier this week for violating the anti-noise provision, which was enacted by the city council on March, 1972. The fine was handed down by Cook County Circuit Court Judge Marvin Peters.

Thomas Greenland, C&NW attorney, told The Herald the decision on any possible appeal will be made in the next 30 days.

"We haven't decided the legal question as yet, but we are working to reduce the noise situation," Greenland said.

WHILE THE FINE levied in the case will not cover the city's prosecution expense, Mayor Herbert Behrel was pleased by the outcome.

"It establishes a good precedent for future cases," Behrel said.

"We hope it will cause the railroad to go back to the brass and say, 'Look fellows, we're going to get ticketed every time we go into Des Plaines. We lost the case, let's do something about the noise,'" he added.

Greenland said the railroad is making every effort to reduce noise. However local residents continue to complain about noise, particularly at the train yard near the Wolf Road-Thacker Street intersection.

Burglary nets $500 in tools

An estimated $500 worth of tools were stolen early Tuesday when burglars forced their way into Al's Adco Radiator Shop, 1289 Golf Rd., said Des Plaines police.

The burglars apparently broke a window to enter the building, and ransacked a work area from where the tools were stolen, according to reports.

Cook County Sheriff's police said burglars also entered the apartment of a Des Plaines resident Monday and stole $355 in stereo tape equipment, a watch and a ring.

The victim, Timothy Tomich, 10039 Linda Ln., told police he was at work when the burglars entered the apartment through a bedroom window.

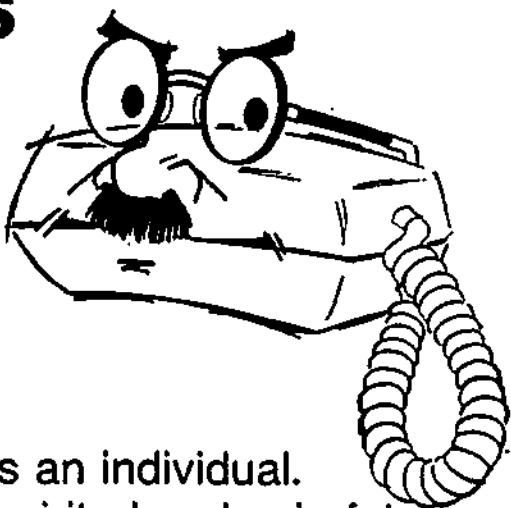

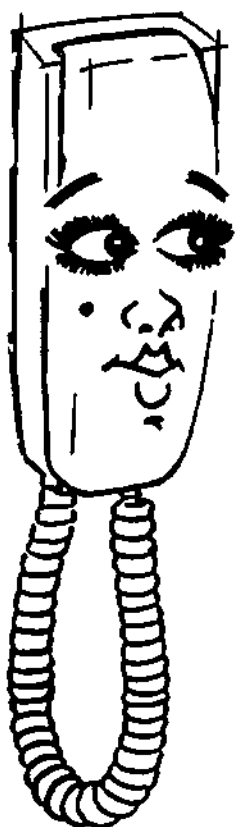

Officials to tour Oakton College campus

State legislators and municipal officials will meet with trustees, administrators, faculty members and students from Oakton Community College Sunday at 11 a.m. on the temporary campus, 7900 N. Nagle Ave., Morton Grove.

The purpose of the meeting is to inform officials about the college and give them a tour of the temporary campus.

City to press case to bar sewage plant

The Illinois Appellate Court has been asked to overturn a lower court decision and allow Des Plaines officials to continue their court battle with the Metropolitan Sanitary District over the construction of a sewage treatment plant in the city.

City Corporation Counsel Robert DiLeonardi told a three-judge appeals court Tuesday Des Plaines intends to press a new legal theory in the court action with the MSD.

Litigation over the proposed plant, which is slated to be built at Elmhurst Road and Oakton Street, has been going since 1967.

THE FIRST LAWSUIT was filed by the city, contending its zoning laws should be adhered to by the MSD. That case went all the way to the Illinois Supreme Court, with the decision going against the city.

However, Des Plaines reinstated the suit after the enactment of the new Illinois Constitution.

DiLeonardi argued that the home-rule provisions place the city in a superior position to the MSD and the sanitary district would have to comply with city zoning laws.

The attorney requested the appeals court reverse a Cook County Circuit Court decision which dismissed the second city suit. Judge Samuel Epstein said the second suit represented nothing new and the case had already been decided.

DILEONARDI SAID the new home-rule provision represents a new legal argument which must be decided. He asked the appellate court to order a new hearing on the matter.

MSD attorney Vincent Flood contended the city's attempt to use home rule power constituted an "abusive use of power." He added the law really changes nothing and contended there was no reason for a new trial.

"We have to have the authority to do our job, without it we would never get a plant built anywhere," Flood said.

No decision is expected on the appellate court case for several months.

Chicago man charged with attempted theft

A Chicago man was charged with attempted theft after police said he tried to take money from a cash register at a Des Plaines grocery store.

Leonard Sassan, 25, of 921 Lamon, was taken into custody along with three other persons a short time after the incident near Elmhurst and Golf roads Friday afternoon.

According to reports Sassan entered the Jewel-Osco store, 1500 Lee St., and tried to open a cash register at a checkout counter. He reportedly left after an unsuccessful attempt but was noticed by a checkout clerk who relayed a description of the man and his car to police.

Sassan was released on $1,000 bond and has been scheduled to appear in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court Dec. 20.

Two other men and a woman taken into custody with Sassan were released without charges.

Nationwide problem: builder

Cement shortage may delay road construction in village

A nationwide shortage of cement may delay the completion of work on Arlington Heights and Bluestield roads and Devon Avenue.

Burt Dahlstrom, superintendent for Milburn Bros. Inc., said, "We are fighting a critical material shortage. We don't know from one day to the next how much cement we'll have to pour."

The county contract for the expansion work on the roads called for a completion date of late 1974. Milburn Brothers, however, had expected to finish the work by the end of this construction season.

DAHLSTROM said the shortage could prevent the company from finishing by the end of this season. He said the company wants to finish the job because the work has been going well, but supplies of cement cannot be depended on.

"It's very hard for us to keep going, but we'll try to keep going as long as we have cement," he said.

According to Dahlstrom, the shortage of "bulk cement" is a nationwide problem affecting many construction jobs in the area. He said some companies have only been able to work one day on a job and then are forced to stop working while they wait for more cement.

THE COMPANY already has finished two lanes on Arlington Heights and Bluestield roads. Dahlstrom said even if the company is forced to stop work, two-way traffic may use the roads through the winter.

The roads are being widened to four lanes under a $2.5 million county construction contract.

When completed, Arlington Heights Road will be four lanes throughout the length of the village. Bluestield Road will be four lanes west of Arlington Heights Road to Wellington Avenue.

As part of the project, Kennedy Boulevard, where it intersects Arlington Heights and Bluestield roads, is also being widened to match the expansion of Bluestield Road.

After the expansion work is finished, the intersections of Arlington Heights Road-Cosman Road-Chelmsford Lane, Arlington Heights Road-Bluestield Road and Arlington Heights Road-Devon Avenue, will be regulated by traffic lights. These intersections had been regulated by four-way stop signs.

United Fund here near one-third of its goal

The Elk Grove United Fund has reached about one-third of its $12,000 goal, according to Michael Leyden, fund president.

Leyden said the residential portion of the drive collected about $3,000 and, combined with other money collected, raised the fund's total collection to about $4,000.

Collections in the business community are now starting and donations from municipal employees and teachers are expected later in the month.

Leyden said the residential campaign was a "big success." He said, "We raised 50 per cent more than we've raised from the residential area."

THIS YEAR, for the first time in the fund's 10-year history, a door-to-door campaign was conducted in the residential areas to raise money. Leyden said because of work involved in organizing a door-to-door campaign, he could not say if the additional funds collected were "worth the effort."

Residents who were not contacted in the door-to-door campaign and want to contribute may send their donation to: Elk Grove United Fund, Inc., P.O. Box 131; Elk Grove Village, Ill. 60007.

The village fund is a member of the Suburban Community Chest. The suburban organization, with the Community Chest of Chicago and the Red Cross, form the Metropolitan Crusade of Mercy.

All funds collected in Elk Grove Village remain in the community area. Some of the organizations receiving support from the village fund are: Clearbrook Center, local Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and Camp Fire Girls, Elk Grove-Schaumburg Township Mental Health Center, Northwest Suburban Homemaker Service and the U.S.O.

Local grid team in title game

The Elk Grove Village Warriors will meet the Glen Ellyn Nicks this Sunday afternoon for the Widgeo Division championship of the Fox Valley Traveling League.

The Warriors won the south division of the league last Sunday, beating the Elmhurst Chiefs, 41-0.

The championship game will be played at South Park Field, Ill. Rte. 53 and Roosevelt Rd. in Glen Ellyn starting at 1:30.

Planners to discuss 3 projects

Recommendations on three proposed village projects are expected at tonight's plan commission meeting.

The commission will meet at 8 o'clock in the village hall, 901 Wellington Ave.

The developments are the Phoenix Construction Co. five-story condominium: Robert Fleming's request to rezone the site of the Centex office at Arlington Heights Road and Oakwood Drive, and the Centex Homes Corp. request to change the zoning ordinance to permit building extensions into space now required for front, rear and side yards around homes.

At last week's commission meeting, Chairman William Shannon said the group may also discuss the reduction in density for the Devon-53 housing project recently suggested by the developers.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF the plan commission are submitted to the village board of trustees for final action. The recommendations are only advisory and the trustees are not obligated to follow them.

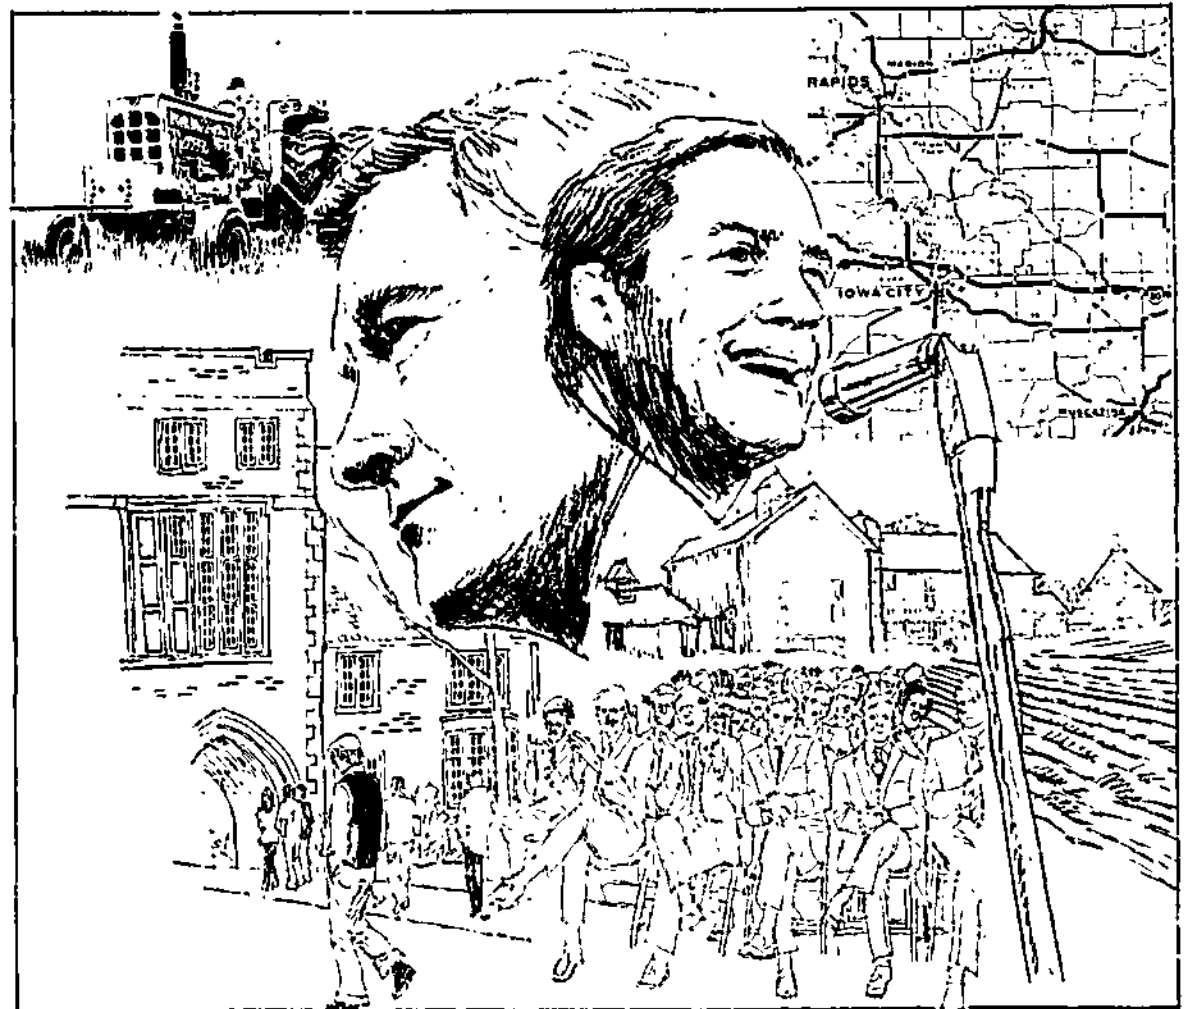

The Phoenix firm wants to build a five-story condominium at the corner of Ridge Avenue and Elk Grove Boulevard. The condominium units are described as "luxury" by the developer.

Residents of the area appeared at a public hearing in September to protest the proposed construction of the condominium. They contend the structure is too large and

by DOUG RAY

IOWA'S INTERSTATE 80 — If there is a middle American, he is a man like Big Larry Noble from Muscatine, Iowa, driver of this black Cadillac limousine cruising past the corn and soybean fields of the Midwest.

"Cool enough for you, Senator?" Big Larry glanced slightly to his right and behind him where the Senator was sitting with two reporters.

"Just perfect," Percy answered. Big Larry smiled. He looked straight ahead across the steering wheel of the car while the air conditioner pumped recycled air over us. It was Thursday afternoon and it must have been near 80. Outside there was a trace of smog, but there never is in these parts. No Sears Tower or Hancock or tollways or brightened street corners lit up like Christmas trees.

This is the Midwest, home of the middle American, the silent majority — the home of the people who elect Presidents.

BIG LARRY grabs another Camel from the dashboard, lights it and takes a long, heavy draw. He doesn't say much, especially to strangers and even to get the basic information about the car and why he is driving, you have to wring it out of him.

It seems the car belongs to Larry's father-in-law who is in the sand and gravel business. And the last time one of the family's gas guzzlers hit the political trail — at least for presidential politics — was in 1964. Barry Goldwater was back there right where Chuck Percy now sits glancing through small note cards with his ankles crossed.

"It wasn't very good luck was it," Larry grinned. He has a hard mean look though he is friendly enough. Size him up and you can tell right off he is the kind of guy you don't talk back to unless you tip the scales at about 200 with most of your weight in the shoulders.

"What are the people like around here?" I asked him. "You know, the politics?"

"I'd say conservative Republican, most of them," he said shrugging.

In a few minutes the black limo would arrive at the Iowa campus. Big Larry pushed on, his brown cowboy boots with the pointed toes pressed firmly on the footbed.

The state trooper in the lead car took a quick right onto another route and the caravan of Oldsmobiles and the limo responded in order. We moved up the highway through red traffic lights to keep the head and the tail together.

THIS WILL BE the second stop for the Percy party. We began the day before noon, in Moline, Ill., at the headquarters of John Deere and Co., the firm known for its green farm tractors. The Senator spoke to businessmen, mayors and presented Deere Chairman William Hewitt with an award for a movie the company made. We spent more than an hour there, ending when Percy jumped aboard a John Deere snowmobile for a ride across the massive company properties.

Now we are rolling again, toward Iowa City, in the spirit of a Cadillac whistler campaign. In the back seat, Percy is getting the third degree on everything from his friends in Washington to his physical fitness program and a stationary bicycle he uses to keep the pounds off.

Percy asked how much time before arrival. Just a few minutes. He cut off the interview as we approached the city limits. Last minute cramming before the speech. He would be lecturing children of the plains country, boys who had actually milked cows, rosy cheeked farmer's daughters, students from Des Moines, even Chicago and New York; all who somehow found themselves together on the campus of rolling hills and narrow streets with the sweet smell of Indian summer and a river that cuts the campus in two.

We got out of the car. Percy stayed inside, then emerged and walked briskly up the steps of the Iowa Memorial Union. "Hi, I'm Chuck Percy." He shook hands with the desk clerk and went upstairs for a press conference.

DOWN IN THE auditorium the students waited, about 800 of them. All the seats were taken and many kids stood in the back.

"Why are there so many people here today?" I asked a

Rovin' the presidential trails with Chuck Percy

petite red-haired girl who was passing out leaflets at the door. "Is this a convocation?" She looked at me quizzically: her eyebrows sagged. "Do they make these people come for college credit?"

She said no, that this is just the first in a series of guest speakers on campus, that yes there are more kids here than expected.

A senior, one of the campus Young Republicans who says after graduation he plans to work for the party, had a wide smile spread across his face. "I was afraid things wouldn't work out . . . I was a nervous wreck. In '71, McGovern got about 1,500 when he came here. Last year, Tower (Senator John Tower of Texas) got 200 people . . . this is what I call a great turnout," he said.

The kids were anxious. As Percy walked on stage, their attention went with him. He began his talk. It was on the Soviet-U.S. relations and he urged the Soviets to open up to the concept of free speech.

There is only one group upset with the Senator's appearance. And that is a limp effort by the Young Americans For Freedom who like Ronald Reagan better as a presidential candidate. They pasted bumper stickers on the walls, but most were torn down later by students leaving the union. There are only 50 YAF members on campus.

PERCY WENT ON. "We merely ask that the USSR live up to its own constitution which guarantees freedom of speech."

I walked outside. Not because the speech was uninteresting but because it is a beautiful day, too nice to stay indoors even to listen to the man who three years from now might have the presidential seal in front of him when he talks.

Sun splashes a shine over the school and students are carrying their jackets under their arms. Parked outside the union are pickup trucks. Across the street dozens of girls are batting a ball around with paddles. The black limousine in front is as out of place as the tall lean Iowa state trooper standing next to it.

Walking alone, between the athletic field and the union, is a girl dressed in blue jeans and sweater. She carries a tennis racket in one hand and a book entitled "Power Politics" in the other. She is small, bespectacled of the wire-rim variety.

She says her name is Patricia Zimmerman, 18, a freshman from Westchester, Ill., and that she is heading for the auditorium for the Percy speech, but a little behind schedule.

Right away she volunteers that she hates Richard Nixon. Who does she like? Really nobody, she said. Then why is she going to hear Percy? "Because he may capture the '76 nomination" was her answer.

PATRICIA ZIMMERMAN says she is rather typical of college kids today. She is concerned but no activist, functioning in sort of a transition period between what was and something else. An Allende rally a few days ago brought out the usual people you might find at that kind of thing. Even Patricia Zimmerman was there, but she wasn't impressed.

"It seemed like they were using an excuse to protest and it didn't work out," she said.

"So what are students in the heartland of America concerned about right now?"

"I'd say politics and the university," she said quickly.

There is this intramural athletic field and a day-care center that face destruction by a new road, and believe it or not the BOOK REPORTS ARE a big event at High Ridge Knolls dressed as storybook characters replace the traditional School in Des Plaines. Puppet shows and children oral and written reports.

Book report craze

New approach to old assignment a success

by BOB GALLAS

The elf had trouble keeping her antennae from falling off and the witch had a pushbroom, but that didn't dampen the enthusiasm of the audience, which was crowded around to get a good look at the performers.

The "performers" were characters from a book, carrying out a class assignment at High Ridge Knolls School in Des Plaines — oral book reports.

"I wanted book reporting in the classroom to allow the book reporter to enthusiastically share his reading experience with his classmates," said Roy Landzbaum, who started the book report craze at the school.

Landzbaum's efforts are evidently successful to any visitor in his class, where students spend hours of their free time preparing their reports and can't wait to give them.

THE REPORTS can take many forms, but are never merely written up or delivered orally. Instead, students put on puppet shows and do a scene from a book they've read or dress up as a book character and tell about their book. Classmates then try and guess which character they are.

The puppeteers are the most common of the book reporters and come with elaborate stages complete with curtains and scenery. The dialogues are simple with a lot of lines like "How are you?" "I'm fine," but the students usually get the stormy idea across.

And if the puppeteer runs into any trouble, there are always plenty of helpers in the audience willing to lend a hand by picking up a piece of scenery or opening a stuck curtain.

Occasionally, the next act has to be reminded that their last-minute rehearsals are drowning out the performers.

The theater seating isn't the usual. When the act shifts to another part of the room, there's a fight for seats as kids stumble over each other.

ACCORDING TO Landzbaum, the puppet play is an excellent reporting media for the shy, withdrawn child who interacts with the character of the book. "It also helps the child who can work with his hands at stage construction, scenery and puppet making," Landzbaum added.

The reports don't always stick closely to the story line.

"Our spaceship is broken," said the occupant of a spaceship headed for distant worlds. "I'd better go out and fix it with a chisel," he added.

Landzbaum has other ideas for book reports outside of the traditional mother-ods, such as holding a mock trial that permits the defendant to tell the story of the book. The class renders a decision whether the book is good or not.

"SEVERAL students write letters to the author of the book they read, telling why they liked or disliked the book," said Landzbaum. "Students almost always receive a personal reply which they share with the class."

One child even received a reply from the famous children's author, Lois Lenski, who wrote, "All fan letters, no matter how simple, find a special place in an author's heart. They make me realize as nothing else could, the rewards of writing of children."

Landzbaum hopes that the varied methods of book reporting will incite and motivate children to read more, and make reading a part of their later lives. "I realize this won't automatically solve the problem of getting kids to read," said Landzbaum. "But if we only reach one student, it's worthwhile. If we reach scores of students, we could make readers out of a whole new generation."

would generate excess traffic that would present a hazard to the large number of school children walking in the area.

The building, if constructed, would be built in the open space adjoining the Terrace Apartments.

FLEMING is requesting that the Centex property at Arlington Heights Road and Oakwood Drive be rezoned to permit use of the building as an office for his real estate business. The property is zoned residential.

The Centex building is on the property under a temporary permit from the village, although the building has been there for 17 years.

Nearby residents have protested the rezoning request, contending Centex officials promised them when they purchased their homes that the building would be removed and the land developed for single-family homes.

The Centex Home Corp. request for extensions into the yard space requirements resulted from the discovery by the village building department that homes in the construction area west of Ill. Rte. 53 would violate village ordinance if built as planned.

THE VILLAGE granted permission for Centex to finish homes now under construction, but ordered the company to comply with ordinances for all new construction.

The village, however, asked that Centex offer suggestions on changing the ordinance for the village to consider.

The density of the Devon-53 housing project is now being considered by the village board of trustees. The plan commission has already recommended against the annexation and zoning variation requested by the developers.

Poster contest deadline

Tuesday is the deadline for posters to be submitted to school principals for the "Horizon '76" contest. The poster contest, open to students in the fourth through 12th grades, will be judged to select the village's official symbol for the bicentennial celebration in 1976.

Posters may also be submitted on Wednesday to Trustee Nanci Vanderweel at the village hall, 501 Wellington Ave.

Music festival Saturday

The Illinois Music Educators Association will hold its annual District VII conference and festival at Wheaton Central High School Saturday.

Nine students from Thomas Lively Junior High School in Elk Grove Village will be participants. Five will be members of the festival band: Ken Algozin, French horn; Carena Bain, flute; Peter Todd, alto saxophone; Tim Roberts, recording bass; and Janice Rohlfing, mallet percussion.

Four will be members of the festival orchestra: Nancy Godejahn, viola; Mary Smedley, violin; Kevin Kinsella, trumpet; and Andrew Mitsch, trombone.

Students are directed at Thomas Lively Junior High School by John E. Hedberg, bands and James Middleton, orchestras. Hedberg is also chairman of the junior high festival band planning committee.

Garbagemen vote OK for new contract

Northwest suburban garbagemen yesterday ratified a contract with area scavenger companies that could boost their wages by more than 50 per cent in three years.

Members of Locals 705 and 731 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, voting by mail, accepted the new three-year contract by about a 2 to 1 margin, according to Frank Grady, a union official.

The effect of the new contract on homeowners who subscribe to garbage pickup is uncertain.

Grady said he is "very much" satisfied with the contract. "I don't think we could have got a better one," he said.

AL HOEKSTRA, executive director of the Chicago and Suburban Refuse Disposal Association, which represents Chicago area scavenger services, was unavailable for comment.

The contract was the second agreed upon by union and refuse association bargainers, with the aid of a federal mediator.

The earlier contract offer had been turned down by the garbagemen in a voice vote at a meeting Oct. 15.

That offer provided for a salary increase of 75 cents an hour the first year of the contract, then 50 cents an hour each of the next two years. The present salary is $3.05 an hour.

The contract offer that was accepted by the garbagemen contains the same wage schedule, but in addition, has a built-in cost-of-living increase each year.

BASED ON THE 5 to 6 per cent cost-of-living increase each of the last few years, the $3.05 hourly wage could jump to $7.70 within three years.

The contract is retroactive to Oct. 1. When the previous contract expired that day, some 75 garbagemen from Brown-Ing-Ferris Industries of Illinois Inc., Barrington, staged a one-day wildcat walk-out, leaving six Northwest suburbs without scavenger service.

David Paige, general manager of Brown-Ing-Ferris, yesterday refused to comment on the new contract settlement or its effect on scavenger rates.

Pizza firm vanishes

Criston Food Service, a firm named in a recall of pizzas by the Food and Drug Administration, is apparently no longer an Elk Grove Village company.

The FDA announcement gave the company's address as 261 King St., Elk Grove Village. The building at that address is now occupied by Food Specialists Inc.

A spokesman for Food Specialists said the firm is not involved in making pizzas and has been at the King Street address for over a year.

An old phone number listed for Criston at 261 King st. is disconnected and no new number is listed for the company.

A spokesman for the FDA said Mainline Food Service, a Roselle firm, Mainline did not answer any phone calls yesterday.

Village wants to annex motel site

Palatine officials are looking for a way to annex the site of a proposed 175-room Ramada Inn next to Uncle Andy's Cow Palace, just northwest of Palatine.

John Bakos, owner of the Cow Palace and the Ramada Inn franchise, met with the Palatine Class Commission on Tuesday to explore the possibility of annexation.

The seven-acre parcel where the proposed Ramada Inn will be constructed is located at the northeast corner of Northwest Highway and Quentin Road in Palatine Township. The property is not contiguous to the village boundaries at the time, making annexation impossible.

A preannexation agreement between the owners of the Ramada Inn and the village is now being explored. Under the terms of the preannexation agreement the village would provide water for the property in return for an agreement from the owners to annex the parcel to the village when it becomes contiguous or to call for an annexation election within a specified time period. The village now has a similar preannexation agreement with L. F. Draper and Associates, owner of the Countryside apartment development in Palatine Township.

BOTH PALATINE officials and Bakos would like to have the proposed Ramada Inn annexed to the village. Palatine officials are looking to expand the village's boundaries and thereby increase tax benefits.

Bakos said he would like to have the property annexed to the village because of the obvious advantages of village utilities and police protection and because he would like to see the Ramada Inn become an integral part of Palatine.

No decision on a preannexation agreement was reached Tuesday. The matter will be explored in more depth at a plan commission meeting tentatively scheduled for Nov. 20. Bakos has been requested to have aerial photographs and more specifics on the development available at that time.

A REQUEST to rezone five of the seven acres from residential to business, to permit the construction of the Ramada Inn, will go before the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals in early December, according to Bakos.

Bakos said he is hopeful construction of the Ramada Inn can start in the spring. Construction is expected to take six to eight months.

The Cow Palace restaurant with its landmark fiberglass cow will remain at the intersection until the Ramada Inn, with its restaurant, banquet facilities and meeting rooms is completed, said Bakos.

The proposed Ramada Inn will be a four- or five-story structure fronting on Northwest Highway with access on Quentin Road. Bakos said preliminary plans are for the Ramada Inn to only occupy 25 per cent of the total seven acres.

BAKOS WAS originally negotiating with Holiday Inns, Inc. for a franchise, but when he was unable to obtain the franchise he contacted Ramada Inn.

Residents in the Lake Park Estates subdivision, which lies immediately north of the Bakos property, have objected to the construction of a motel because of traffic hazards and lack of sanitary facilities. The effects of the proposed Ramada Inn on the unincorporated subdivision will be discussed by the plan commission at its Nov. 20 meeting.

Bakos has 10 years' experience in the motel business. Prior to taking over the Cow Palace restaurant five years ago, Bakos was assistant general manager and then general manager of the O'Hare Inn. He has also been associated with the Jupiter motel chain and the Carriage House chain.

Ex-Dem committeeman may challenge Mugalian

by JOANN VAN WYE

Peter J. Gerling is considering making another bid for the Palatine Township Democratic Committeeman post, a post he lost four years ago to Richard A. Mugalian.

Gerling said he has been approached by some of his "close friends in the party" and asked to run for committeeman, but has not reached a definite decision on his candidacy.

"It is going to take a lot of thought. I am obligated to the Democratic party and if these boys insist I might run," said Gerling. "Enough people would have to persuade me I would probably have the best chance of winning the election," he added.

GERLING WAS appointed Palatine Township Democratic Committeeman in 1968 when Oliver Dilks resigned that job he had held for 14 years. Two years later, he lost his bid for election to a four-year term as committeeman to Mugalian by 47 votes. Gerling was endorsed by the Palatine Township Regular Democratic Organization in 1970.

Mugalian's campaign in 1970 revolved around opening the party and taking control of the party out of the hands of a small group of what he called patronage workers.

"Personally I thought things would go differently (under Mugalian's leadership), but it doesn't seem like his ideas are working. The organization is just where it was four years ago," said Gerling.

"It (the committeeman post) is a lot of hard work. The township is three to one Republican and we have a losing fight on our hands but I would like to see the organization grow," said Gerling. He added he felt Mugalian didn't have enough time to devote to the committeeman post because he is also a state representative.

"He (Mugalian) is a liberal, I am not. I am a conservative," said Gerling, adding he has nothing personal against Mugalian. "He believes in volunteers and doesn't believe in patronage. He believes in an independent organization. But you can't even run a factory without a boss," said Gerling.

MUGALIAN, who plans to seek reelection to the committeeman post, expressed surprise yesterday when he learned Gerling was considering running because of the "good relationship" the two have had since the 1970 election.

Mugalian said limitations on his time were a problem and he wished he had more time to devote to the committeeman post. He added he didn't feel the limitations on his time were a hindrance to the Democratic organization because it is set up to be democratically operated by a board of directors rather than having one man run the organization.

"It has been our theory we don't grow by getting jobs for people and then making them volunteers," said Mugalian, adding the party in recent years has depended on volunteers for growth.

GERLING HAS until early December to decide if he will seek the committeeman post in the March 19 primary election. Nominating petitions for the post must be filed with the Cook County Clerk between Dec. 10 and Dec. 17.

Gerling, of 50 S. Roberts Rd., Palatine, holds a job as road equipment supervisor for the Cook County Highway Department. He was unsuccessful in his bid for a four-year term as Palatine Township Highway Commissioner last March.

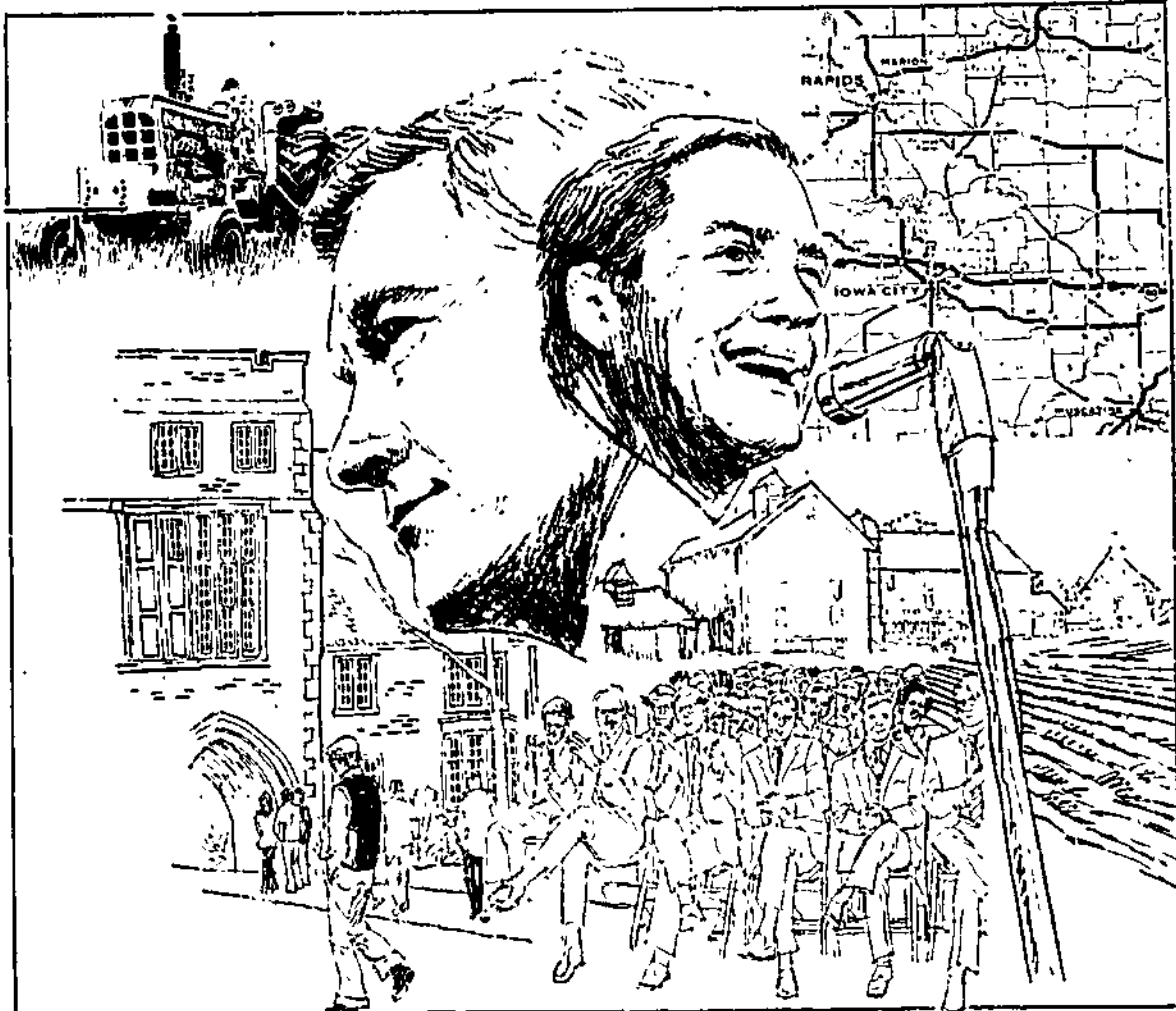

Track-a-thon to aid St. Theresa's School

Students, alumni and parents of St. Theresa's school will run for money for the school's athletic program Saturday.

The first annual track-a-thon will start at 8 a.m., continuing until noon. Participants in the run are seeking sponsors to pledge money for each lap run by a participant, with one lap equaling the distance around a football field.

Proceeds will be used to purchase athletic equipment and rent gymnasium facilities for St. Theresa's school students. The school is located at 445 N. Benton St., Palatine.

More information is available by calling Mrs. N. Josten, 350-6497.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is a story of the mood of the Midwest and the way a presidential candidate is received in these times of scandal and disruption in national politics. It is a story of everyday people and how they feel about the times and how they feel about Charles Percy from Illinois, who is running for President three years before the election in the heartland of America, where presidential elections are won and lost.

by DOUG RAY

IOWA'S INTERSTATE 80 — If there is a middle American, he is a man like Big Larry Noble from Muscatine, Iowa, driver of this black Cadillac limousine cruising past the corn and soybean fields of the Midwest.

"Cool enough for you, Senator?" Big Larry glanced slightly to his right and behind him where the Senator was sitting with two reporters.

"Just perfect," Percy answered.

Big Larry smiled. He looked straight ahead across the steering wheel of the car while the air conditioner pumped recycled air over us. It was Thursday afternoon and it must have been near 80. Outside there was a trace of smog, but there never is in these parts. No Sears Tower or Christmas or tollways or lighted street corners lit up like Chocoma trees.

This is the Midwest, home of the middle American, the silent majority — the home of the people who elect Presidents.

BIG LARRY grabs another Camel from the dashboard, lights it and takes a long, heavy draw. He doesn't say much, especially to strangers and even to get the basic information about the car and why he is driving, you have to wring it out of him.

It seems the car belongs to Larry's father-in-law who is in the sand and gravel business. And the last time one of the family's gas guzzlers hit the political trail — at least for presidential politics — was in 1964. Percy Goldwater was back there right where Chuck Percy now sits glancing through small note cards with his ankles crossed.

"It wasn't very good luck was it," Larry grinned. He has a hard mean look though he is friendly enough. Size him up and you can tell right off he is the kind of guy you don't talk back to unless you tip the scales at about 200 with most of your weight in the shoulders.

"What are the people like around here?" I asked him. "You know, the politics?"

"I'd say conservative Republican, most of them," he said shrugging.

In a few minutes the black limo would arrive at the Iowa campus. Big Larry pushed on, his brown cowboy boots with the pointed toes pressed firmly on the footboard.

The state trooper in the lead car took a quick right onto another route and the caravan of Oldsmobiles and the limo responded in order. We moved up the highway through red traffic lights to keep the head and the tail together.

THIS WILL BE the second stop for the Percy party. We began the day before noon, in Moline, Ill., at the headquarters of John Deere and Co., the firm known for its green farm tractors. The Senator spoke to businessmen, mayors and presented Deere Chairman William Hewitt with an award for a movie the company made. We spent more than an hour there, ending when Percy jumped aboard a John Deere snowmobile for a ride across the massive company properties.

Now we are rolling again, toward Iowa City, in the spirit of a Cadillac whistlestop campaign. In the back seat, Percy is getting the third degree on everything from his friends in Washington to his physical fitness program and a stationary bicycle he uses to keep the pounds off.

Percy asked how much time before arrival. Just a few minutes. He cut off the interview as we approached the city limits. Last minute cramming before the speech. He would be lecturing children of the plains country, boys who had actually milked cows, rosy cheeked farmer's daughters, students from Des Moines, even Chicago and New York; all who somehow found themselves together on the campus of rolling hills and narrow streets with the sweet smell of Indian summer and a river that cuts the campus in two.

We got out of the car. Percy stayed inside, then emerged and walked briskly up the steps of the Iowa Memorial Union. "Hi, I'm Chuck Percy." He shook hands with the desk clerk and went upstairs for a press conference.

DOWN IN THE auditorium the students waited, about 800 of them. All the seats were taken and many kids stood in the back.

"Why are there so many people here today?" I asked a

Rovin' the presidential trails with Chuck Percy

petite red-haired girl who was passing out leaflets at the door. "Is this a convocation?" She looked at me quizzically: her eyebrows sagged. "Do they make these people come for college credit?"

She said no, that this is just the first in a series of guest speakers on campus, that yes there are more kids here than expected.

A senior, one of the campus Young Republicans who says after graduation he plans to work for the party, had a wide smile spread across his face. "I was afraid things wouldn't work out . . . I was a nervous wreck. In '71, McGovern got about 1,500 when he came here. Last year, Tower (Senator John Tower of Texas) got 200 people . . . this is what I call a great turnout," he said.

The kids were anxious. As Percy walked on stage, their attention went with him. He began his talk. It was on the Soviet-U.S. relations and he urged the Soviets to open up to the U.S. of free speech.

There is only one group upset with the Senator's appearance. And that is a limp effort by the Young Americans For Freedom who like Ronald Reagan better as a presidential candidate. They pasted bumper stickers on the walls, but most were torn down later by students leaving the union. There are only 50 YAF members on campus.

PERCY WENT ON. "We merely ask that the USSR live up to its own constitution which guarantees freedom of speech."

I walked outside. Not because the speech was uninteresting but because it is a beautiful day, too nice to stay indoors even to listen to the man who three years from now might have the presidential seal in front of him when he talks.

Sun splashes a shine over the school and students are carrying their jackets under their arms. Parked outside the union are pickup trucks. Across the street dozens of girls are bailing a ball around with paddles. The black limousine in front is as out of place as the tall lean Iowa state trooper standing next to it.

Walking alone, between the athletic field and the union, is a girl dressed in blue jeans and sweater. She carries a tennis racket in one hand and a book entitled "Power Politics" in the other. She is small, bespectacled of the wire-rim variety.

She says her name is Patricia Zimmerman, 18, a freshman from Westchester, Ill., and that she is heading for the auditorium for the Percy speech, but a little behind schedule.

Right away she volunteers that she hates Richard Nixon. Who does she like? Really nobody, she said. Then why is she going to hear Percy? "Because he may capture the '76 nomination" was her answer.

PATRICIA ZIMMERMAN says she is rather typical of college kids today. She is concerned but no activist, functioning in sort of a transition period between what was and something else. An Allende rally a few days ago brought out the usual people you might find at that kind of thing. Even Patricia Zimmerman was there, but she wasn't impressed.

"It seemed like they were using an excuse to protest and it didn't work out," she said.

"So what are students in the heartland of America concerned about right now?"

"I'd say politics and the university," she said quickly. "There is this intramural athletic field and a day-care center that face destruction by a new road, and believe it or not the

67 in one program

Kids' hockey booming here

Learning to ice skate is a feat in itself. But trying to manipulate a hockey stick, skates and an elusive little black puck when you're only seven years old becomes a funny, frustrating experience.

That's why the organizers of the Palatine Amateur Hockey Association say they put so much emphasis on learning and having fun for the youngest skaters.

House leagues for the Mites (boys age 7 and 8) started two weeks ago, and most of the boys' skating time is spent in games that teach hockey fundamentals.

"The emphasis is always on teaching, especially at this age group," said PAHA officer Al Krueger, as he watched one of his own boys wobble and work with the other young team members on the ice.

FOR NOW, 67 youngsters are participating in the Mites division, and association leaders are looking for more beginners to help build the hockey program in the Palatine area. Mites practice twice a week for the next few weeks at the Arlington Ice Spectrum in Palatine. After another five or six practices, the Mites are scheduled for a game-teaching series called controlled scrimmages.

Players will basically work in a hockey game situation during the scrimmages, but coaches will stop the play frequently to explain problems or good points of the play in progress.

"We don't care who wins. With 500 some kids in the program, they're not all going to win, right?" said coach Jerry Dunn, who insists he's a teacher, not a coach. Dunn heads several of the teams for the association, and runs his sessions with a combination of toughness and humor.

Fathers with sons in the program were unanimous in testifying for their sons' enthusiasm for hockey.

"THE FIRST thing they learn is to raise their hockey sticks into the air," commented one father after the boys scored a surprise goal in a brief scrimmage.

"You know, two weeks ago these kids couldn't stand up," said PAHA officer Gene Sullivan as he watched the padded figures move on the ice.

There are still lots of tumbles ahead for the 7- and 8-year-olds. Some still seem to sit down more than they stand up, but they bounce back quickly and eagerly to try again. One thing that helps reduce the fall and the danger of the game is the extensive padding requirements.

Boys are required to wear hockey skates, hockey gloves, shin pads, helmets, elbow pads and mouth guards. With the addition of the optional shoulder pads, the moving blobs are frequently unrecognizable to their own parents if it weren't for the numbered jerseys donned by the skaters.

While few parents dispute the need for the safety equipment, the cost of outfitting a growing boy with all the padding easily becomes prohibitive. Equipment hand-me-downs may be one reason for the high number of young boys in the Mites division who have older brothers in the program. Less than half of the Mites youngsters are the only hockey players in their family.

AN ANNUAL hockey skate and ski exchange sponsored each fall by the park district is one way of cutting the costs of equipping a youngster, according to PAHA executive vice president Bill McElman. Eventually, the organization may try to set up some hand-me-down program, McElman said, to make hockey a less-expensive program for more youngsters. Program registration for the Mites is $30, plus their equipment.

For the boys who have enrolled in the house league's youngest team, the game is not fiercely competitive yet. And that's the way the hockey organizers would like to keep it. Each official emphasizes the importance of keeping the fun in the game.

"After all, why make little gods out of these kids at 7 and 8 when they're still growing?" Krueger said.

Crash fatal to youth, 17

A 17-year-old Arlington Heights youth was killed late Tuesday night when the car he was driving rammed into the rear of a cement truck on Algonquin Road near Goebbert Road.

Two passengers in the car remain hospitalized in fair condition at Northwest Community Hospital. A third passenger was treated at the hospital and released.

Dead is Kirk T. Kenning, 17, of 509 S. Reuter, a junior at Rolling Meadows High School. Police said his car struck the cement truck as it pulled away from a traffic light.

Sue Dominick, 17, and Liane Neubert, 17, both of 736 Dempster St., Mount Prospect were admitted to the hospital with head injuries. They were listed in fair condition Wednesday afternoon.

Michael Robinson, 17, of 2317 Park St., Rolling Meadows, was thrown from the car upon impact. He was not seriously injured.

Driver of the cement truck, Wesley W. Hoegner, 43, of Chicago, told police he was just pulling away from a traffic light when the Kenning auto crashed into his truck. He told police he neither heard nor saw the car before the accident.

Maine S. teacher seeks seat on school board

An unsuccessful candidate in the High School Dist. 211 Board of Education election last April has applied for appointment to a vacancy on the board.

John Heuman, a teacher at Maine South High School in Park Ridge, came in fourth with 638 votes in last spring's election for two board members.

He was endorsed by the political action arm of the Dist. 211 Education Association, the district's teacher-bargaining group.

Heuman is the third candidate to file for the vacancy created when board member Paul Hughes resigned because of poor health last week. Shirley Munson, former Palatine village trustee, and

John Heuman

Dianne Marks, former member of the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education, have also applied.

HEUMAN, HIS wife Rachel and children live at 1170 Heather Ln., Hoffman Estates. Heuman is a member of the National and Illinois Education Associations and the National and Illinois Councils of Social Studies Teachers.

"I think I can contribute something to the school district from my knowledge as an educator," Heuman said yesterday. He said he can bring the board "an appreciation of what goes on in the classroom." The board handles building problems and finance, he said, but his expertise would be in handling educational problems.

Heuman also said he did not want to be directly involved in teacher contract negotiations "because I am a teacher." However, board members and teachers should appreciate each other's viewpoint he said, and "I think I can bring some reason to both sides."

Candidates may apply for the vacancy by filing a biographical form between now and Nov. 7 at the Dist. 211 administration center. Board members will interview candidates Nov. 10 and make the appointment at the next board meeting Nov. 15. The new member will serve on the board until school board elections next April.

WELL-PADDED MITES take to the ice twice a week as they work in teams to learn the fundamentals of hockey — once they learn to skate, that is. Six-year-old Kenny Sheppard is one of the 67 beginners in the Mite division of the Palatine Amateur Hockey Association. Boys through age 18 participate in the four-year-old hockey program, which includes both house and traveling teams.

Baptist Church addition planned

Construction of a $425,000 addition to the Meadows Baptist Church is planned to begin Dec. 1, according to Perry Bigelow, chairman of the building committee.

The addition is being constructed because the church is outgrowing the existing facilities, Bigelow said. The church has been renting rooms from Carl Sandburg Junior High School for Sunday School classes and other rooms within the existing building are overcrowded, said spokesmen for the church.

The planned addition will be three stories and contain a gymnasium plus 12 classrooms for the Sunday School classes. There may be nursery facilities and a lounge area, including ping pong and billiard tables.

Bigelow said plans for the addition have not been completed. He did say that the gymnasium will contain basketball and volleyball areas. Other equipment will be bought if the gym is used often, he added.

Pizza firm vanishes

Criston Food Service, a firm named in a recall of pizzas by the Food and Drug Administration, is apparently no longer an Elk Grove Village company.

The FDA announcement gave the company's address as 261 King St., Elk Grove Village. The building at that address is now occupied by Food Specialists Inc.

A spokesman for Food Specialists said the firm is not involved in making pizzas and has been at the King Street address for over a year.

An old phone number listed for Criston at 261 King St. is disconnected and no new number is listed for the company.

A spokesman for the FDA said Criston was associated with Mainline Food Service, a Roselle firm. Mainline did not answer any phone calls yesterday.

False solicitors reported in area

Unauthorized solicitors have been reported in the Palatine area, asking for contributions for a police association and bearing a letter of support with the forged signature of Acting Palatine Police Chief Frank Ortiz.

Ortiz said yesterday that he had no knowledge of the organization, and that the letter supposedly signed by him is a fake. At least two Palatine businesses have been contacted by the solicitors.

Goblins vs. the village task force

by JOE SWICKARD
Halloween morning came properly overcast and drizzling. Beggar's Night had passed, and all the outhouses in Arlington Heights remained upright.

The era of mischievous scamps pulling pranks and committing good-natured assaults on the neighborhood is gone. A goblin tossed into a tree might be construed as criminal damage to private property. And does soaping a window equal malicious mischief? Tip over an outhouse and the Environmental Control Commission would probably have the kids playing rock hockey at Stateville.

Arlington Heights was prepared for the worst Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Besides the regular police patrols, the village Civil Defense workers and the auxiliary police were on the prowl for local poltergeists. They called it The Goblin Patrol.

Village Community Relations Officer George Weinand said of the patrol, "It's serving two purposes. The first is a visual deterrent to vandalism. And you know how bad it's gotten this year. The second is to test the Civil Defense and auxiliary police communications network. If a real emergency came up, we'd like to know that it's working all right."

The GOBLIN PATROL met at 1800 hours (6 p.m.) in the police classroom at the village hall. Police Capt. Maurice English quickly called the roll and got right down to business.

Pointing to a village map, he outlined the six sectors of patrol. Schools and parks were keynoted as likely hot spots. Radio designations and call numbers were assigned. Malevolent spirits never stood a chance.

Capt. English gave final instructions to the men of the Goblin Patrol. "Remember, stay in your cars, don't chase anybody and don't get hurt. If you see trouble call for a regular (police patrol). Use your common sense. You don't need a back-up for some kids throwing toilet paper around a house."

JERRY DHONT, village zoning inspector by day, explained the role of the auxiliary police.

"We're all volunteers trying to help the police. We go through training about the law, weapons and self defense. The gung-ho guy that gets a charge out of carrying a badge and gun is not the one we're looking for. We're people who want to aid the police," Dhont said.

The auxiliary police help direct traffic on special occasions and ride as the second man in the squad car one weekend a month. "We're there to back him up. We follow the orders of the man in blue," he said.

The Civil Defense workers stand ready to aid the village in times of disaster, such as a tornado, or an airliner crash.

DHONT AND WEINAND plus an observer rolled out of the municipal parking lot in the CD jeep. Two radios, police patrol and the goblin watchers, chattered in the drafty cab.

Their sector was the village south of Central Road. Potential hot spots were a high school, two elementary schools and two parks.

The night was quiet — surprisingly so. Only two trick-or-treaters were seen by this part of the patrol during the entire four hours. An open garage door at Forest View High School was closed and locked by Dhont.

$5,561 contributed so far

Community Chest Drive more than 50% toward goal

With the Community Chest Drive in Rolling Meadows about four weeks old, more than half the $9,020 goal has been collected.

Figures compiled show the campaign has netted $5,561 so far in contributions from residents, business, and industry. "The contributions are picking up," campaign treasurer Frank Catini said Tuesday. Catini said he was optimistic the campaign would reach its goal, but added that should not discourage persons from contributing.

The campaign is attempting to reach the $9,020 goal within a month to six weeks of its early October starting. October has been declared Community Chest Month in the city by Mayor Roland Meyer, but campaign officials have said the campaign will probably continue into November.

Last year $8,200 was collected.

MOST OF THE solicitation has been through the mail, with two mailings having been sent to residents and businesses in the city.

Campaign officials have aimed at getting a $12 contribution from each family and organization in the city to reach the goal and so have set the theme of the campaign as "A Dollar A Month."

The city's effort is held in conjunction with the Chicago Metropolitan Crusade of Mercy.

Local contributions are distributed among the Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Clearbrook Center for the retarded, the Northwest Mental Health Association, the USO, the Salvation Army, and the Family Services branch of the Salvation Army.

Additional funds are distributed to the local campaign by the Chicago Crusade, since large industries and businesses in the city contribute to the Metropolitan campaign rather than the local campaign.

Contributions may be sent to the Rolling Meadows Community Chest, P. O. Box 8500, Rolling Meadows, 60008.

Ex-Dem committeeman may run again

by JOANN VAN WYE

Peter J. Gerling is considering making another bid for the Palatine Township Democratic Committeeman post, a post he lost four years ago to Richard A. Mugallian.

Gerling said he has been approached by some of his "close friends in the party" and asked to run for committeeman, but has not reached a definite decision on his candidacy.

"It is going to take a lot of thought. I am obligated to the Democratic party, and if these boys insist I might run," said Gerling. "Enough people would have to persuade me I would probably have the best chance of winning the election," he added.

GERLING WAS appointed Palatine Township Democratic Committeeman in 1969 when Oliver Dilks resigned that job he had held for 14 years. Two years later, he lost his bid for election to a four-year term as committeeman to Mugallian by 47 votes. Gerling was endorsed by the Palatine Township Regular Democratic Organization in 1970.

Mugallian's campaign in 1970 revolved around opening the party and taking control of the party out of the hands of a small group of what he called patronage workers.

"Personally I thought things would go differently (under Mugallian's leadership), but it doesn't seem like his ideas are working. The organization is just where it was four years ago," said Gerling.

"It (the committeeman post) is a lot of hard work. The township is three to one Republican and we have a losing fight on our hands but I would like to see the organization grow," said Gerling. He added he felt Mugallian didn't have enough time to devote to the committeeman post because he is also a state representative.

"He (Mugallian) is a liberal, I am not. I am a conservative," said Gerling, adding he has nothing personal against Mugallian. "He believes in volunteers and doesn't believe in patronage. He believes in an independent organization. But you can't even run a factory without a boss," said Gerling.

MUGALLIAN, who plans to seek reelection to the committeeman post, expressed surprise yesterday when he learned Gerling was considering running because of the "good relationship" the two have had since the 1970 election.

Mugallian said limitations on his time were a problem and he wished he had more time to devote to the committeeman post. He added he didn't feel the limitations on his time were a hindrance to the Democratic organization because it is set up to be democratically operated by a board of directors rather than having one man run the organization.

"It has been our theory we don't grow by getting jobs for people and then making them volunteers," said Mugallian, adding the party in recent years has depended on volunteers for growth.

GERLING HAS until early December to decide if he will seek the committeeman post in the March 19 primary election. Nominating petitions for the post must be filed with the Cook County Clerk between Dec. 10 and Dec. 17.

Gerling, of 50 S. Roberts Rd., Palatine, holds a job as road equipment supervisor for the Cook County Highway Department. He was unsuccessful in his bid for a four-year term as Palatine Township Highway Commissioner last March.

Crash fatal to youth, 17

A 17-year-old Arlington Heights youth was killed late Tuesday night when the car he was driving rammed into the rear of a cement truck on Algonquin Road near Goebbert Road.

Two passengers in the car remain hospitalized in fair condition at Northwest Community Hospital. A third passenger was treated at the hospital and released.

Dead is Kirk T. Kenning, 17, of 509 S. Reuter, a junior at Rolling Meadows High School. Police said his car struck the cement truck as it pulled away from a traffic light.

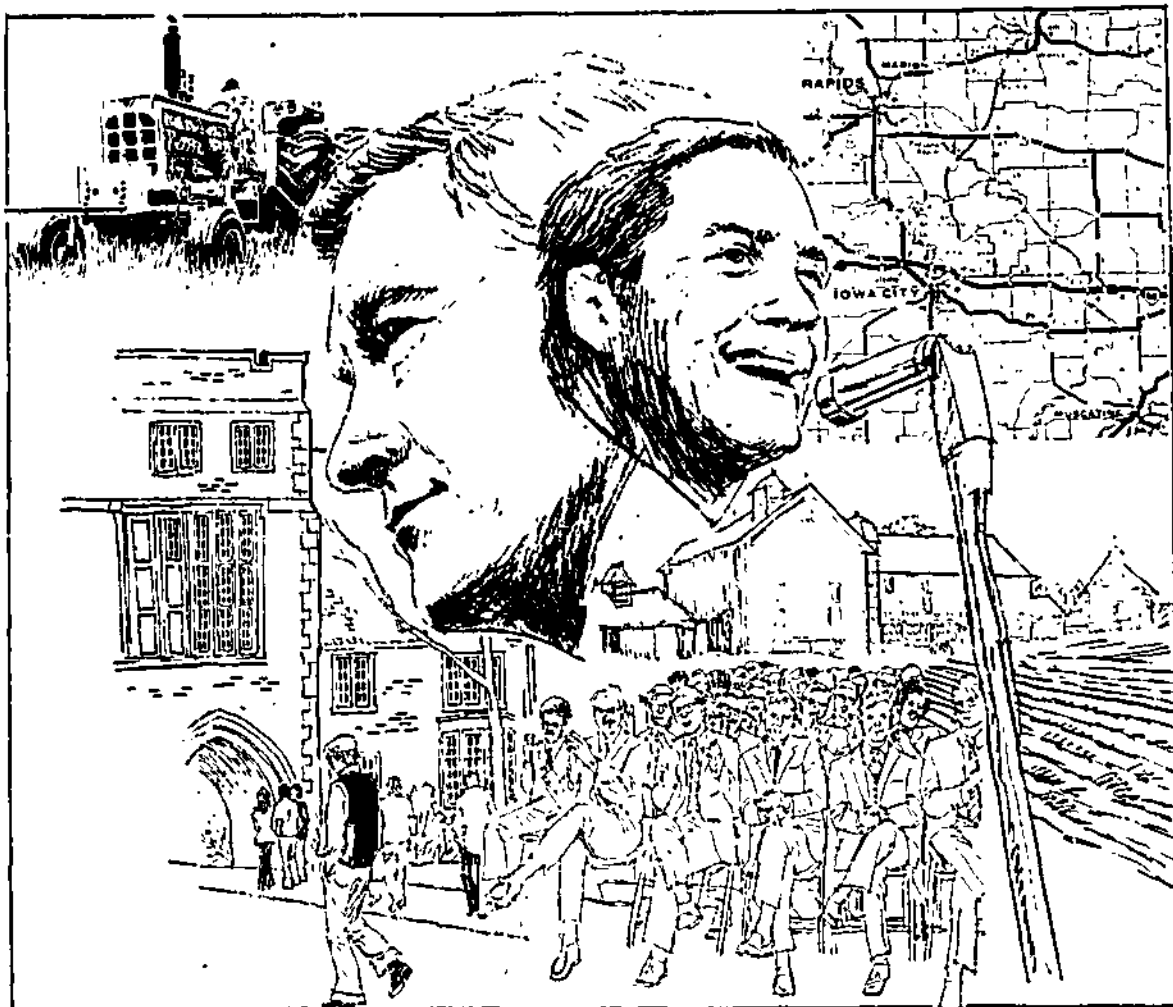

Sue Dominick, 17, and Liane Neubert, 17, both of 738 Dempster St., Mount Prospect, were admitted to the hospital with head injuries. They were listed in fair condition Wednesday afternoon.

Michael Robinson, 17, of 2317 Park St., Rolling Meadows, was thrown from the car upon impact. He was not seriously injured.

Driver of the cement truck, Wesley W. Hoegner, 43, of Chicago, told police he was just pulling away from a traffic light when the Kenning auto crashed into his truck. He told police he neither heard nor saw the car before the accident.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is a story of the mood of the Midwest and the way a presidential candidate is received in these times of scandal and disruption in national politics. It is a story of everyday people and how they feel about the times and how they feel about Charles Percy from Illinois, who is running for President three years before the election in the heartland of America, where presidential elections are won and lost.

by DOUG RAY

IOWA'S INTERSTATE 80 — If there is a middle American, he is a man like Big Larry Noble from Muscatine, Iowa, driver of this black Cadillac limousine cruising past the corn and soybean fields of the Midwest.

"Cool enough for you, Senator?" Big Larry glanced slightly to his right and behind him where the Senator was sitting with two reporters.

"Just perfect," Percy answered.

Big Larry smiled. He looked straight ahead across the steering wheel of the car while the air conditioner pumped recycled air over us. It was Thursday afternoon and it must have been near 80. Outside there was a trace of smog, but there never is in these parts. No Sears Tower or Hancock tollways or brightened street corners lit up like Christmas trees.

This is the Midwest, home of the middle American, the silent majority — the home of the people who elect Presidents.

BIG LARRY grabs another Camel from the dashboard, lights it and takes a long, heavy draw. He doesn't say much, especially to strangers and even to get the basic information about the car and why he is driving, you have to wring it out of him.

It seems the car belongs to Larry's father-in-law who is in the sand and gravel business. And the last time one of the family's gas guzzlers hit the political trail — at least for presidential politics — was in 1964. Barry Goldwater was back there right where Chuck Percy now sits glancing through small note cards with his ankles crossed.

"It wasn't very good luck was it," Larry grinned. He has a hard mean look though he is friendly enough. Size him up and you can tell right off he is the kind of guy you don't talk back to unless you tip the scales at about 200 with most of your weight in the shoulders.

"What are the people like around here?" I asked him. "You know, the politics?"

"I'd say conservative Republican, most of them," he said shrugging.

In a few minutes the black limo would arrive at the Iowa campus. Big Larry pushed on, his brown cowboy boots with the pointed toes pressed firmly on the footbed.

The state trooper in the lead car took a quick right onto another route and the caravan of Oldsmobiles and the limo responded in order. We moved up the highway through red traffic lights to keep the head and the tail together.

THIS WILL BE the second stop for the Percy party. We began the day before noon, in Moline, Ill., at the headquarters of John Deere and Co., the firm known for its green farm tractors. The Senator spoke to businessmen, mayors and presented Deere Chairman William Hewitt with an award for a movie the company made. We spent more than an hour there, ending when Percy jumped aboard a John Deere snowmobile for a ride across the massive company properties.

Now we are rolling again, toward Iowa City, in the spirit of a Cadillac whistletop campaign. In the back seat, Percy is getting the third degree on everything from his friends in Washington to his physical fitness program and a stationary bicycle he uses to keep the pounds off.

Percy asked how much time before arrival. Just a few minutes. He cut off the interview as we approached the city limits. Last minute cramming before the speech. He would be lecturing children of the plains country, boys who had actually milked cows, rosy cheeked farmer's daughters, students from Des Moines, even Chicago and New York; all who somehow found themselves together on the campus of rolling hills and narrow streets with the sweet smell of Indian summer and a river that cuts the campus in two.

We got out of the car. Percy stayed inside, then emerged and walked briskly up the steps of the Iowa Memorial Union. "Hi, I'm Chuck Percy." He shook hands with the desk clerk and went upstairs for a press conference.

DOWN IN THE auditorium the students waited, about 800 of them. All the seats were taken and many kids stood in the back.

"Why are there so many people here today?" I asked a

Rovin' the presidential trails with Chuck Percy

petite red-haired girl who was passing out leaflets at the door. "Is this a convocation?" She looked at me quizzically; her eyebrows sagged. "Do they make these people come for college credit?"

She said no, that this is just the first in a series of guest speakers on campus, that yes there are more kids here than expected.

A senior, one of the campus Young Republicans who says after graduation he plans to work for the party, had a wide smile spread across his face. "I was afraid things wouldn't work out. . . . I was a nervous wreck. In '71, McGovern got about 1,500 when he came here. Last year, Tower (Senator John Tower of Texas) got 200 people. . . . this is what I call a great turnout," he said.

The kids were anxious. As Percy walked on stage, their attention went with him. He began his talk. It was on the Soviet-U.S. relations and he urged the Soviets to open up to the concept of free speech.

There is only one group upset with the Senator's appearance. And that is a limp effort by the Young Americans for Freedom who like Ronald Reagan better as a presidential candidate. They pasted bumper stickers on the walls, but were torn down later by students leaving the union. There are only 50 YAF members on campus.

PERCY WENT ON. "We merely ask that the USSR live up to its own constitution which guarantees freedom of speech."

I walked outside. Not because the speech was uninteresting but because it is a beautiful day, too nice to stay indoors even to listen to the man who three years from now might have the presidential seal in front of him when he talks.

Sun splashes a shine over the school and students are carrying their jackets under their arms. Parked outside the union are pickup trucks. Across the street dozens of girls are batting a ball around with paddles. The black limousine in front is as out of place as the tall lean Iowa state trooper standing next to it.

Walking alone, between the athletic field and the union, is a girl dressed in blue jeans and sweater. She carries a tennis racket in one hand and a book entitled "Power Politics" in the other. She is small, bespectacled of the wire-rim variety.

She says her name is Patricia Zimmerman, 18, a freshman from Westchester, Ill., and that she is heading for the auditorium for the Percy speech, but a little behind schedule.

Right away she volunteers that she hates Richard Nixon. Who does she like? Really nobody, she said. Then why is she going to hear Percy? "Because he may capture the '76 nomination" was her answer.

PATRICIA ZIMMERMAN says she is rather typical of college kids today. She is concerned but not activist, functioning in sort of a transition period between what was and something else. An Allende rally a few days ago brought out the usual people you might find at that kind of thing. Even Patricia Zimmerman was there, but she wasn't impressed.

"It seemed like they were using an excuse to protest and it didn't work out," she said.

"So what are students in the heartland of America concerned about right now?"

"I'd say politics and the university," she said quickly. There is this intramural athletic field and a day-care center that face destruction by a new road, and believe it or not the

Goblins vs. the village task force

by JOE SWICKARD

Halloween morning came properly overcast and drizzling. Beggar's Night had passed, and all the outhouses in Arlington Heights remained upright.

The era of mischievous scamps pulling pranks and committing good-natured assaults on the neighborhood is gone. A gate tossed into a tree might be construed as criminal damage to private property. And does soaping a window equal malicious mischief? Tip over an outhouse and the Environmental Control Commission would probably have the kids playing rock hockey at Stateville.

Arlington Heights was prepared for the worst Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Besides the regular police patrols, the village Civil Defense workers and the auxiliary police were on the prowl for local poltergeists. They called it The Goblin Patrol.

Village Community Relations Officer George Weinand said of the patrol, "It's serving two purposes. The first is a visual deterrent to vandalism. And you know how bad it's gotten this year. The second is to test the Civil Defense and auxiliary police communications network. If a real emergency came up, we'd like to know that it's working all right."

THE GOBLIN PATROL met at 1800 hours (6 p.m.) in the police classroom at the village hall. Police Capt. Maurice English quickly called the roll and got right down to business.

Pointing to a village map, he outlined the six sectors of patrol. Schools and parks were keynoted as likely hot spots. Radio designations and call numbers were assigned. Malevolent spirits never stood a chance.

Capt. English gave final instructions to the men of the Goblin Patrol. "Remember, stay in your cars, don't chase anybody and don't get hurt. If you see trouble call for a regular (police patrol). Use your common sense. You don't need a back-up for some kids throwing toilet paper around a house."

JERRY DHONT, village zoning inspector by day, explained the role of the auxiliary police.

"We're all volunteers trying to help the police. We go through training about the law, weapons and self defense. The gung-ho guy that gets a charge out of carrying a badge and gun is not the one we're looking for. We're people who want to aid the police," Dhont said.

The auxiliary police help direct traffic on special occasions and ride as the second man in the squad car one weekend a month. "We're there to back him up. We follow the orders of the man in blue," he said.

The Civil Defense workers stand ready to aid the village in times of disaster, such as a tornado, or an airliner crash.

DHONT AND WEINAND plus an observer rolled out of the municipal parking lot in the CD jeep. Two radios, police patrol and the goblin watchers, chattered in the drafty cab.

Their sector was the village south of Central Road. Potential hot spots were a high school, two elementary schools and two parks.

The night was quiet — surprisingly so. Only two trick-or-treaters were seen by this part of the patrol during the entire four hours. An open garage door at Forest View High School was closed and locked by Dhont.

Garbagemen's union OKs new three-year contract

Northwest suburban garbagemen yesterday ratified a contract with area scavenger companies that could boost their wages by more than 50 per cent in three years.

Members of Locals 703 and 731 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, voting by mail, accepted the new three-year contract by about a 2 to 1 margin, according to Frank Grady, a union official.

The effect of the new contract on homeowners who subscribe to garbage pickup is uncertain.

Grady said he is "very much" satisfied with the contract. "I don't think we could have got a better one," he said.

AL HOEKSTRA, executive director of the Chicago and Suburban Refuse Disposal Association, which represents Chicago area scavenger services, was unavailable for comment.

The contract was the second agreed upon by union and refuse association bargainers, with the aid of a federal mediator.

The earlier contract offer had been turned down by the garbagemen in a voice vote at a meeting Oct. 15.

That offer provided for a salary increase of 75 cents an hour the first year of the contract, then 50 cents an hour each of the next two years. The present salary is $5.05 an hour.

The contract offer that was accepted by the garbagemen contains the same wage schedule, but in addition, has a built-in cost-of-living increase each year.

BASED ON THE 5 to 6 per cent cost-of-living increase each of the last few years, the $5.05 hourly wage could jump to $7.70 within three years.

The contract is retroactive to Oct. 1. When the previous contract expired that day, some 75 garbagemen from Browning-Ferris Industries of Illinois Inc., Barrington, staged a one-day wildcat walk-out, leaving six Northwest suburbs without scavenger service.

David Paige, general manager of Browning-Ferris, yesterday refused to comment on the new contract settlement or its effect on scavenger rates.

Driving tips for winter safety

A list of safe winter driving tips, based on test findings and recommendations of the National Safety Council's Committee on Winter Driving Hazards, has been released by the Rolling Meadows Police Department.

The list recommends a proper engine tune-up performed by a reputable service station mechanic, and a complete inspection of engine parts and belts for winter driving. The department also recommends the use of snow tires or studded tires for traction on ice and snow.

Studded tires may be used starting Nov. 15 through April 1.

Reinforced tire chains should also be carried in car trunks for emergency traction use, police recommend.

Heater-defroster systems should also be checked to insure proper operation and safe driver visibility in winter. Windshield wiper blades should also be inspected and replaced if they are brittle and streaking.

Village wants to annex motel site

Palatine officials are looking for a way to annex the site of a proposed 175-room Ramada Inn next to Uncle Andy's Cow Palace, just northwest of Palatine.

John Bakos, owner of the Cow Palace and the Ramada Inn franchise, met with the Palatine Class Commission on Tuesday to explore the possibility of annexation.

The seven-acre parcel where the proposed Ramada Inn will be constructed is located at the northeast corner of Northwest Highway and Quentin Road in Palatine Township. The property is not contiguous to the village boundaries at the time, making annexation impossible.

A preannexation agreement between the owners of the Ramada Inn and the village is now being explored. Under the terms of the preannexation agreement the village would provide water for the property in return for an agreement from the owners to annex the parcel to the village when it becomes contiguous or to call for an annexation election within a specified time period. The village now has a similar preannexation agreement with L. F. Draper and Associates, owner of the Countryside apartment development in Palatine Township.

BOTH PALATINE officials and Bakos would like to have the proposed Ramada Inn annexed to the village. Palatine officials are looking to expand the village's boundaries and thereby increase tax benefits.

Bakos said he would like to have the property annexed to the village because of the obvious advantages of village utilities and police protection and because he would like to see the Ramada Inn become an integral part of Palatine.

No decision on a preannexation agreement was reached Tuesday. The matter will be explored in more depth at a plan commission meeting tentatively scheduled for Nov. 20. Bakos has been requested to have aerial photographs and more specifics on the development available at that time.

A REQUEST to rezone five of the seven acres from residential to business, to permit the construction of the Ramada Inn, will go before the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals in early December, according to Bakos.

Bakos said he is hopeful construction of the Ramada Inn can start in the spring. Construction is expected to take six to eight months.

The Cow Palace restaurant with its landmark fiberglass cow will remain at the intersection until the Ramada Inn, with its restaurant, banquet facilities and meeting rooms is completed, said Bakos.

The proposed Ramada Inn will be a four-or five-story structure fronting on Northwest Highway with access on Quentin Road. Bakos said preliminary plans are for the Ramada Inn to only occupy 25 per cent of the total seven acres.

BAKOS WAS originally negotiating with Holiday Inns, Inc. for a franchise, but when he was unable to obtain the franchise he contacted Ramada Inn.

Residents in the Lake Park Estates subdivision, which lies immediately north of the Bakos property, have objected to the construction of a motel because of traffic hazards and lack of sanitary facilities. The effects of the proposed Ramada Inn on the unincorporated subdivision will be discussed by the plan commission at its Nov. 20 meeting.

Bakos has 10 years' experience in the motel business. Prior to taking over the Cow Palace restaurant five years ago, Bakos was assistant general manager and then general manager of the O'Hare Inn. He has also been associated with the Jupiter motel chain and the Carriage House chain.

Junior picked for fire cadet training program here

A junior at Rolling Meadows High School is the first city resident to take part in the new state-approved fire cadet training program.

He is Gregory Lynn, 2101 Quail Ln. Lynn began training this fall with students from Prospect High School at the Mount Prospect Fire Department where the program was started. Rolling Meadows Fire Lt. Roger Mueller said Lynn will train at the Mount Prospect station because not enough students joined the program to start a training unit at the Rolling Meadows Fire Department.

Lynn will go through two years of basic firefighting training and at the same time receive school credit for the program through Dist. 214's special education credit program.

WITH THE SIGNING in August of a bill in Illinois lowering the age limit for firemen from 21 to 18, Lynn will be eligible upon his high school graduation to join a fire department in the state as a trained fireman.

The bill was passed by the state legislature and signed by Gov. Daniel Walker largely through the efforts of the Mount Prospect Fire Department and one of its men, Leonard Kaiser, who originated the program.

Ten cadets from Prospect High School began training in the program last year but without the state law they would not have been eligible to join a fire department until they reached age 21.

Three new businesses join city chamber

Three new businesses have joined the Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce during its annual membership drive, being conducted this week.

The businesses are the Procci Art Gallery, the Dutchess Beauty Salon, and the T and F Fluorocarbon Co. The new members bring the chamber's membership to some 95 businesses. Earlier this week, the Carboly Systems Division of General Electric joined the chamber.

Chamber Dir. Harry O'Brien said the organization's membership includes about 40 per cent of all businesses and industries in the city. He said this year's membership drive is aiming at adding another 40 businesses from the city's commercial sector to its ranks.

The membership campaign this year is being directed by Stan Herman of the Jeans and Jeans store and James Stoltz of Paddock Publications.

Sponsor of the bill in the General Assembly was State Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect.

ROLLING MEADOWS IS the second municipality to take part in the program, but other towns have expressed interest in joining.

"We're prepping these guys," Mueller said of the cadets. "They will have two years of basic training (when they complete the program) and that will be a big burden off the fire departments they join."

Mueller added efforts are starting by Kaiser and local fire departments to have the program expanded nationwide. With national participation, Mueller said a cadet could be trained in the program and then could join any fire department in the country as a trained firefighter.

Maine South man seeks school post

An unsuccessful candidate in the High School Dist. 211 Board of Education election last April has applied for appointment to a vacancy on the board.

John Heuman, a teacher at Maine South High School in Park Ridge, came in fourth with 658 votes in last spring's election for two board members.

He was endorsed by the political action arm of the Dist. 211 Education Association, the district's teacher-bargaining group.

Heuman is the third candidate to file for the vacancy created when board member Paul Hughes resigned because of poor health last week. Shirley Munson, former Palatine village trustee, and Dianne Marks, former member of the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education, have also applied.

HEUMAN, HIS wife Rachel and children live at 170 Heather Ln., Hoffman Estates. Heuman is a member of the National and Illinois Education Associations and the National and Illinois Councils of Social Studies Teachers.

Candidates may apply for the vacancy by filing a biographical form between now and Nov. 7 at the Dist. 211 administration center. Board members will interview candidates Nov. 10 and make the appointment at the next board meeting Nov. 15. The new member will serve on the board until school board elections next April.

Ex-Hoffman Estates officials

Attorneys silent on plea bargaining in bribery case

by NANCY COWGER

A U. S. attorney declined to comment yesterday on whether plea bargaining has been initiated in the bribery charges against six former Hoffman Estates officials and a development firm.

"It would be inappropriate for me to make any comment at this time," said Tyrone C. Fahner, assistant U. S. attorney. The question arose after one defense attorney and an employee in Fahner's office both advised reporters to attend the Nov. 9 arraignment of defendants, noting it will be "interesting."

The former officials were indicted Friday each on 11 counts of bribery, one of conspiracy and varying income tax charges.

Charged were former mayors Edward Pinger and Roy L. Jenkins; former trustees Howard Noble, James Sloan, Gerard Meyer and Herbert Gibson; developer Kaufman and Broad Inc., and Kaufman and Broad's attorney, Bernard Peskin.

ATTORNEYS FOR some of the defendants, contacted this week, declined to reveal how their clients will plead in the arraignment.

However, Sloan's attorney, George Collins, said yesterday he will seek a change in the arraignment date for his client, and also ask the court to try his client separately from the other defendants.

Collins is scheduled to appear in another court Nov. 9 on a different case, and will not be able to accompany Sloan that morning, he said. If he is unable to obtain a change in the arraignment date, an associate in his firm will appear with Sloan, Collins said.

COLLINS SAID he expects attorneys for the other defendants also will seek separate trials, under motions for relief from prejudicial joinder. Such motions are "almost invariably denied," he noted.

Collins' client still lives within the jurisdictional boundaries of the federal court that will try the cases, the Federal District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. Sloan lives in Rolling Meadows.

But Jenkins now lives in California and Pinger is in Washington. Collins explained the procedure for bringing defendants to court from out-of-state. In cases such as this one, he said, the defendant generally surrenders himself, posts bond and is permitted to leave the area and return as required for court proceedings. In other instances, the defendants are escorted to the presiding court by federal marshals, he said.

Fahner's office said each defendant in the Hoffman Estates case has surrendered himself voluntarily, and has been released on $4,500 bond to reappear on his own volition.

Mother charged in beating of daughter, 3

A 3-year-old Hoffman Estates girl suffered a skull fracture and severe cuts yesterday morning, allegedly inflicted by her mother.

Amy Erickson was in fair condition at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, last night.

Mrs. Ellen Erickson, 32, of 2100 Haswell Rd., was being held yesterday by Cook County authorities for psychiatric examination after she was charged by Hoffman Estates police with aggravated battery and child neglect. The child also had razor cuts on both forearms.

After the incident Mrs. Erickson called Jerry Lipsch, a Hoffman Estates Youth Outreach worker who has been counselling her.

Lipsch then called the Hoffman Estates Fire District, which notified police.

The incident reportedly occurred after a domestic dispute. Mrs. Erickson's husband, William, was not at home when it occurred. Another child, David, 7, was in school, police said.

Mrs. Erickson is to appear in Circuit Court Dec. 7. Bond was set at $50,000.

Manslaughter case continued to January

The involuntary manslaughter case of Robert Lilley, 28, of 1125 Perth Dr., Schaumburg, was continued to Jan. 28 in Cook County Circuit Court yesterday.

Lilley is charged with three counts of involuntary manslaughter after being involved in a traffic accident on the Northwest Tollway in June.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is a story of the mood of the Midwest and the way a presidential candidate is received in these times of scandal and disruption in national politics. It is a story of everyday people and how they feel about the times and how they feel about Charles Percy from Illinois, who is running for President three years before the election in the heartland of America, where presidential elections are won and lost.

by DOUG RAY

IOWA'S INTERSTATE 80 — If there is a middle American, he is a man like Big Larry Noble from Muscatine, Iowa, driver of this black Cadillac limousine cruising past the corn and soybean fields of the Midwest.

"Cool enough for you, Senator?" Big Larry glanced slightly to his right and behind him where the Senator was sitting with two reporters.

"Just perfect," Percy answered.

Big Larry smiled. He looked straight ahead across the steering wheel of the car while the air conditioner pumped recycled air over us. It was Thursday afternoon and it must have been near 80. Outside there was a trace of smog, but there never is in these parts. No Sears Tower or Hancock or tollways or brightened street corners lit up like Christmas trees.

This is the Midwest, home of the middle American, the silent majority — the home of the people who elect Presidents.

BIG LARRY grabs another Camel from the dashboard, lights it and takes a long, heavy draw. He doesn't say much, especially to strangers and even to get the basic information about the car and why he is driving, you have to wring it out of him.

It seems the car belongs to Larry's father-in-law who is in the sand and gravel business. And the last time one of the family's gas guzzlers hit the political trail — at least for presidential politics — was in 1964. Barry Goldwater was back there right where Chuck Percy now sits glancing through small note cards with his ankles crossed.

"It wasn't very good luck was it," Larry grinned. He has a hard mean look though he is friendly enough. Size him up and you can tell right off he is the kind of guy you don't talk back to unless you tip the scales at about 200 with most of your weight in the shoulders.

"What are the people like around here?" I asked him. "You know, the politics?"

"I'd say conservative Republican, most of them," he said shrugging.

In a few minutes the black limo would arrive at the Iowa campus. Big Larry pushed on, his brown cowboy boots with the pointed toes pressed firmly on the footleed.

The state trooper in the lead car took a quick right onto another route and the caravan of Oldsmobiles and the limo responded in order. We moved up the highway through red traffic lights to keep the head and the tail together.

THIS WILL BE the second stop for the Percy party. We began the day before noon, in Moline, Ill., at the headquarters of John Deere and Co., the firm known for its green farm tractors. The Senator spoke to businessmen, mayors and presented Deere Chairman William Hewitt with an award for a movie the company made. We spent more than an hour there, ending when Percy jumped aboard a John Deere snowmobile for a ride across the massive company properties.

Now we are rolling again, toward Iowa City, in the spirit of a Cadillac whistlestop campaign. In the back seat, Percy is getting the third degree on everything from his friends in Washington to his physical fitness program and a stationary bicycle he uses to keep the pounds off.

Percy asked how much time before arrival. Just a few minutes. He cut off the interview as we approached the city limits. Last minute cramming before the speech. He would be lecturing children of the plains country, boys who had actually milked cows, rosy cheeked farmer's daughters, students from Des Moines, even Chicago and New York; all who somehow found themselves together on the campus of rolling hills and narrow streets with the sweet smell of Indian summer and a river that cuts the campus in two.

We got out of the car. Percy stayed inside, then emerged and walked briskly up the steps of the Iowa Memorial Union. "Hi, I'm Chuck Percy." He shook hands with the desk clerk and went upstairs for a press conference.

DOWN IN THE auditorium the students waited, about 800 of them. All the seats were taken and many kids stood in the back.

"Why are there so many people here today?" I asked a

Rovin' the presidential trails with Chuck Percy

petite red-haired girl who was passing out leaflets at the door. "Is this a convocation?" She looked at me quizzically: her eyebrows sagged. "Do they make these people come for college credit?"

She said no, that this is just the first in a series of guest speakers on campus, that yes there are more kids here than expected.

A senior, one of the campus Young Republicans who says after graduation he plans to work for the party, had a wide smile spread across his face. "I was afraid things wouldn't work out . . . I was a nervous wreck. In '71, McGovern got about 1,500 when he came here. Last year, Tower (Senator John Tower of Texas) got 200 people . . . this is what I call a great turnout," he said.

The kids were anxious. As Percy walked on stage, their attention went with him. He began his talk. It was on the Soviet-U.S. relations and he urged the Soviets to open up to the concept of free speech.

There is only one group upset with the Senator's appearance. And that is a limp effort by the Young Americans For Freedom who like Ronald Reagan better as a presidential candidate. They pasted bumper stickers on the walls, but most were torn down later by students leaving the union. There are only 50 YAF members on campus.

PERCY WENT ON. "We merely ask that the USSR live up to its own constitution which guarantees freedom of speech."

I walked outside. Not because the speech was uninteresting but because it is a beautiful day, too nice to stay indoors even to listen to the man who three years from now might have the presidential seal in front of him when he talks.

Sun splashes a shine over the school and students are carrying their jackets under their arms. Parked outside the union are pickup trucks. Across the street dozens of girls are batting a ball around with paddles. The black limousine in front is as out of place as the tall lean Iowa state trooper standing next to it.

Walking alone, between the athletic field and the union, is a girl dressed in blue jeans and sweater. She carries a tennis racket in one hand and a book entitled "Power Politics" in the other. She is small, bespectacled of the wire-rim variety.

She says her name is Patricia Zimmerman, 18, a freshman from Westchester, Ill., and that she is heading for the auditorium for the Percy speech, but a little behind schedule.

Right away she volunteers that she hates Richard Nixon. Who does she like? Really nobody, she said. Then why is she going to hear Percy? "Because he may capture the '76 nomination" was her answer.

PATRICIA ZIMMERMAN says she is rather typical of college kids today. She is concerned but no activist, functioning in sort of a transition period between what was and something else. An Allende rally a few days ago brought out the usual people you might find at that kind of thing. Even Patricia Zimmerman was there, but she wasn't impressed.

"It seemed like they were using an excuse to protest and it didn't work out," she said.

"So what are students in the heartland of America concerned about right now?"

"I'd say politics and the university," she said quickly.

There is this intramural athletic field and a day-care center that face destruction by a new road, and believe it or not the

Fight looms over Palatine GOP committeeman post

by JOANN VAN WYE
A news analysis

The decade-old fight for control of the Republican Party in Palatine Township is taking shape on a new front.

The post of Palatine Township Republican Committeeman appears headed for a showdown in the March 10 primary election between regular Republicans and Republicans advocating changes within the party.

Fred H. Zajonc, a Palatine village trustee, has announced his plans to seek the Republican committeeman post and Bernard E. Pedersen, current Republican committeeman, is expected to seek reelection.

Pedersen said yesterday he was not ready to make any announcement on his candidacy but several high ranking Palatine Township Republicans indicated Pedersen has approached them for endorsement.

MANY SEE the Republican committeeman post election shaping up as a campaign battle between the same forces of the Republican Party which were at odds in the 1963 Palatine Township election and 1967, 1971 and 1973 Palatine village elections.

The regular Republicans have an almost unbroken record in these elections but there is speculation Zajonc might be the one man who could break through the ranks of the regular Republicans.

Zajonc has established himself as a cooperative but independent member of the Republican-dominated village board. In his last bid for office, Zajonc left the Republican Party to run as a Village Independent Party candidate and was the largest vote getter.

Zajonc said he arrived at the decision to run for the committeeman post independently without pressure from any group, but will welcome the support and help of any Republican.

"My primary concern is to bring about reform within the party, not winning the election. I plan to raise lots of questions," said Zajonc, adding he hasn't mapped out any campaign strategy yet.

SOME FEEL the Republican vote may be divided in Palatine because of Zajonc's strong following locally and that Rolling Meadows may be a major key to the election.

Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer said he has not been approached by Zajonc for endorsement in the election, "but would sit down and talk to anyone who is running."

Meyer said if he decided to support anyone he would go out and actively campaign for them, adding he did receive Zajonc's endorsement in his bid for state representative.

It is no secret there is no love between Pedersen and Meyer. The GOP in Palatine Township did not support Meyer when he ran for state representative last year and Meyer in turn supported Jack Scollay, a Democrat, in the Palatine Township race last year.

"The only thing that I know that Bernie Pedersen has done is feather his own nest," said Meyer. "I was disgusted that he didn't even try to state anyone from Palatine Township in the state elections (last year)."

"I think it's a lack of leadership (on Pedersen's part) and I think it's time for a change up there," added Meyer.

POLITICAL OBSERVERS say Meyer is definitely a good man to have on your side in an election and feel his political clout in Rolling Meadows may be strong enough to throw the election one way or another.

Liston F. Pennington, the Republican Township auditor from Rolling Meadows, has a different evaluation of Meyer's political strength in the city. While admitting the precinct captains in Rolling Meadows aren't always geared up, he says they always come through when they are needed.

Pennington described Zajonc as a "Johnny Come Lately" who is "a fine fellow but vastly unknown in Palatine Township."

"Pedersen has done a heck of a good job. I don't always agree with him but in the overall picture I feel he would be a very good one to continue in the office," said Pennington, adding Pedersen has his backing 100 per cent at this point.

Howard I. Olsen, township supervisor; Wendell E. Jones, Palatine village president; and Richard W. Fonte, Palatine village trustee, have also indicated their endorsement of Pedersen if he seeks election again.

PEDERSEN, who as committeeman is responsible for organizing and getting out the Republican vote in Palatine Township, has an excellent record since he assumed the post in 1969. The only election the Republicans have lost in Palatine Township since 1969 is the Palatine village election in 1971 where the VIPs headed by Zajonc, swept two of three seats.

Jones expressed surprise at learning of Zajonc's candidacy and said he couldn't understand it because it's a "thankless job" and Zajonc has not been involved in the regular Republican organization for several years.

Fonte accused Zajonc of running because of "sour grapes" and attempting to relapse the April village elections which were swept by the Republicans. He said he hoped Zajonc would reconsider and withdraw from the committeeman race.

ZAJONC'S stand on supporting national, state and county Republicans but not local Republicans was also questioned by Fonte who said "You either support the Republican Party at all levels or you don't."

"I am a Republican and I hope to work to strengthen the Republican Party and weld it back together," said Zajonc, adding it was a long-standing custom until recently for the Republican Party to recommend Republicans run for local offices on an independent basis.

The split in the local Republican organization actually dates back to 1962, the last contested election for Palatine Township Republican Committeeman. Alexander MacArthur, the regular Republican organization candidate won the election against Max Kollin, who was considered a "young Turk" in trying to get more dynamic leadership for the party.

Under MacArthur's leadership the Republican Party started getting involved in the grass roots level of politics. First it was the 1965 Palatine-Township election which the GOPs swept by a 2 to 1 margin. Pedersen's election as township assessor was one of the major upsets in that election.

HAVING MADE inroads into the Palatine Township government, the Republicans next tried their hand at the 1967 Palatine village election. Again, a sweeping victory for the Republicans. Zajonc was first elected to the village board as a GOP candidate in the 1967 election.

In both elections the opposition party claimed to be campaigning not against the Republican Party but against the involvement of partisan politics at the local level.

Zajonc bolted the local Republican party in 1971 and refused its slating in 1971 when it refused to back fellow incumbent GOP trustees. The three incumbents formed the Village Independent Party and Zajonc was the high vote getter in the election. Zajonc has been aligned with the VIPs since the 1971 election and supported the VIPs in the 1973 village election which was swept by the Republicans.

ZAJONC DENIED charges of attempting to relapse the April election in Palatine.

"I have not been pressured by the VIPs to run. In fact, it is just the opposite. I am pressuring the VIPs to come forth and establish themselves as Republicans and stop hiding behind a bunch of names," said Zajonc. If elected to the committeeman post, Zajonc said he would resign from the village board.

Garbagemen's union OKs new three-year contract

Northwest suburban garbagemen yesterday ratified a contract with area scavenger companies that could boost their wages by more than 50 per cent in three years.

Members of Locals 703 and 731 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, voting by mail, accepted the new three-year contract by about a 2 to 1 margin, according to Frank Grady, a union official.

The effect of the new contract on homeowners who subscribe to garbage pickup is uncertain.

Grady said he is "very much" satisfied with the contract. "I don't think we could have got a better one," he said.

AL HOEKSTRA, executive director of the Chicago and Suburban Refuse Disposal Association, which represents Chicago area scavenger services, was unavailable for comment.

The contract was the second agreed upon by union and refuse association bargainers, with the aid of a federal mediator.

The earlier contract offer had been turned down by the garbagemen in a voice vote at a meeting Oct. 15.

That offer provided for a salary increase of 75 cents an hour the first year of the contract, then 50 cents an hour each of the next two years. The present salary is $5.05 an hour.

The contract offer that was accepted by the garbagemen contains the same wage schedule, but in addition, has a built-in cost-of-living increase each year.

BASED ON THE 5 to 6 per cent cost-of-living increase each of the last few years, the $5.05 hourly wage could jump to $7.70 within three years.

The contract is retroactive to Oct. 1. When the previous contract expired that day, some 75 garbagemen from Brown-Ferris Industries of Illinois Inc., Barrington, staged a one-day wildcat walk-out, leaving six Northwest suburbs without scavenger service.

Hillcrest Towers repairs continue

Structural repairs continue at Amcon's Hillcrest Towers, where construction was voluntarily halted Aug. 1 when cracks were discovered in the lower level of the 12-story building.

"The village has given permission for Amcon to complete the seventh floor in the south wing of the building to keep the weather out," explained Joseph Julian, building commissioner.

He said Amcon has hired a full-time mason inspector to work with their crews and the village to insure future work will progress according to consultants' recommendations.

Airport boosters to meet

Representatives of a women's pilot group and an experimental aircraft specialist will be featured speakers at Tuesday's meeting of Schaumburg Airport Boosters.

A spokesman for the Chicago Area Chapter Ninety-Nines, a women's aviation association and an officer of Chapter 101 of the Experimental Aircraft Association will start the program scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the main hangar at Schaumburg Airport, West Irving Park Road.

Boosters members include pilots and owners of aircraft based at Schaumburg Airport as well as student pilots, instructors and others interested in promoting general aviation.

For information contact Dave McPherson, president, at 894-8492, or Shirley Keime, secretary, 529-7256.

Four-car collision at Higgins-Meacham

A four-car collision at the Higgins and Meacham roads intersection in Schaumburg yesterday tied up evening traffic and wrecked three autos, but resulted in only minor injuries to drivers.

Schaumburg police ticketed Betty A. Ciolac, Rte. 1, Box 224, Schaumburg, for failure to yield while making a left turn. Police said Miss Ciolac's auto collided with one driven by Phyllis McGlynn, 427 Redwood St., Schaumburg. After the collision, the McGlynn auto and Ciolac auto each rebounded into other autos driven by David Jacobazzi, of 1415 Alleeville La., Schaumburg, and Scott Haverland, 24 E. Ardmore, Roselle.

All four cars sustained damages estimated at more than $100 apiece. The McGlynn, Ciolac and Haverland autos were towed from the scene. Police said the drivers received minor injuries but refused medical aid or treatment.

NURSERY SCHOOL IN THE FALL

At Reeling Farm the Canadian geese are preparing to go south and leave the white ducks alone to feed on the tidbits from the children. The woods were beautiful for the fall outlook, and the children have already had a pony ride or two. The hayrides are planned for the next week or so, but don't forget if your child misses something, it will all be repeated when the geese return.

Prospect Heights boundary proposal revised eastward

by TOM VON MALDER

Proposed Prospect Heights municipal boundaries have been extended east of Milwaukee Avenue in an effort to prepare the way for future expansion into rich commercial areas.

The new northeastern boundary was presented last night at a meeting of the Prospect Heights Improvement Association (PHIA). The meeting was called to give residents of the unincorporated Prospect Heights area a chance to offer changes to the proposed boundaries.

A court petition calling for the creation of the city of Prospect Heights is expected to be filed within the next several weeks.

Previously announced boundary plans had River Road as the eastern boundary. In the new plan, a Holiday Inn as well as some 60 acres of Cook County Forest Preserve land are included.

THE OBJECT of this extension eastward, according to PHIA members, is to make Prospect Heights contiguous (next to) commercial properties including Culligan Water Softener Co., A. C. Nielsen, Allstate Insurance Co., and Illinois Bell Telephone Co. The hope would be that these properties would eventually be added to Prospect Heights through annexation.

Richard Schulz, Prospect Heights resident and Olde Towne Sanitary District official, urged the PHIA boundary committee to consider including commercial land along both sides of Rand Road north as far as Palatine Road, and to include Culligan and Illinois Bell in the incorporation petition.

He suggested that several areas in the proposed boundaries be eliminated to permit inclusion of the commercial areas. Those he suggested dropping included 19 acres of the Rob Roy Golf Course, St. Alphonsus Church, an area northwest of the Country Garden subdivision, and the northern part of that part of Pal-Waukee Airport included in the original boundary proposal.

Schulz said Prospect Heights could benefit financially from added sales tax revenue, especially from Culligan's billing office. The PHIA has said they are not planning a municipal real estate tax initially.

The PHIA's boundary committee agreed to consider Schulz's suggestions and tentative plans were made to contact Culligan.

Last night's meeting was held largely because of a request by Schulz for such a hearing, PHIA president Jack Gilligan said.

THERE WAS A LIFTOFF yesterday of more than 200 balloons at Bond School in Mount Prospect. The balloons contained the names of children so that finders could call them to report how far they traveled. Beth Girard helps two students, Margaret Gaib and Adam Young, prepare the balloons for flight.

Crash fatal to youth, 17

A 17-year-old Arlington Heights youth was killed late Tuesday night when the car he was driving rammed into the rear of a cement truck on Algonquin Road near Goebbert Road.

Two passengers in the car remain hospitalized in fair condition at Northwest Community Hospital. A third passenger was treated at the hospital and released.

Dead is Kirk T. Kenning, 17, of 509 S. Reuter, a junior at Rolling Meadows High School. Police said his car struck the cement truck as it pulled away from a traffic light.

Sue Dombrick, 17, and Liane Neubert, 17, both of 736 Dempster St., Mount Prospect were admitted to the hospital with head injuries. They were listed in fair condition Wednesday afternoon.

Michael Robinson, 17, of 2317 Park St., Rolling Meadows, was thrown from the car upon impact. He was not seriously injured.

Driver of the cement truck, Wesley W. Hoegner, 43, of Chicago, told police he was just pulling away from a traffic light when the Kenning auto crashed into his truck. He told police he neither heard nor saw the car before the accident.

Carbona murder appeal advances

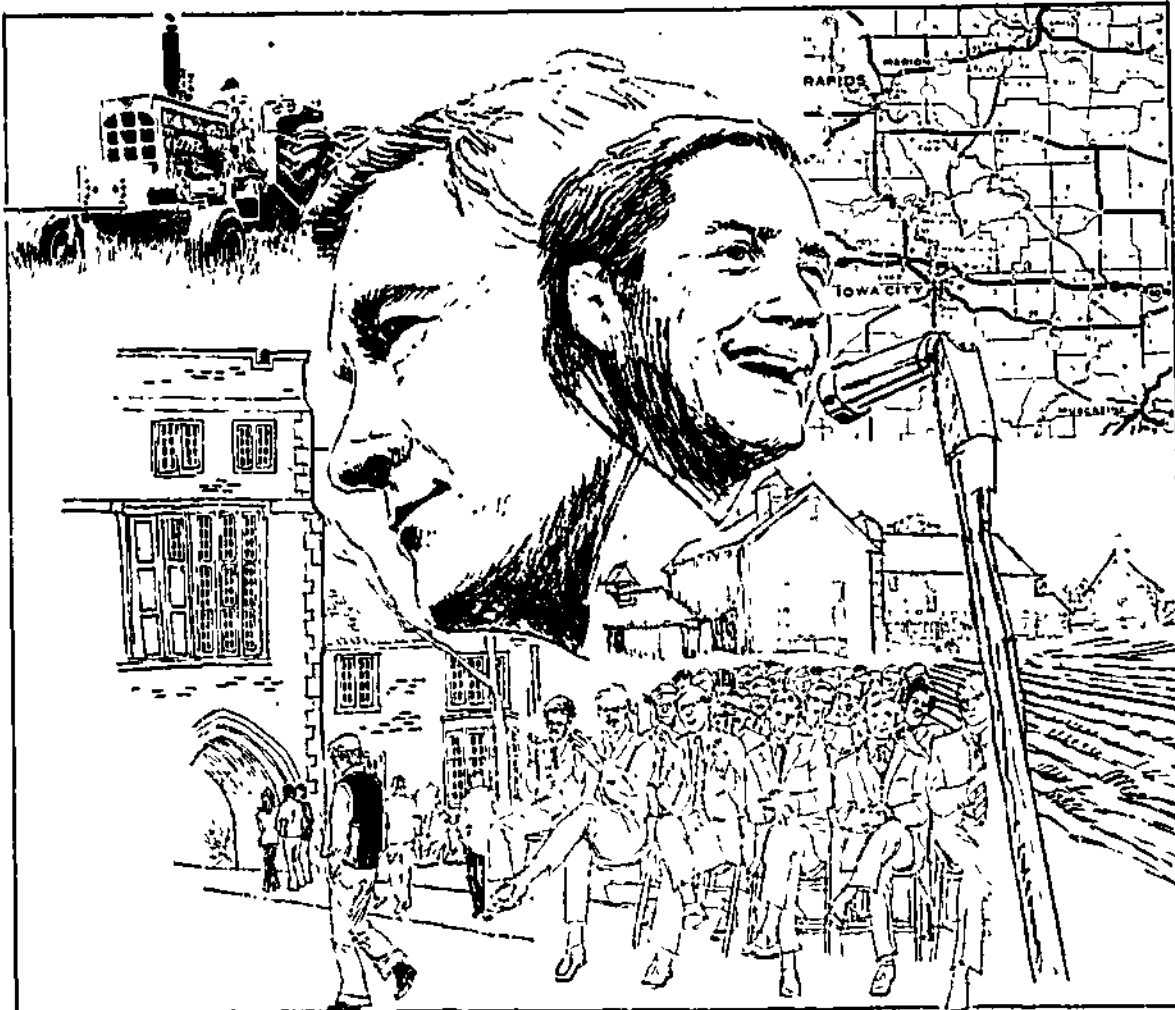

Ruth Carbona's appeal of her conviction for the murder of her husband, Joseph, has advanced one more step.

Attorneys have until Dec. 10 to file appellate briefs and abstracts to the Illinois Appellate Court. Written arguments were filed last month.

Mrs. Carbona, 30, of 1762 E. Euclid Ave., Mount Prospect, has been out of jail on $25,000 bond since July 27. She was found guilty May 9 of the Dec. 22, 1971, murder of her husband, a Cook County Sheriff's police lieutenant. Court testimony revealed the couple had been having an argument when the shooting occurred.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is a story of the mood of the Midwest and the way a presidential candidate is received in these times of scandal and disruption in national politics. It is a story of everyday people and how they feel about the times and how they feel about Charles Percy from Illinois, who is running for President three years before the election in the heartland of America, where presidential elections are won and lost.

by DOUG RAY

IOWA'S INTERSTATE 80 — If there is a middle American, he is a man like Big Larry Noble from Muscatine, Iowa, driver of this black Cadillac limousine cruising past the corn and soybean fields of the Midwest.

"Cool enough for you, Senator?" Big Larry glanced slightly to his right and behind him where the Senator was sitting with two reporters.

"Just perfect," Percy answered.

Big Larry smiled. He looked straight ahead across the steering wheel of the car while the air conditioner pumped recycled air over us. It was Thursday afternoon and it must have been near 80. Outside there was a trace of smog, but there never is in these parts. No Sears Tower or Hancock or tollways or brightened street corners lit up like Christmas trees.

This is the Midwest, home of the middle American, the silent majority — the home of the people who elect Presidents.

BIG LARRY grabs another Camel from the dashboard, lights it and takes a long, heavy draw. He doesn't say much, especially to strangers and even to get the basic information about the car and why he is driving, you have to wring it out of him.

It seems the car belongs to Larry's father-in-law who is in the sand and gravel business. And the last time one of the family's gas guzzlers hit the political trail — at least for presidential politics — was in 1964. Barry Goldwater was back there right where Chuck Percy now sits glancing through small note cards with his ankles crossed.

"It wasn't very good luck was it," Larry grinned. He has a hard mean look though he is friendly enough. Size him up and you can tell right off he is the kind of guy you don't talk back to unless you tip the scales at about 200 with most of your weight in the shoulders.

"What are the people like around here?" I asked him. "You know, the politics?"

"I'd say conservative Republican, most of them," he said shrugging.

In a few minutes the black limo would arrive at the Iowa campus. Big Larry pushed on, his brown cowboy boots with the pointed toes pressed firmly on the footpedal.

The state trooper in the lead car took a quick right onto another route and the caravan of Oldsmobiles and the limo responded in order. We moved up the highway through red traffic lights to keep the head and the tail together.

THIS WILL BE the second stop for the Percy party. We began the day before noon, in Moline, Ill., at the headquarters of John Deere and Co., the firm known for its green farm tractors. The Senator spoke to businessmen, mayors and presented Deere Chairman William Hewitt with an award for a movie the company made. We spent more than an hour there, ending when Percy jumped aboard a John Deere snowmobile for a ride across the massive company properties.

Now we are rolling again, toward Iowa City, in the spirit of a Cadillac whistlestop campaign. In the back seat, Percy is getting the third degree on everything from his friends in Washington to his physical fitness program and a stationary bicycle he uses to keep the pounds off.

Percy asked how much time before arrival. Just a few minutes. He cut off the interview as we approached the city limits. Last minute cramming before the speech. He would be lecturing children of the plains country, boys who had actually milked cows, rosy cheeked farmer's daughters, students from Des Moines, even Chicago and New York; all who somehow found themselves together on the campus of rolling hills and narrow streets with the sweet smell of Indian summer and a river that cuts the campus in two.

We got out of the car. Percy stayed inside, then emerged and walked briskly up the steps of the Iowa Memorial Union. "Hi, I'm Chuck Percy." He shook hands with the desk clerk and went upstairs for a press conference.

DOWN IN THE auditorium the students waited, about 800 of them. All the seats were taken and many kids stood in the back.

"Why are there so many people here today?" I asked a

Rovin' the presidential trails with Chuck Percy

petite red-haired girl who was passing out leaflets at the door. "Is this a convocation?" She looked at me quizzically; her eyebrows sagged. "Do they make these people come for college credit?"

She said no, that this is just the first in a series of guest speakers on campus, that yes there are more kids here than expected.

A senior, one of the campus Young Republicans who says after graduation he plans to work for the party, had a wide smile spread across his face. "I was afraid things wouldn't work out. . . I was a nervous wreck. In '71, McGovern got about 1,500 when he came here. Last year, Tower (Senator John Tower of Texas) got 200 people. . . this is what I call a great turnout," he said.

The kids were anxious. As Percy walked on stage, their attention went with him. He began his talk. It was on the Soviet-U.S. relations and he urged the Soviets to open up to the concept of free speech.

There is only one group upset with the Senator's appearance. And that is a limp effort by the Young Americans For Freedom who like Ronald Reagan better as a presidential candidate. They pasted bumper stickers on the walls, but most were torn down later by students leaving the union. There are only 50 YAF members on campus.

PERCY WENT ON: "We merely ask that the USSR live up to its own constitution which guarantees freedom of speech."

I walked outside. Not because the speech was uninteresting but because it is a beautiful day, too nice to stay indoors even to listen to the man who three years from now might have the presidential seal in front of him when he talks.

Sun splashes a shine over the school and students are carrying their jackets under their arms. Parked outside the union are pickup trucks. Across the street dozens of girls are battling a ball around with paddles. The black limousine in front is as out of place as the tall lean Iowa state trooper standing next to it.

Walking alone, between the athletic field and the union, is a girl dressed in blue jeans and sweater. She carries a tennis racket in one hand and a book entitled "Power Politics" in the other. She is small, bespectacled of the wire-rim variety.

She says her name is Patricia Zimmerman, 18, a freshman from Westchester, Ill., and that she is heading for the auditorium for the Percy speech, but a little behind schedule.

Right away she volunteers that she hates Richard Nixon. Who does she like? Really nobody, she said. Then why is she going to hear Percy? "Because he may capture the '76 nomination" was her answer.

PATRICIA ZIMMERMAN says she is rather typical of college kids today. She is concerned but no activist, functioning in sort of a transition period between what was and something else. An Allende rally a few days ago brought out the usual people you might find at that kind of thing. Even Patricia Zimmerman was there, but she wasn't impressed.

"It seemed like they were using an excuse to protest and it didn't work out," she said.

"So what are students in the heartland of America concerned about right now?"

"I'd say politics and the university," she said quickly.

There is this intramural athletic field and a day-care center that face destruction by a new road, and believe it or not the

Driver, 19, booked on 'reckless' charge

A teenager was arrested Tuesday by Mount Prospect police after he allegedly used a car to knock over garbage cans in the 600-block of N. Eastwood Avenue. Two companions were also booked.

Police said a routine patrol spotted the youths' car driving up on lawns and striking garbage cans at 609, 611, 613 and 615 N. Eastwood Ave. about 2 a.m.

The driver, Steven J. Thelander, 19, of 605 S. Edward St., Mount Prospect, was charged with criminal damage to property, reckless driving, damage to village property and leaving the roadway.

His two passengers James E. Powers, 18, of 297 S. Phelps, Arlington Heights, and Timothy L. Krebs, 18, of 123 S. Waverly Place, Mount Prospect, were each charged with disorderly conduct. All three will appear Dec. 5 in Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

'Disappearing dope' case

Mount Prospect police arrested a Schiller Park man for drug possession this week but ended up smarting themselves when the evidence "disappeared."

The 29-year-old man was arrested at 4:21 a.m. Monday in the 200-block of Main Street, after police responded to a call of an altercation in progress. At that time, police said, a quantity of marijuana was found on the man.

After the man was booked at the station and released on bond, police said he was let go. But five minutes after the man left the station, police said the marijuana, which had been placed in an evidence envelope, had disappeared.

Watch out, bikers!

Two Mount Prospect youths were the victims of an angry driver Tuesday.

The youths were bicycling on Euclid Avenue in the 1700 block about 7 p.m. Tuesday when a car came up behind them, honked and almost struck one of the two bikes. The youth who was almost hit ended up in a ditch and his companion asked if he was alright.

The driver apparently thought the boy was saying something to him, police said, because he got out of his car and asked the youth to repeat what he said. Apparently not satisfied with the answer he got, the driver then allegedly hit the boy in the face and threw his bike into the ditch where the other boy was. He then drove off.

Police said there was about $100 worth of damage done to the two bikes. They are investigating the car's ownership.

Two nabbed at Ward's store

Two Milwaukee women were arrested Monday by Mount Prospect police after they allegedly tried to steal two coats from Montgomery Ward's in the Randhurst Shopping Center.

Arrested on theft charges were Sheila K. Johnson, 33, and Diane McShann, 27, both of whom allegedly stuck a coat under her own clothing and then left the store without paying for the coats. The coats were valued at $204 together.

The women are scheduled to appear Dec. 7 in Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court. A male companion from Racine, Wis., was not charged by police.

Local man arrested at Randhurst

Garry R. Ball, 21, of 6 S. Louis St., Mount Prospect, was arrested this week by police after he allegedly drove through four stop signs while speeding in the Randhurst Shopping Center area, said police.

Mount Prospect police said Ball was charged with disobeying stop signs, damage to village property, reckless driving, speeding and leaving the roadway. Police said Ball was first spotted about 3 a.m. Sunday driving through the Randhurst lot. He was stopped when he ended up on the lawn at 303 N. William St., striking two trees, one head-on.

Ball will appear Dec. 12 in Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court. Police did not release the arrest until Wednesday.

Midnight auto parts

Someone must have needed the parts.

Mount Prospect police said yesterday that thieves stole the transmission and drive shaft from a 1970 Ford and the drive shaft from a Viking Packing Co. truck sometime Monday night.

The Ford was owned by Richard Lopez, 2 S. William St., and had been parked in his driveway. The truck was being used by Joe Phillips, who had it parked outside his parents' house, 1825 Silka Ln. Lopez' loss is placed at $500, Phillips' at $100.

Three schools burglarized

Three Mount Prospect School Dist. 57 buildings were burglarized and vandalized last weekend.

Mount Prospect police said a $14 portable radio was taken from the basement of the district's administration building, 701 W. Gregory St., after a basement window had been smashed in. Paint was sprayed on the rear windows of the building.

Windows were broken inside and outside at Lincoln Junior High School, 700 W. Lincoln, sometime after 2:30 p.m. Sunday, police said. In all, 10 windows were broken, causing an estimated $300 damage.

Inside windows were also broken at Fairview School, 300 N. Fairview Ave. A fire extinguisher was used to spray the school's main hallway too. Profane language was spray-painted on other windows.

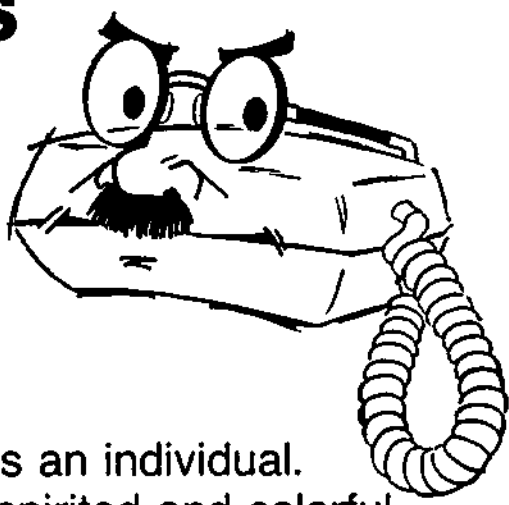

Sentence woman for theft

A Minnesota woman has been sentenced to 30 days in the Cook County House of Corrections, after she was found guilty last week in Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Court of theft.

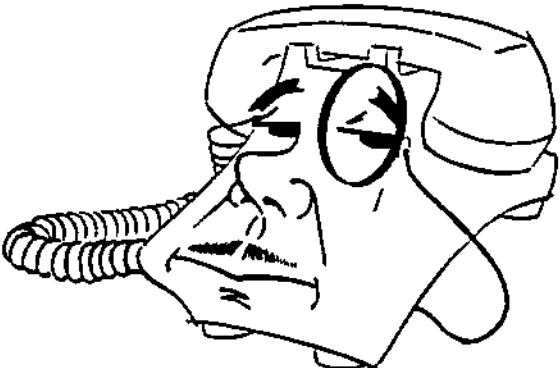

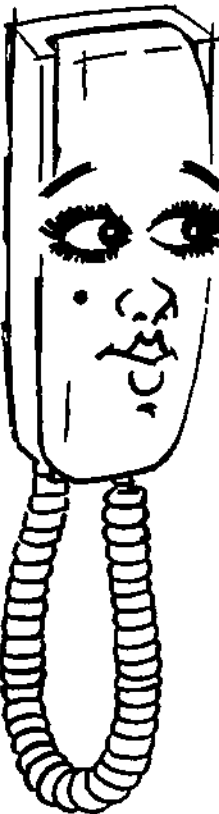

Nancy Jensen, 35, was accused of stealing a purse and credit cards at Mount Prospect Holiday Inn in July, 1972. Prior to Friday, Miss Jensen had failed to appear in court four times and warrants had been issued for her arrest each time.

The stolen credit cards were used at hotels and gas stations in a three-state area.

Eisenhower PTA donates equipment

The Eisenhower School PTA, Dist. 23, Prospect Heights, recently donated more than $800 in playground equipment to the school.

The equipment is the first play apparatus to be installed. It includes a large slide, muscle coordinator and balance beam. The PTA also paid for the installation of a jungle gym that was donated to the school earlier by the PHIA.

Milwaukee Avenue widening plans set

Plans are being made to widen Milwaukee Avenue at Hinz Road in unincorporated Wheeling Township.

The Illinois Department of Transportation this week opened bids on a project to construct turn lanes on Milwaukee, which is currently four lanes.

Low bid was submitted by Milburn Bros. Inc., Mount Prospect, for $184,000. The contract is expected to be awarded in three to four weeks, with the job slated to be completed in 30 working days. The tab will be picked up by the state transportation department.

Woman tells of assault 26 hours later

A 32-year-old Wheeling woman motorist was assaulted this week on Kensington Road near the Soo Line R.R. tracks in Mount Prospect.

Police said the woman, whose identity is being withheld because of threats made by the assailant, had become lost about 8 p.m. Sunday when looking for Camp McDonald Road.

The woman was westbound on Kensington Road at the railroad tracks when she saw a vehicle behind her with "flashing amber lights on the dash." She told police that as a relatively new Illinois resident she thought the light meant it was an undercover police vehicle.

POLICE SAID the woman stopped and then got out of her car when requested by the man who left the vehicle with the flashing lights. The man wore no uniform the woman told police.

Once out of her car, the man allegedly grabbed the woman by the left arm, twisted it and made lewd comments. Police said the woman kicked him, causing the man to take out a sharp object which he then placed at her throat. The woman could not say for certain whether it was a knife.

At this point, police said the woman's dog, which had been in the car, managed to get out and began barking and running around. The man, allegedly pushed the woman away, cutting her on the neck and arm. He then fled.

The man, according to police, is white, about 40 years old, 6 foot tall, 175 pounds and of medium build.

Police said the woman waited 26 hours before reporting the incident because she said she was initially unsure where it had happened.

Retail businesses leaving central district

Downtown may be office, financial center: Chamber

by KURT BAER

Businesses leaving downtown Arlington Heights could be pointing the way to redevelopment of the central business district.

Crash fatal to youth, 17

A 17-year-old Arlington Heights youth was killed late Tuesday night when the car he was driving rammed into the rear of a cement truck on Algonquin Road near Goebbert Road.

Two passengers in the car remain hospitalized in fair condition at Northwest Community Hospital. A third passenger was treated at the hospital and released.

Dead is Kirk T. Kenning, 17, of 509 S. Reuter, a junior at Rolling Meadows High School. Police said his car struck the cement truck as it pulled away from a traffic light.

Sue Dominick, 17, and Liane Neubert, 17, both of 736 Dempster St., Mount Prospect were admitted to the hospital with head injuries. They were listed in fair condition Wednesday afternoon.

Michael Robinson, 17, of 2317 Park St., Rolling Meadows, was thrown from the car upon impact. He was not seriously injured.

trict as an area office and financial center.

The director of the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce said recently that more businesses have left downtown in the past three months than at any other time in the 2½ years he has been in the village.

Three of the businesses to close recently were small and a fourth was wiped out by fire. But a local bank executive has predicted that other retail stores will continue to move to outlying shopping center locations.

Fifteen- and 20-story office buildings, not new retail shops, are the wave of the future downtown, according to Bruce Dodds, cashier and vice president of the First Arlington National Bank.

THE FIRST step to realizing not only redevelopment but a transformation of the type of downtown in Arlington Heights is the building of parking garages on the periphery of the CBD. Dodds told a recent meeting of the public health and safety committee.

He said yesterday that he was "heartened" to learn that a parking garage has been included in the village's five-year capital improvements plan.

The proposed plan calls for the construction of a public parking garage on land already owned by the village on Vall Avenue between Campbell and Sigwalt streets.

With the exception of a few specialty shops, which Dodds said would probably tend to be "exclusive and rather expensive," retail businesses will continue to move to locations outside the CBD, he said.

"That is where the needs are really met. Drive along Golf Road and it's just shopping center after shopping center. You can't drive a mile without a new and bigger and better shopping center," he said.

IT IS NOT inconceivable, according to Dodds, that within 10 years there could be several 15- or 20-story buildings downtown, housing corporate offices of major businesses such as insurance companies, banks and brokerage houses.

Retail stores could be located on the first floor of the office buildings and in other, smaller buildings downtown, according to Dodds.

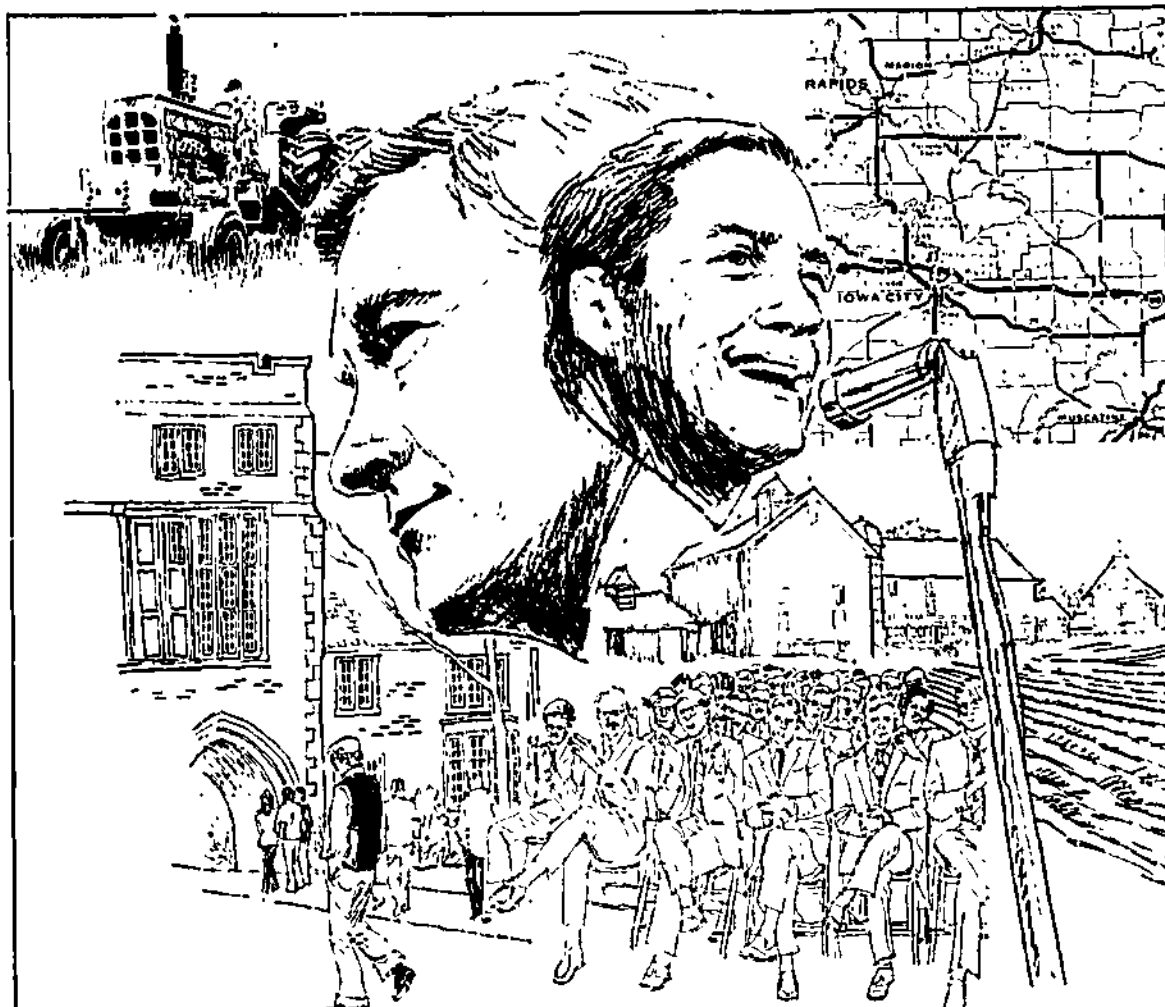

Once the garages are built, one-way streets and a general ban on parking downtown, may be desirable, he said.

"Let people do what they do at Woodfield or Randhurst and walk into the CBD," he said, adding that parking problems and the failure of some downtown merchants to aggressively promote their business were the real problems downtown today.

EARL JOHNSON, director of the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce, said some businesses downtown are very successful, while others that are having trouble might find it difficult to stay in business anywhere.

"We have probably experienced in the last three months more closings (downtown) than at any other time in the two and a half years I've been here," Johnson said. He cited the recent closings of two record stores, a health food store and a hardware store downtown.

This is the Midwest, home of the middle American, the silent majority — the home of the people who elect Presidents.

BIG LARRY grabs another Camel from the dashboard, lights it and takes a long, heavy draw. He doesn't say much, especially to strangers and even to get the basic information about the car and why he is driving, you have to wring it out of him.

It seems the car belongs to Larry's father-in-law who is in the sand and gravel business. And the last time one of the family's gas guzzlers hit the political trail — at least for presidential politics — was in 1964. Barry Goldwater was back there right where Chuck Percy now sits glancing through small note cards with his ankles crossed.

"It wasn't very good luck was it," Larry grinned. He has a hard mean look though he is friendly enough. Size him up and you can tell right off he is the kind of guy you don't talk back to unless you tip the scales at about 200 with most of your weight in the shoulders.

"What are the people like around here?" I asked him. "You know, the politics?"

"I'd say conservative Republican, most of them," he said shrugging.

In a few minutes the black limo would arrive at the Iowa campus. Big Larry pushed on, his brown cowboy boots with the pointed toes pressed firmly on the footleed.

The state trooper in the lead car took a quick right onto another route and the caravan of Oldsmobiles and the limo responded in order. We moved up the highway through red traffic lights to keep the head and the tail together.

THIS WILL BE the second stop for the Percy party. We began the day before noon, in Moline, Ill., at the headquarters of John Deere and Co., the firm known for its green farm tractors. The Senator spoke to businessmen, mayors and presented Deere Chairman William Hewitt with an award for a movie the company made. We spent more than an hour there, ending when Percy jumped aboard a John Deere snowmobile for a ride across the massive company properties.

Now we are rolling again, toward Iowa City, in the spirit of a Cadillac whistlestop campaign. In the back seat, Percy is getting the third degree on everything from his friends in Washington to his physical fitness program and a stationary bicycle he uses to keep the pounds off.

Percy asked how much time before arrival. Just a few minutes. He cut off the interview as we approached the city limits. Last minute cramming before the speech. He would be lecturing children of the plains country, boys who had actually milked cows, rosy cheeked farmer's daughters, students from Des Moines, even Chicago and New York; all who somehow found themselves together on the campus of rolling hills and narrow streets with the sweet smell of Indian summer and a river that cuts the campus in two.

We got out of the car. Percy stayed inside, then emerged and walked briskly up the steps of the Iowa Memorial Union. "Hi, I'm Chuck Percy." He shook hands with the desk clerk and went upstairs for a press conference.

DOWN IN THE auditorium the students waited, about 800 of them. All the seats were taken and many kids stood in the back.

"Why are there so many people here today?" I asked a

Rovin' the presidential trails with Chuck Percy

petite red-haired girl who was passing out leaflets at the door. "Is this a convocation?" She looked at me quizzically; her eyebrows sagged. "Do they make these people come for college credit?"

She said no, that this is just the first in a series of guest speakers on campus, that yes there are more kids here than expected.

A senior, one of the campus Young Republicans who says after graduation he plans to work for the party, had a wide smile spread across his face. "I was afraid things wouldn't work out . . . I was a nervous wreck. In '71, McGovern got about 1,500 when he came here. Last year, Tower (Senator John Tower of Texas) got 200 people . . . this is what I call a great turnout," he said.

The kids were anxious. As Percy walked on stage, their attention went with him. He began his talk. It was on the Soviet-U.S. relations and he urged the Soviets to open up to the concept of free speech.

There is only one group upset with the Senator's appearance. And that is a limp effort by the Young Americans For Freedom who like Ronald Reagan better as a presidential candidate. They pasted bumper stickers on the walls, but most were torn down later by students leaving the union. There are only 50 YAF members on campus.

PERCY WENT ON. "We merely ask that the USSR live up to its own constitution which guarantees freedom of speech."

I walked outside. Not because the speech was uninteresting but because it is a beautiful day, too nice to stay indoors even to listen to the man who three years from now might have the presidential seal in front of him when he talks.

Sun splashes a shine over the school and students are carrying their jackets under their arms. Parked outside the union are pickup trucks. Across the street dozens of girls are batting a ball around with paddles. The black limousine in front is as out of place as the tall lean Iowa state trooper standing next to it.

Walking alone, between the athletic field and the union, is a girl dressed in blue jeans and sweater. She carries a tennis racket in one hand and a book entitled "Power Politics" in the other. She is small, bespectacled of the wire-rim variety.

She says her name is Patricia Zimmerman, 18, a freshman from Westchester, Ill., and that she is heading for the auditorium for the Percy speech, but a little behind schedule.

Right away she volunteers that she hates Richard Nixon. Who does she like? Really nobody, she said. Then why is she going to hear Percy? "Because he may capture the '76 nomination" was her answer.

PATRICIA ZIMMERMAN says she is rather typical of college kids today. She is concerned but no activist, functioning in sort of a transition period between what was and something else. An Allende rally a few days ago brought out the usual people you might find at that kind of thing. Even Patricia Zimmerman was there, but she wasn't impressed.

"It seemed like they were using an excuse to protest and it didn't work out," she said.

"So what are students in the heartland of America concerned about right now?"

"I'd say politics and the university," she said quickly. There is this intramural athletic field and a day-care center that face destruction by a new road, and believe it or not the

Goblins vs. the village task force

by JOE SWICKARD

Halloween morning came properly overcast and drizzling. Beggars' Night had passed, and all the outhouses in Arlington Heights remained upright.

The era of mischievous scamps pulling pranks and committing good-natured assaults on the neighborhood is gone. A gate tossed into a tree might be construed as criminal damage to private property. And does soaping a window equal malicious mischief? Tip over an outdoor and the Environmental Control Commission would probably have the kids playing rock hockey at Stateville.

Arlington Heights was prepared for the worst Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Besides the regular police patrols, the village Civil Defense workers and the auxiliary police were on the prowl for local poltergeists. They called it The Goblin Patrol.

Village Community Relations Officer George Weinand said of the patrol. "It's serving two purposes. The first is a visual deterrent to vandalism. And you know how bad it's gotten this year. The second is to test the Civil Defense and auxiliary police communications network. If a real emergency came up, we'd like to know that it's working all right."

THE GOBLIN PATROL met at 1800 hours (8 p.m.) in the police classroom at the village hall. Police Capt. Maurice English quickly called the roll and got right down to business.

Pointing to a village map, he outlined the six sectors of patrol. Schools and parks were keynoted as likely hot spots. Radio designations and call numbers were assigned. Malevolent spirits never stood a chance.

Capt. English gave final instructions to the men of the Goblin Patrol. "Remember, stay in your cars, don't chase anybody and don't get hurt. If you see trouble call for a regular (police patrol). Use your common sense. You don't need a back-up for some kids throwing toilet paper around a house."

JERRY DHONT, village zoning inspector by day, explained the role of the auxiliary police.

"We're all volunteers trying to help the police. We go through training about the law, weapons and self defense. The gung-ho guy that gets a charge out of carrying a badge and gun is not the one we're looking for. We're people who want to aid the police," Dhont said.

The auxiliary police help direct traffic on special occasions and ride as the second man in the squad car one weekend a month. "We're there to back him up. We follow the orders of the man in blue," he said.

The Civil Defense workers stand ready to aid the village in times of disaster, such as a tornado, or an airliner crash.

DHONT AND WEINAND plus an observer rolled out of the municipal parking lot in the CD jeep. Two radios, police patrol and the goblin watchers, chattered in the drafty cab.

Their sector was the village south of Central Road. Potential hot spots were a high school, two elementary schools and two parks.

The night was quiet — surprisingly so. Only two trick-or-treaters were seen by this part of the patrol during the entire (Continued on page 5)

Arlington Park seeking 120-day racing season

Arlington Park Race Track officials yesterday asked the Illinois Racing Board to approve horse racing at Arlington Park next year from May 20 through Oct. 5.

Arlington Park routinely requests most, if not all, of the thoroughbred racing days permitted by Illinois law. But the application is in no way binding upon the racing board.

Public hearings on 1974 racing dates open in Springfield Nov. 27. After the board hears from all racing associations competing for a limited number of dates, it announces the yearly schedule.

In requesting 120 racing dates — 60 days for Arlington and 60 days for Washington Park — track officials are seeking to avoid the early spring dates they were assigned this year, when Arlington opened April 14 and closed July 24.

In addition to the regular racing dates, Arlington Park could be assigned any of 12 charity days. Six days have been requested by the Chicago Heart Association at either Arlington or Hawthorne race tracks, and six days are being sought by the Horseman's Benevolent Protection Association.

This year's application by Arlington Park could be affected by a report now being prepared by a village task force on backstretch housing conditions. If the village board decides to forward the task force findings to the racing board.

Both betting and attendance were down at Arlington Park this year, compared with the 1972 season. Track officials have blamed the spring starting dates and general uncertainty over the 1972 schedule for the declines.

Members vote 2-1 to accept

Garbagemen's union OKs new three-year contract

Northwest suburban garbagemen yesterday ratified a contract with area scavenger companies that could boost their wages by more than 50 per cent in three years.

Members of Locals 703 and 731 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, voting by mail, accepted the new three-year contract by about a 2 to 1 margin, according to Frank Grady, a union official.

The effect of the new contract on homeowners who subscribe to garbage pickup is uncertain.

Grady said he is "very much" satisfied with the contract. "I don't think we could have got a better one," he said.

AL HIOEKSTRA, executive director of the Chicago and Suburban Refuse Disposal Association, which represents Chicago area scavenger services, was unavailable for comment.

The contract was the second agreed upon by union and refuse association bargainers, with the aid of a federal mediator.

The earlier contract offer had been turned down by the garbagemen in a voice vote at a meeting Oct. 15.

That offer provided for a salary increase of 75 cents an hour the first year of the contract, then 50 cents an hour each of the next two years. The present salary is $3.05 an hour.

The contract offer that was accepted by the garbagemen contains the same wage schedule, but in addition, has a built-in cost-of-living increase each year.

BASED ON THE 5 to 6 per cent cost-of-living increase each of the last few years, the $3.05 hourly wage could jump to $7.70 within three years.

The contract is retroactive to Oct. 1. When the previous contract expired that day, some 75 garbagemen from Browning-Ferris Industries of Illinois Inc., Barrington, staged a one-day wildcat walk-out, leaving six Northwest suburbs without scavenger service.

David Paige, general manager of Browning-Ferris, yesterday refused to comment on the new contract settlement or its effect on scavenger rates.

Ethel Kolerus named to state township unit

Ethel Kolerus, Wheeling Township supervisor, last week was elected to the state board of township officials at the Township Officials of Illinois convention in Peoria.

The board's prime function is to serve as a parent board that oversees functions of local townships. Members of the board also watch for state legislature concerning townships.

Mother charged in beating of daughter, 3

A 3-year-old Hoffman Estates girl suffered a skull fracture and severe cuts yesterday morning, allegedly inflicted by her mother.

Amy Erickson was in fair condition at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, last night.

Mrs. Ellen Erickson, 32, of 2100 Hassell Rd., was being held yesterday by Cook County authorities for psychiatric examination after she was charged by Hoffman Estates police with aggravated battery and child neglect. The child also had razor cuts on both forearms.

After the incident Mrs. Erickson called Jerry Lipsch, a Hoffman Estates Youth Outreach worker who has been counselling her.

Schools hope for blanket newsletter by December

A newsletter in every mailbox... that's what the Arlington Heights Elementary School Dist. 25 is striving to achieve, hopefully by December.

The newsletter will be an attempt to improve communication between the taxpayer and the district, school officials said.

The district is planning to publish a periodical newsletter that will include information on how it spends its tax revenue, the new state-aid formula and staff personnel.

Later in the year, the publication will feature student curriculum, activities and other happenings that may occur during the year.

The newsletter will be distributed to every household in the district. Joan Klusmann, board member, has been appointed coordinator of the newsletter. She will work with Donald Monroe, director of administering and planning and other district officials.

COST OF producing the newsletter will be kept low, said Monroe, who added that the district will use its own printing equipment. The newsletter will be on one sheet, printed on both sides.

Prior to a referendum in the spring of 1971, the district had published newsletters to the public. But because the referendum was defeated and funds were limited, the newsletter was discontinued.

In another effort of bettering community relationships, the school board has sent out questionnaires and letters to parents of students in the district.

Parents are asked to indicate if they are interested in attending informative seminars on the topics of their choice.

"We want to supplement in every way we can," said Richard Schlott, board president.

The sessions will be headed by school board members, teachers and administrators who also will answer questions parents may have.

Three blood donor dates in November

Three blood donation dates have been scheduled during November as part of Arlington Heights' 4 per cent blood assurance program.

The mobile blood unit will be set up from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday, at St. James Catholic Church, 841 N. Arlington Heights Rd.

Other dates are 9 a.m. to noon Nov. 17, at First United Methodist Church, 1803 E. Euclid Ave. and from 3:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m., Nov. 30, at Rand Junior High School, 2550 N. Arlington Heights Rd.

Persons interested in giving to the blood program can make an appointment by calling the Village of Arlington Heights at 253-2340, ext. 245.

four hours. An open garage door at Forest View High School was closed and locked by Dhont.

THE RADIO reported some fiend was breaking pumpkins on the north end of town and part of a man's fence was discovered in the street. The Arlington Heights apparitions were keeping a low profile.

Weinand and Dhont's major excitement came at the end of their patrol. They were cruising Arlington Heights Road when the jeep's throttle stopped functioning. They crept back to the police station, by way of side streets, at a sedate 10 m.p.h.

The debriefing in Capt. English's office reached the consensus that the evening was exceptionally quiet and the radio as good as it was and there's no way in the world we can fight Woodfield. From the day it opened up two years ago, the business has dropped and I don't think we're ever going to recover it in the classical sense," he said.

Although the village board has made no commitment to build a public parking garage, the facility has been recommended by the village administration and included in the draft of the 1974-79 capital improvements budget.

According to the budget plan, the garage would be built with revenue bonds paid for by parking fees. The estimated cost of a 300-car structure is $1.3 million.

LAST SPRING, the village board authorized the $110,000 purchase of property on Vail Avenue for parking purposes. The land is being paid for over a 10-year period.

RAIN OR SHINE, Wilson School students, decked out in their costumes, participated in the annual Halloween parade yesterday through the building and around the school grounds. After the parade the children were treated to an afternoon of plays and parties.

Apartment building woes rapped by Vista homeowners

The pitfalls of multi-family development in unincorporated Cook County were among the topics discussed at a recent Mayor's Round Table meeting with residents of the Arlington Vista subdivision.

Homeowners in the subdivision are opposed to the proposed Meister-Nelberg development, Ivy Hill Village, planned for a 49-acre site west of Windsor Drive and south of the Edison right-of-way.

A spokesman for the Arlington Vista Homeowners Association, Bruce Ferguson, said residents also are concerned about the future development of the open areas around their subdivision.

Vacant sites include the Meister-Nelberg property, the land owned by Mayo Clinic at Schoenbeck and Palatine roads, and flood plain along McDonald Creek.

Trustees at the meeting explained the process of property development and some of the particular problems associated with unincorporated apartment projects, said Ferguson, a past president of the homeowners association. Traffic along Windsor Drive, destined to increase as new housing is built north of Arlington Vista in Wheeling and Buffalo Grove, was also discussed at the Round Table session.

There are 200 homes in Arlington Vista, ranging in age from 8 to 15 years old.

Dodds said that since the concept of a downtown parking garage appears to have been accepted by village officials, the project should be assigned high priority.

Once parking is available, it will be the responsibility of business and community leaders to promote downtown Arlington Heights as an office center for companies seeking to relocate, he said.

The fact that Arlington Heights is serviced by the Chicago and North Western Ry., and can be reached by any of several major highways including the Northwest Tollway, are ideal conditions for office and financial center development, Dodds said.

Friendship outing slated

The Friendship Club of St. James Church, Arlington Heights, will sponsor a trip to Sara Lee Kitchens in Deerfield on Nov. 6. Following the trip, there will be a luncheon at the Country Squire Restaurant, Grayslake.

Persons interested in attending should meet for the bus at 9 a.m. in back of the parish center at 841 N. Arlington Heights Rd. Please be on time.

The next regular meeting is scheduled for Nov. 20 at the convent meeting hall. The Friendship Club is comprised of men and women 50 years old or older.

School 'barn sale' nets district $900

The Arlington Heights Elementary School Dist. 25 netted $900 in its "barn sale" at Wilson School last weekend.

More than 700 used student desks and other student furniture and office equipment were on sale. The desks were sold for $2 to $4 each.

People interested in these items waited at the door as early as 8 a.m., said James Monroe, director of building grounds and auxiliary services. The sale began at 10 a.m.

"Five people were there and they could hardly handle the crowd," said Monroe, who has determined the sale "successful."

However, the crowd began to disappear before noon when it had started to rain, he said.

Proceeds from the sale go to buy new tables and other student furniture.

$700 cash burglary

Arlington Heights police are investigating a $700 cash burglary Monday at the home of Erwin Stueber, 1427 W. St. James Pl.

According to police reports, the burglars entered through a rear door. The cash was taken from a bedroom, police said. Police said nothing else in the house was disturbed.

Two to attend conference

Two Arlington Heights residents will participate in the Conference on the Provision of Intellectual Resources to be held Nov. 7 through 10 at McCormick Inn, Chicago.

Richard Frisbie, 631 N. Dunton, and Mrs. Nicholas R. Shuman, 1001 W. Clarendon Rd. will attend the conference sponsored by the Northern Illinois Library system under the auspices of the Illinois State Library Advisory Committee.

The purpose of the conference is to discuss the problems citizens have in obtaining books, magazines, newspapers, audio-visual materials and other resource materials.

Frisbie is a communications consultant, author, and president of the Arlington Heights Memorial Library Board of Directors. Mrs. Schuman is public relations director for Chicago area UNICEF.

Miss Teen-age finalist

Mary Jenkins, 16, of Arlington Heights, is among 33 finalists for the Miss Teen-age America contest.

Five of the 33 girls will be selected to travel to Fort Worth, Tex. Nov. 17 through 23 for the televised pageant.

A junior at Rolling Meadows High School, Mary is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Jenkins, 607 S. Walnut.

Pizza firm vanishes

Criston Food Service, a firm named in a recall of pizzas by the Food and Drug Administration, is apparently no longer an Elk Grove Village company.

The FDA announcement gave the company's address as 261 King St., Elk Grove Village. The building at that address is now occupied by Food Specialists Inc.

A spokesman for Food Specialists said the firm is not involved in making pizzas and has been at the King Street address for over a year.

An old phone number listed for Criston at 261 King st. is disconnected and no new number is listed for the company.

A spokesman for the FDA said Criston was associated with Mainline Food Service, a Roselle firm. Mainline did not answer any phone calls yesterday.

Sod theft reported

Thieves in Arlington Heights will apparently steal anything not nailed down, as John E. Calkins, of 503 W. Britany can assert.

According to police, Calkins reported some one stole four yards of sod from his parkway Monday night.

The missing lawn was later discovered in a neighbor's yard, police said.
